CONSERVING VAST RESOURCES BY KILLING GOPHERS AND OTHER PESTS

One of the largest and most unnecessary sources of farm waste is the damage wrought by gophers. These little nuisances destroy millions of dollars' worth of grains, etc., each year, and every dollar of the amount could be saved by the general use of a few cents worth of something like Kill-Em-Quick Gopher Poison, made by the Mikkelsen-Shapiro Co., of Minneapolis and Winnipeg. For town use such a preparation is also valuable in doing away with rats, mice, etc. The continued depredations of such creatures 'conservation of resources' movement has not corrected, but a great part of the loss is being cut off annually by farmers and townspeople who are learning that the removal of the pest means nothing more than a visit to the drug store and the purchase and use of something that will do the work.

Carl Tannhill captured a specimen of the Sui Generis, according to 'Dad' Green, near the Skinner bridge at Sawyer.

On a Steaming Hot Day it isn't so much the weather that wilts a man.

Look to his clothes, and ten to one you'll find them warm, uncomfortable, shapeless—not made with the purpose of standing up against hot weather. Under such conditions it is useless to look for style in clothes.

This is our point:
