

Training Little Children

By Mrs. Ruth Peppner Swaine

The child is a primitive little being. His desires are near the surface, and primarily very selfish. He wants all things for his own. He must also be first in everything, and if he is the biggest force in the play group, what more natural than that he should try to make everything conform to his wishes? But this child, if once actuated by the right, becomes the most generous, the most considerate and the gentlest of little fellows. A few words, a firm but kind insistence on your part, and he knows the pleasure of giving up for others.

All children have their difficulties with one another, and sometimes, if one judges by the noise in the back yard, they are very big ones.

A moment's wait will usually show whether it is wise to run and help the children readjust their little world. Do this only when necessary. Hold your breath behind the door, and see if happily they are not righting the situation themselves. Even the physical hurts need much less sympathy than the average mother is apt to bestow. Would we coddle our children into becoming physical cowards? From earliest babyhood, begin to turn their attention when hurt to some new interest, and observe how quickly the pain is forgotten.

A strong conviction has grown out of the passing years of my motherhood that the greatest service a mother can do her child is to teach him self-reliance. If you begin with the baby, the habit forms easily and before you know it self-reliance has really become a habit with him. Hold yourself free from fear as he tries out his growing powers. Watch alertly, but wait. Let him try the reach that may topple him over, but secures for him the bright ball. Let him make all the moves he wants to, and if necessary, be there to catch him as he falls. Hesitate before you turn a child deliberately away from the thing he has set his heart on doing. Strong initiative is too glorious a characteristic to nip in the bud. Try for one day to stop and think before you deprive your child of the pleasure of simple achievement.

There are countless little tasks a child can do for himself to help mother. Each mother will think of many of these in the course of a day. Remember that in the child's world of new impressions the most trite acts to us are, to him, the most delightful of plays.

Play is the vital employment of childhood. The art of playing alone, being friends with himself, is a foundation for self-reliance in greater things later in life. A child cannot be more than contented. So hesitate, dear mother, to interfere when your child is quietly employing himself in his own chosen way, even if it is only baby with his toes. Let the spell last as long as it will; the next will last longer. Soon your child of three will play hours by himself. The busy mother often needs this respite.

Hen Likely to Lead Weaker Chicks Astray

Release from the nest means freedom and liberty to the mother hen, and she is likely to take her young brood far afield on a grasshopper or insect hunt. Often the grass is wet and the showerbath which the youngsters receive in journeying through the grass is likely to chill them so that they get sick and die, especially in the case of the weaker chicks. Hence, it is necessary to coop the hen in order to prevent her from taking such hikes with her flocks.

Any style of coop which provides plenty of space, dry ventilated quarters, and which affords protection against rats and other vermin in addition to facilities for closing the house at night, is satisfactory. The old-fashioned A-shaped coop with a wooden floor and slatted sides, is a pioneering model which is commonplace among most farm poultry equipment. The box type of coop, has also stood the test of time, and is to be found on farms the country over. In all these coops it is essential to provide facilities so the chicks can leave and enter as they desire. In some instances a small sheltered yard is used as a supplement to the coop proper, so that the hen may turn about and get a little exercise. The fence around this yard should be high enough so that the chicks can run in and out, but low enough so as to cut off exit for the hen. By using a coop of this description the chicks can find shelter and warmth under the hen at any time, while the weaklings, after a few days, may develop into strong, healthy birds.

Make Coop of Cheap Material
The detention coop for the hen may be made of waste lumber or of good boards. It should provide plenty of ventilation and should be built over a removable floor which should fit tightly under the sides of the coop, so as to keep it tight and dry. This floor facilitates the efficient and easy cleaning of the coop. The practical coop has a door covered with 1-2 in. wire netting which slides in back of the slatted front when it is desired to close the coop, while it is pushed back of the closed part of the front when the coop is opened. Holes in both ends of the coop, which are also covered with wire, supply additional ventilation. The middle slat in the door is readily removable, sliding into a square wire staple at the top and dropping into a half joint at the bottom. The slats are made of strips one inch square. For ventilation purposes, except when the weather is cold or during cold nights, the long, narrow door at the front of the coop is kept open. This coop is 30 inches long, 26 1-2 inches high at the front, and 18 inches at the rear. The floor is removable, and in every respect this coop, which is a little more elaborate, perhaps, than the hen shelter many farmers now use, is practical for the confinement of the hens until the chicks are old enough to go to distant parts of the range under the chaperonage of their mother.

GIRLS! YOU CAN LIFT THEM OFF

Doesn't hurt a bit to lift your sore, touchy corns right out

A noted Cincinnati authority discovered a new ether compound called it freezone and a quarter ounce of it now can be had for a few cents at any drug store.

You simply apply a few drops of this magic freezone upon a tender corn, or painful callus and instantly the soreness disappears, then shortly you will find the corn or callus so loose that you can lift it off with the fingers.

You feel no pain, not a particle of soreness, either when applying freezone or afterwards, and it doesn't even irritate the skin.

Hard corns, soft corns or corns between the toes, also toughened calluses, just shrivel up and lift off so easy. It is wonderful! It works like a charm. Try it!

Women should keep it on their dressers and never let a corn ache twice.

NOTICE OF LEASING OF SCHOOL AND STATE LANDS
The school and state lands in Williams County, North Dakota, not already leased, will be offered for rent at a public leasing to be held at the Court House in the City of Williston in said county on Friday the 26th day of April, 1919 commencing at 10:00 o'clock A. M. The terms of leasing will be as follows:

All lands will be offered for a term of five years beginning with the season of 1919, and only for grazing and hay purposes, at the minimum rental of $15.00 for each quarter section.

All lands will be struck off to the highest bidder who will be required to pay at the time of leasing the rent for the season of 1919, also an additional fee of $3.00 for issuing lease, which fee will be charged for each quarter section or fraction thereof included in such lease.

School and State lands will not be leased to a person or company already leasing 640 acres of school or state land.

A list of the lands to be offered for lease will be on file with the treasurer of said county for public inspection for at least two weeks before the date of leasing.

Coal rights are reserved to the state in all leases and the Board of University and School Lands reserves the right to reject any and all bids.

ALL LEASES ARE SUBJECT TO CANCELLATION IN CASE OF SALE.
The only way to secure the use of any school or state land is by leasing on above terms.

No person has a right to cut hay or graze stock at any season of the year on state land without first securing a lease of the same.

Dated at Bismarck, North Dakota, this 6th day of March, 1919.
W. J. PRATER, Commissioner. 41-4t.

STRONG PULL Long Life Small Cost

To combine light weight and economy with power and durability in tractor construction has not been easy. For years it seemed impossible.

It has been accomplished in the Fordson Tractor as the specifications will show and as the work of more than 25,000 Fordson Tractors now in service throughout the world proves.

The Fordson Tractor will pull farm implements, generally doing the work formerly done by horses. In addition, its belt pulley will do scores of jobs which a horse cannot do.

It will drive all sorts of belt power implements—the saw, ensilage cutter, threshing machine, hay bailer, etc.

While the amount of work performed naturally varies with the farming conditions and methods of handling, a conservative average of one acre an hour under ordinary conditions at a much lower cost than is possible with horses.

The Fordson Tractor speeds up farm work, plows deeper than is usually done with horses, thus greatly increasing crop production per acre. It gets crops planted and harvested on time, increases yields, increases profits and acreage under cultivation. It makes farm work pleasant, and solves the help problem.

This Plow is used with the FORDSON TRACTOR

We now have a car load of these sturdy little tractors enroute and if you are considering getting one you had better let us have your order at once as they will not last long once they arrive in Williston.
