even though he is a born Englishman, a peculiar streak of humor. It is a compound of naivete and shrewdness that is always amusing and sometimes uproarously funny. On the occasion referred to, he poured forth his personal wail over the county seat war, as half owner of the ferry that runs between Pembina and St. Vincent. His theory being, that if the county seat were removed that he would lose the trade of the Cavalier bunch that sometimes come to Pembina-and invariably extend their trip to St. Vincent.

As a near neighbor of Pembina and as one end of his ferry lands at this city, Bro. Deacon thought he was sufficiently interested as to have something to say-and so he said it-kindly putting in about one word for Pembina to two words for Deacon's ferry-and joshing way.

The nigger beat the other fellow. possible that at the same time the other brute had beaten the nigger it would have been a double victory for decency. Perhaps the best thing connected with the prize fighting business is the remark made by very many, that this is the last "big fight." It seems that now in only one state would such an exhibition be permitted and it is believed by everybody that before another "bout" can be arranged even Nevada will become civilizad.

No "sport" has deteriorated in public estimation during the last fifty years so much as "the manly art of self defence," and it just needed a negro "champion" to complete the disgust of the general

For secretary of state Norton is probably elected over Henry, but it is possible to change this. For judges of supreme court there seems to be no doubt that Fisk, Burke, Goss and Carmody are nominated. Ellsworth seems to be next best, and Rourke and Cooley fighting for the sixth place. This leaves the rest without much show, but these figures are liable to change as the returns on these positions are very incomplete.

The line of the new road, as it leaves the valley and passe along to the level of the prairie southeast of the city can be traced by culverts, timber work and grading. The force is expected to be increased considerably in a couple of weeks. Contractor Sullivan has gone east to expedite the shipment of more grader equipment. A steam shovel is expected to be put to work in a short time and inside of a couple of weeks some 75 teams will be engaged in grading. The work now being done is the heaviest on the entire line between Jamestown and Edgeley.-Jamestown

"A HONORABLE EXAMPLE."
