

Brace Up

WHEN the night is darkest, dawn will shortly break; so the sage remarks, and he is no fake. When your griefs are thicker than griefs ought to be, fortune will smicker and be good to thee. As I've been a-movin' through all sorts of times, I have seen it proven forty thousand times. Darkest nights will mosey, gloomy hours will trek, and Aurora rosy soon will be on deck. Cheerful be and patient, hopeful be and strong, and the joyful day shan't stay away too long. I have been so busted I had naught to eat, drilling round, disgusted, on my large splay feet, finding in dark hallways shelter from the storm, nothing but my gaiters on to keep me warm. But I kept a-humming, footsore, hungry, lame, "Better times are coming," and you bet they came. When the night was darkest, pregnant with despair, and the care that darkest seemed too great to bear, when my heart was aching, and my soul was blue, lo, the dawn was breaking, and the shadows flew! Are you sad and grieving? Do not lose your grip! Just keep on believing that your woes will skip!

After 2057 Scalps

MAYOR KELLY has thrown down several gauntlets to the opposition, and there is every promise now for one of the most interesting local campaigns El Paso ever had. If the reports of the two sides can be taken as entirely and equally authentic, the "ring" club has 2057 members, while the "antis" have 2057 members. It is very interesting the way that every gain by one side is exactly matched by a corresponding gain on the other side. If this thing keeps up, the casting vote will have to be cast by the mayor himself, and since it is inconceivable that he would vote for himself, the "antis" will win the primaries by a single vote.

Poll tax paying is not what it should be, as yet. The real fight will be fought out between now and January 31, for it is a question of poll taxes after all. There is no use in putting out a lot of big talk unless the big talk is backed up by poll tax receipts. Each side has 2057 members in its club, but how many of those 2057 have paid their poll taxes? That's the question. There will be a big rush the last week of January, but hundreds will be left out when the office closes, and the old excuse about being "crowded out of line by a lot of Mexicans" won't go this time, for everybody has had ample warning, long in advance. You won't have to wait six seconds now, if you walk up and pay.

The man who neglects to exercise the suffrage. There can be nothing but contempt for the man who neglects or refuses to pay, when important issues are at stake. The man who is unable to pay does not exist in this city.

Mayor Kelly at the meeting last night asserted that every man opposing his organization has tried to put something over that was not right, and he threatens to make public the dark records of the 2057 men who have joined the opposition club. The indictment is an extensive one. The challenge is bold enough to satisfy the most belligerent Irishman from county Cork. We already see the shadow of the whirling scabbard, and the gnaw of cracking heads is borne in on the shuddering air from the scene of carnage.

It is a sad day for El Paso when any responsible man can indict 2057 of his fellow citizens as crooks, and make the charge stick. But in view of what the mayor says, we must all be prepared to admit that no one now in public office, no one who has held public office under his administration, no one who hopes to hold public office by grace of the organization he represents, ever had a selfish thought, ever served his own ambition, ever sought office except from motives of perfect self sacrifice in behalf of a public crying for help, or ever departed from the path of saintly purity.

It goes without saying that the mayor and his friends, under the circumstances, would not welcome or tolerate the support of a single one of the 2057 crooks of the opposition, whom he indicts with all the fervid confidence of an Elijah and an Ezekiel rolled into one. By all means, let the administration organization be kept pure. The time demands men whose records are free from blot like those that sully the life-pages of the 2057 citizens of El Paso who dare to suggest the wisdom of a change in rulers.

If, as the mayor says, the opposition has not five clean men to run on a ticket, what's the use of carrying on the fight? May as well quit right now, and reflect by acclamation.

By the way, mayor Kelly has invented a brand new campaign argument, absolutely never before used in any campaign in this country. It runs like this: "Look out, I've got the dope on you, and I will spring it if you don't surrender." It is a telling argument, that must compel peace.

Mayor Kelly's new slogan for El Paso seems to run like this: "El Paso, 50 per cent pure." Thank God it is more than 49.

December is a good month in which to plant sweet peas in their six inch trenches. And there is joy in planting the little round hard seeds expecting coral and white blossoms here, deep purple there, all white in this line, all rose in that, and a flyer or two in experimental butterfly colors, then in watching the fluttering bloom that comes in April and May.

Battles In the Air

ACCOUNTS of airplane duels in the news are as thrilling and dramatic as Jules Verne or Kipling could write. The ships generally contain two men, an officer and a pilot. A German airship seeing a French ship in the sky, rises immediately and gives chase; the French ship, pursued closely, makes a dangerous turn and charge; the German, to avoid collision, has to make a sharp turn, its machine gun looses from its holdings and bangs around in the air, French bullets pierce the gasoline tank or one wing, and the German ship comes down. Then it is discovered that the lieutenant, in his hurry to chase the French airship, has had one hand frozen, in the heights of the blue where he darted after the enemy.

A Syracuse newspaper has discovered that we have never had a president named Charles. Come to think of it, we have never had one named Mary, either.

Even the authors of books and the actors of plays are complaining that the European war is hurting their business, and the public is exhorted not to cut down its reading matter or theater tickets. Buy a bale of cotton to help the south, buy a box of prunes to help California, buy a barrel of apples to help New Mexico or Oregon, buy a book to help Indiana, buy theater tickets to help the Rialto, buy a picture to help the painters, above all do not stop buying. That thrift that counsels thinking twice before buying is not in favor with the makers of things these days.

LITTLE INTERVIEWS

SALAZAR is probably the most overrated of all of the trouble-makers that have appeared in northern Mexico," said Carlos C. Martin.

"It is true that, two years ago, he had a considerable following. At that time, though, he at least made a pretense of fighting for a cause, the overthrow of the Huerta regime, however, resulted in his being completely discredited. Now that he is back in Chihuahua he may manage to attract a few followers, but the day of Salazar as a menace to the peace of the state is over. He will go the way of the Carrillo and Quevedo bands."

"El Paso is getting much good advertising through the plan to have side trips for the special train passengers traveling over here," said Carlos C. Martin. "The chamber of commerce has received letters from many of the big railroads asking for particulars regarding the trip. The plan is to have a round trip to the K. M. & T. and the Burlington, the latter road expecting to route a number of passengers through here on the return trip. The K. M. & T. has issued circulars to all of its passenger representatives, including the one in El Paso, which will include much of El Paso and a trip across the river."

"A very senseless scare is on among some newcomers to El Paso," said Dr. W. H. Anderson, city health officer. "There are always more or less snappers in western communities, particularly where there is a floating population. As an actual fact, there are in the city eruptive hospitals today but 15 cases originating inside the city and 22 originating within the county limits. The city, I do not know how the report has gained circulation that there are 400 or 450 cases in the city. Some one has greatly exaggerated conditions."

"El Paso is the best vaccinated community in the southwest. Over 7000 of our floating population have been vaccinated during the past three or four months and the city force is constantly at work. Of the cases we have had, a large percentage have been from other sections or were not vaccinated. Out of the thousands of cases treated at the city eruptive hospital, almost no deaths have occurred among those who had ever been vaccinated, whereas the death rate has been large among those unvaccinated."

"The health of El Paso is exceptionally good at this time, there being very few cases of contagious diseases."

"The nickel auto has evidently come to stay," said J. W. Kirkpatrick. "The automobile has proved a successful one as is shown by the fact that one company has 25 cars and is arranging to buy more. They are working day and night and many persons who reside outside of the business district make the trip from their business apartments in downtown Los Angeles there are many automobiles used for public conveyances at 5 cents fare to any part of the city. The nickel auto and other western cities have been introduced to the nickel car and I have learned that the majority of the automobiles that the service is soon to be inaugurated."

"The fact that the United States has recognized Gen. Francisco Villa's rule in Mexico will prove a potent factor in restoring peace to that country," said Arthur Lessing, who believes that the Salazar revolt will gain much headway in northern Mexico. He will hardly come to El Paso or the vicinity as he realizes he is very unpopular and if he is driven across the line again and captured on this side his capture would mean the end of his life in and around San Antonio there are many former federalists and these may flock to the standard of Salazar."

The outlook is very bright for building activity beginning with the new year," said O. P. Brown. "Business is picking up right along and is much better now than during the summer. The approach of the holidays has brought a little lull in inquiries for immediate work but there are many inquiries for work early in the new year. The city is being equipped for the high school building, for which bids will be opened on Dec. 21. The Victor Caruso apartments on Broadway street, cost $20,000 and the residence of A. Schwartz on Mesa avenue, cost $25,000."

"Music lovers of El Paso should not fail to attend the next concert of the El Paso symphony orchestra," said Mrs. W. R. Brown. "There is no admission charge to the concert. The music to be held on December 18," said Mrs. W. R. Brown. "There is no admission charge to the concert. The music to be held on December 18."

Letter From England

George A. Camphus of this city has received an interesting letter from a relative in England, from which the following extracts are made, giving timely insight into conditions over there as seen by British eyes:

"The war goes on with the most appalling losses on both sides, and the estimate to date of the German casualties amounts to something in the neighborhood of 2,000,000 men. There was absolutely no way for England to hold the action that was taken, and in status this, I am not taking a merely patriotic view or alone considering the war from a point of the nation's honor. If Germany had been allowed to walk through France alone, she would, in all probability, have reached Paris at any cost, and ultimately France would very likely have been beaten. In this case, what would be the position of England? The Germans had expected that England would remain out of the struggle, and for the present, at least, they are accomplished. Mr. Bismarck, however, separately, and their assumption was based upon intelligence bureau (spies) and also directly from their own ambassador in London, that the country was in with Ireland, to say nothing of Socialist influences, and leaders of parties holding the motto of 'Peace at all costs.' Added to these predictions, our Liberal government was in trouble, and a general election was thought to be imminent in the country at that time. Fortunately for us, everybody forgot about these various troubles, and all, with a few exceptions, joined in a common feeling of loyalty to the empire."

Certain papers in the United States appear to consider that our navy has not accomplished as much as was expected, and in expressing this view they certainly show a probably intentional ignorance of the facts of the case. The following day complaint was lodged throughout England, has been maintained, our shipping has progressed under almost normal conditions throughout the world, the transportation of troops from Australia, New Zealand, Canada and elsewhere has been accomplished without a single casualty, the German fleet has been rendered useless, protection has been given to the coast of France, and the maintenance of normal prices in England have been made possible."

Patrolman Paschal Is Buried Monday

Funeral services for William Paschal, the police officer who was murdered Friday evening while looking for two negro holdup men near the chamber of commerce, was held Monday afternoon at the First Christian church. Interment was in Evergreen cemetery. The services were attended by Mrs. Will Brown, N. E. Davis and many of the local police officers and detectives.

A reward of $250 has been offered by the city for the arrest of the man who killed patrolman Paschal.

Tottie Tabby Has a Millinery Shop

BY FLORENCE Z. YODER.

WHENEVER it rained in Tabbyville, the Tabby children had all sorts of games for playing indoors. The boys played their games with one another, and the girls had their own private games.

The one of which they were the most fond was playing shop. Sometimes it was just a toy shop, sometimes a grocery shop, but one dark afternoon they decided to get all of the hats in the house, and play at being milliners.

Tottie was the saleswoman and Tessie was the customer to whom she sold her wares. Now they usually got along very well together. They took turns at buying and selling, had a small table with the hats on it, and a small mirror in which to look and try on the different styles.

There was one hat which had on it a bunch of lovely feathers. This was the favorite bonnet, and Tessie would always take it to take it and would carry it away. Tottie did not like this, for she wanted the hat for herself.

"Now, girls," said Mrs. Tabby, when they started, "I do not want any quarreling over the feathered bonnet. When people begin to quarrel over one thing it ends by neither one of them having it."

The kitties promised to keep their tempers, but who ever knows just what is going to happen? Tottie got behind her little counter, and dusted her stock, and Tessie came sailing in dressed in a clean apron, with her best hat on her head.

"Good afternoon, madam," said Tottie, politely. "Is there anything which I can show you this morning?" Tessie looked at the hats, and then from the stands and shook her head. "I wanted a new bonnet," she said, "but I see nothing here which attracts my attention. Tottie had expected a different reply, and she began to wonder whether or not Tessie was in earnest. I am thought to have a good collection of hats," she said. "Perhaps you have not tried them all on your head?" She handed Tessie a bonnet as she spoke, and with a switch of her skirts Tessie took off her own hat and tried the other one on.

"I do not think this is so very becoming," she said wearily. "Have you something with a feather on it?"

Now Tottie had meant to save the feathered hat so that when her turn came she could buy it from Tessie, but that young kitty was so very stuck up that she brought out the treasure in order to tempt her. "Have you something with a feather on it?" Tessie asked with a smile as she twirled the hat around on her paw as she had seen real milliners do. "Now, that is most to my taste," said Tessie. "Let me see it."

"But this is sold already," objected Tottie.

"My dear madam," said Tessie in a way which in itself made Tottie angry. "That is the only pretty bonnet you have, if I cannot see it I must depart." She made as if to leave and Tottie felt very hurt. Was Tessie really acting or was she in earnest and just trying to get the hat? Tottie winked her eyes, she mistrusted Tessie. "I am sorry she said at last, 'I cannot let you see the hat, good afternoon.' But Tessie was not to be sent away. She grabbed at the feathered bonnet, and Tottie pulled and the hat—

Mrs. Tabby entered the room just at that moment, but she was too late. The hat was torn to pieces, the feathers were scattered all over the floor and the two kitties were scratching and hitting shamefully. She pulled them apart and spanked them soundly, and took away all of the hats. They had nothing with which to play the rest of the day, and worst of all, the lovely hat for which they both cared so much was a total wreck. And in the late afternoon with their little pug noses pressed flat against the window panes, they watched the rain drops fall, and made up their minds that it was far better not to quarrel over their game. For their favorite hat was forever gone!"

LONG TRAINLOADS OF ORANGES SENT TO EAST

Through freight trains, some of them almost a half mile in length and containing thousands of California oranges, are passing through El Paso daily, consigned to large middle west and eastern cities. One of the largest trainloads of naval oranges that ever passed through this city from the Golden State was hauled through Monday over the Southern Pacific lines consigned by a fruit company of the state to Kansas City and other eastern points.

The train consisted of 42 cars, containing 3,100 boxes of fruit, worth about $145,000. The oranges were grown in the Porterville district of Tulare county.

The train will be kept intact until it reaches Kansas City, when it will be broken up and carloads sent to eastern points.

RICE'S BOND DECLARED FORFEITED BY JUSTICE

Ed Rice, alias Ed Wright, charged with being a fugitive from justice, forfeited his bond when the case came to justice J. M. Deaver's court Tuesday morning at 10 o'clock and he did not appear. Rice is said to be on the Mexican side of the river.

Rice was arrested Monday, Oct. 20, by chief of police L. N. Davis and Capt. W. D. Greet as a suspicious character. The following day complaint was filed before Justice Deaver by Thomas Sheehan, a Chicago detective, charging Rice with obtaining approximately $24,000 from E. E. Russell, of Cook county, Ill., under false pretenses.

Rice applied for a writ of habeas corpus and was released under $2000 bond.

S. P. BREAKERMAN SUES ROAD FOR $25,000 DAMAGES

The plaintiff, who resides at 1125 Missouri street, Los Angeles, Cal., alleges in his petition that last summer, while engaged as a brakeman in switching cars at Spauld Junction, Cal., he was thrown down and suffered a broken foot and ankle.

He alleges that he was injured because of the condition of the track at that point.

Students of the El Paso Schools

ONE of the live organizations in the Lamar school is the Webster-Haynes debating club of the high eighth grade. This club meets every Friday afternoon after school and alternately holds debates and conducts parliamentary drill.

Charles Thurston is the president. The judges are appointed for the debates from the members of the club and the meetings are conducted with the parliamentary rules.

The club will meet Friday to debate the resolution: "Resolved, that the nations of the earth should disarm." Miss Edith Giddings, the teacher of this grade, has some interesting little club in the school room by which the children may develop with the experience of conducting meetings and taking active part in the debates and orations.

The president of the club, Charles Thurston, represented the grammar schools of the city in the annual oratorical contest held at Austin, Tex., last year. The pupils of the high eighth grade are:

Organization

BY GEORGE FITCH.
Author of "At Good Old Slush."

WHEN the modern man finds a job before him and two or three men ready to help him, he does not shock off his coat and take the job by the throat. He sends for a pad of paper, a pencil, a cost sheet and 32 different kinds of blanks. Then he says: "Go to. Let us organize."

And they spend the day in planning out the work with a blue pencil and when night arrives they haven't touched the job, though an old fashioned crew would have had it half finished. But the next morning, before they are organized and they take that job by the throat and lo! it is finished.

Organization has made the modern world great. It is the science that is making work a million men without leader could not have dug the Panama canal at all. But 75,000 men finished it in eight years after Col. Goethals had organized them.

Organization has enabled Americans to sell automobiles for half the European price. The workmen get twice the European wage. Organization kept the German empire as busy during 40 years of peace as most nations are during war. But when war came the German emperor pushed a button and 5,000,000 men started for France.

Organization also enables a few men with overhauling foreheads and small, brown beaten consciences to sell for $150,000 and sell the stock to the unsuspecting public. Organization in this case is more of a nuisance than a success.

A million voters may shriek in

The Daily Novelette

"TAKE IT OFF, WE KNOW YOU."

THAT Thursday, Camelhair Smythe, coming out of solitude for the first time since he had started to encourage a mistake, sauntered along the boulevard swinging his fox trot cane.

He met his fiancée, Glinkys Jones. "Ah, my dear!" he greeted her. "Camelhair!" she cried, startled. "Why, I hardly knew you with that thing on your lip!"

"Do you like it?" he asked eagerly. "Why," she said, "I hardly know you."

"You told me that," he said anxiously, "but do you like it?"

The wind from the southeast," she said, "blows it off. Unless we have fair weather, that probably means a storm. I must hurry and buy an umbrella."

And she hurried on. Camelhair Smythe met Freddy Jibbers. "Oh, it's you," said Freddy. "Didn't know you at first."

"As I say, I hardly knew you at first," answered Freddy, and hurried on.

The next day, Friday, Camelhair Smythe again sauntered along the boulevard swinging his fox trot cane, but the little stranger, the new fledgling mate, was no longer among those present.

Robert H. Rinehart, referee of the recent El Paso-Phoenix race, has received a letter from John C. Jones, of Tucumcari, N. M., asking a few minutes' attention to the San Diego road race if the event is run. This is about the 20th entry assured for the classic. It is staged at Mr. Rinehart's belief that if the race is run, there will be fully 40 or 50 cars compete. Mr. Jones had his car in the Phoenix race and was accomplished in winning prize money by tire trouble.
