"Montenegro has hoped to secure the liberation of the Serbians in Turkey without the shedding of blood, but peaceful endeavors proved unavailing," continues the proclamation, and no other recourse was left but to take up the sword.

"We are assured in this holy undertaking of the sympathy of the whole civilized world and we will have the loyal assistance of the kings of Serbia, Bulgaria and Greece, and the people, who have raised themselves with the Montenegrins like brothers."

The proclamation concludes: "Montenegro is shedding Turkey not from motives of arrogance, but inspired by a noble resolve to prevent the final extermination of her brethren."

The patrol of deputy sheriffs has been extended throughout the district. Large parties of men believed to be strikebreakers arrived today.

A number of the men put to work were strikebreakers brought in from Salt Lake City in cars. They numbered 100, mostly Greeks. The fighting reported at the Utah Consolidated did not turn out to be serious. A number of strikers clashed with deputy sheriffs, but were driven away without much trouble.

While the trainmen applied for their time at the Utah Copper company of this morning they were told to put on their coats and hats. They were declined, but others reported for duty. As quickly as the strikers gathered in crowds they were dispersed by deputies. All morning they howled and jeered the strikebreakers at work in the pit. No shooting has occurred.

Government Unable to Produce
Desired Evidence in
"Dynamite" Cases.

CLAIM CLANCY SENT MESSAGE TO COAST

Indianapolis, Ind., Oct. 10.—Managers of telegraph offices at Spokane, Seattle, Portland and San Francisco testified at the "dynamite conspiracy" trial today that the telegrams sought by the government had been destroyed.

J. B. Coggins, of San Francisco, was asked to produce a telegram reading: "Clean house," and "Sent by Eugene A. Clancy from Boston to 21 Excelsior avenue, San Francisco." Coggins said the telegram files had been destroyed.

"The government charges that, on receiving the loss of life at the Los Angeles Times disaster, Clancy, then on a visit to Boston, decided to destroy certain evidence relative to various Pacific coast explosions and that he sent a 'clean house' message both to his hotel and to his labor headquarters."

The government attorneys stated, were between Olaf A. Tveitmoor, San Francisco, and J. H. McNamara before the latter went to Los Angeles.

Witnesses Tell Senate Committee
that Conditions Are Growing Worse.

"You cannot go to Mexico without taking your liberty in your hands; we have either got to have intervention or there has got to be another Diaz shown up in Mexico."

This was the declaration under oath of H. S. Stephenson, manager of the Palomas Land and Cattle company, before the United States senate committee now here probing the Mexican situation. He testified Wednesday afternoon.

Col. Charles F. Hunt was also a witness yesterday afternoon before the senate committee. He told them that on account of existing conditions there he had lost the sale of one herd of 36,000 head of cattle, and declared that the conditions were growing worse in Mexico daily. He said the rebels would not permit his cattle to be gathered nor shipped. Afterward, he bought cattle and got a letter from the governor of Chihuahua saying cars would be furnished and every facility afforded.

When the time came to ship an illegal export duty of $5, Mexican, per head was demanded, which after much parley was reduced to $1.50 per head. He said the legal export duty on cattle from Mexico. The rebels said they were running that country and that he would have to pay them. He paid them $25,000, Casco Orozco Jr. was the man who demanded the export duty. Other ranchmen and cattle buyers have had to pay this illegal export duty, he said, the amounts varying. The Palomas Cattle company had to pay $2,500 per head.

ONE SAYS IT MUST BE INTERVENTION

Col. Hunt lost 100 head of horses from the San Lorenzo ranch. These horses belonged to him personally. He lost two trainloads of cattle on the Mexico North Western, which could not be brought to market on account of the conditions of the line. Part of the cattle died and part of them were turned loose and he has never seen them. He paid $5,000 for insurance on cars because the railroad would not risk them in rebel territory uninsured.

The government asserted it has possession of the telegrams as received from Clancy. It sought to show why the original messages sent cannot be produced.

When James W. Noel, one of the counsel for the government, asked why the telegrams were not produced, senator Kern, counsel for the defendants, asked the witnesses to show that any such telegrams ever existed, do you?" The witnesses replied they could not remember individual messages.

The telegrams, Mr. Noel said, often were sent by Hockin, now acting secretary-treasurer of the International Association of Bridge and Structural Iron Workers, and at present on trial, to McNamara's home in Chicago.

One Telegram Produced.

H. A. Knight, manager of a telegraph office at Salt Lake City, was the first witness to produce a telegram. The telegram was dated October 23, 1910, and purported to have been signed by J. E. Munsey, known as "Jack Bright," one of the defendants. According to Knight, the telegram was sent to J. B. McNamara, after blowing up the Los Angeles Times building on October 1, 1910, and for two weeks in Los Angeles. (Signed) J. E. Munsey, 2225 Southwest Temple street.

Think "C" Refers to Clancy.

It is the contention of the government that the "C" referred to was Eugene A. Clancy, San Francisco, on trial here, who had been in Boston when the dynamite disaster occurred, and who was about to start on a fishing trip with Michael J. Young, Boston, also a defendant, in the loss of life at Los Angeles induced Clancy to change his mind, and after sending a telegram to San Francisco to "clean out the office," he decided to hurry west.

M. C. Tift, of Minneapolis, counsel for Fred Moomer, of Duluth, Minn., and Charles N. Beum, of Minneapolis, counsel for the defense, said they would be proved that photographs of non-union work under construction were taken not for the use of the government, but for the union as a whole, and who was about to start on a fishing trip with Michael J. Young, Boston, also a defendant, in the loss of life at Los Angeles induced Clancy to change his mind, and after sending a telegram to San Francisco to "clean out the office," he decided to hurry west.

Witnesses Tell Senate Committee
that Conditions Are Growing Worse.

Col. Charles F. Hunt was also a witness yesterday afternoon before the senate committee. He told them that on account of existing conditions there he had lost the sale of one herd of 36,000 head of cattle, and declared that the conditions were growing worse in Mexico daily. He said the rebels would not permit his cattle to be gathered nor shipped. Afterward, he bought cattle and got a letter from the governor of Chihuahua saying cars would be furnished and every facility afforded.

When the time came to ship an illegal export duty of $5, Mexican, per head was demanded, which after much parley was reduced to $1.50 per head. He said the legal export duty on cattle from Mexico. The rebels said they were running that country and that he would have to pay them. He paid them $25,000, Casco Orozco Jr. was the man who demanded the export duty. Other ranchmen and cattle buyers have had to pay this illegal export duty, he said, the amounts varying. The Palomas Cattle company had to pay $2,500 per head.

Col. Hunt lost 100 head of horses from the San Lorenzo ranch. These horses belonged to him personally. He lost two trainloads of cattle on the Mexico North Western, which could not be brought to market on account of the conditions of the line. Part of the cattle died and part of them were turned loose and he has never seen them. He paid $5,000 for insurance on cars because the railroad would not risk them in rebel territory uninsured.

The government asserted it has possession of the telegrams as received from Clancy. It sought to show why the original messages sent cannot be produced.

When James W. Noel, one of the counsel for the government, asked why the telegrams were not produced, senator Kern, counsel for the defendants, asked the witnesses to show that any such telegrams ever existed, do you?" The witnesses replied they could not remember individual messages.

The telegrams, Mr. Noel said, often were sent by Hockin, now acting secretary-treasurer of the International Association of Bridge and Structural Iron Workers, and at present on trial, to McNamara's home in Chicago.

One Telegram Produced.

H. A. Knight, manager of a telegraph office at Salt Lake City, was the first witness to produce a telegram. The telegram was dated October 23, 1910, and purported to have been signed by J. E. Munsey, known as "Jack Bright," one of the defendants. According to Knight, the telegram was sent to J. B. McNamara, after blowing up the Los Angeles Times building on October 1, 1910, and for two weeks in Los Angeles. (Signed) J. E. Munsey, 2225 Southwest Temple street.

Think "C" Refers to Clancy.

It is the contention of the government that the "C" referred to was Eugene A. Clancy, San Francisco, on trial here, who had been in Boston when the dynamite disaster occurred, and who was about to start on a fishing trip with Michael J. Young, Boston, also a defendant, in the loss of life at Los Angeles induced Clancy to change his mind, and after sending a telegram to San Francisco to "clean
