CURE

For The White Plague Is Found In Berlin

A Physician Declares That Inoculation

Will Make A Person Immune ---Test 682 Patients

Berlin, Nov. 26.—If Friedrich Franz Friedmann, a Berlin physician, has accomplished what he asserts, he has not only reached the goal that has been the heart's desire of every bacteriologist and physician since Robert Koch, but has also gone beyond it to a success hitherto hardly dreamed of. Dr. Friedmann asserts that he has not only discovered a cure for tuberculosis in every form, but that an inoculation with his remedy confers absolute immunity from the white scourge. How long this immunity persists he admits that he is unable to say, but he points out that no physician is able to say how long vaccination confers immunity against small-pox.

Dr. Friedman, who has been working for several years along these lines, has just announced the results of his research. The revolutionary nature of his assertions appears likely to divide the world's physicians into two camps.

At a meeting of the Berlin Medical Society this week Dr. Friedmann explained the remedy and produced patients alleged to have been cured thereby.

Dr. Koch, who discovered the tubercle bacillus, experimented, it will be remembered, with methods of curing tuberculosis by the employment of bacilli, but was balked in the attempt to employ living bacilli by the impossibility of depriving them of virulence. The result was obtained by reducing bacillus cultures to about a tenth of their bulk by mechanical means, and then filtering. It was believed at first that he had discovered a cure, but there are today few physicians who regard tuberculin as of any marked efficacy while probably the majority reject it altogether.

The trend of medical opinion of late years has been to regard living bacilli as alone worthy of consideration as curative agents, and efforts have been directed toward making them non-virulent and at the same time keeping them alive.

This is precisely what Dr. Friedmann asserts he has done. He declares that he has succeeded in cultivating tubercle bacilli which, while retaining the specific curative substances long known to be contained in them, are absolutely free from toxins and disease-producing elements.

After extensive experiments on animals, and on himself, he began using the culture on human patients. At first he injected subcutaneously, but later he adopted the method of simultaneous subcutaneous and venal injections.

In his report to the medical society Dr. Friedmann declared that he had treated 682 tubercular patients, of whom more than 250 were suffering from pulmonary tuberculosis. In almost every case there was an immediate improvement, and in a large majority a complete cure.

Dr. Friedmann exhibited to the Medical Society patients whom by one to three injections, he said, he had cured of pulmonary, skin, bone and articular tuberculosis and lupus, as well as scrofula. He also exhibited some children who, he declared, were the only members of tubercular families not affected with disease, and had been protected by inoculation.

Among the members of the Medical Society who, while holding the proverbial reserve regarding the alleged new discovery, testified to improvement, and even apparent cures in many of their own patients they had sent to Dr. Friedmann, were Professor Erich Muller, head physician of the Berlin Orphan Asylum; Professor C. L. Schleich, head of the Virchow Hospital; Drs. Karfunkel, Kuester, and Heymann, and Professor Blaschke.

Professor August Bier of the Berlin University, one of Germany's leading physicians and surgeons, said:

"I have sent a large number of patients from my clinic to Dr. Friedmann, who were suffering from various forms of tuberculosis. I admit that I have been greatly impressed by the result, although I am not yet in a position to say that it has been proved to me that Dr. Friedmann can cure tuberculosis. In the nature of things such proof cannot be had until more physicians have had an opportunity to handle the remedy and observe the results themselves. We must await that time before giving a verdict."

Dr. Friedmann admits that he is unable as yet to prove that inoculation brings immunity, but declares that it is as certain as anything in the domain of medicine. As to cures, he says there can be no doubt.

He showed a newspaper man a letter from a St. Louis capitalist offering him $1,000,000 for the exclusive rights to the remedy in America. He has not yet decided what course he will take but expects to put the remedy at the disposal of German physicians soon.
