

U.S. BODY LAUNCHES CAMPAIGN FOR STRONG UNION OF NATIONS

3000 Delegates Register At Atlantic Congress For the League of Nations; Balfour Asserts All Possible Haste Made To Settle Peace Terms; Calls Russian Affairs "Most Disquieting"; Two League Plans Up.

PARIS, France, Feb. 6.—Military intervention in Russia on a large scale is not to be thought of, declared Arthur J. Balfour, the British foreign secretary, in closing an interview which he granted the newspaper correspondents here last night. The great powers were doing everything they considered could be done, however, he said, in dealing with what he characterized as "the most disquieting situation."

As to the general work of the peace conference, the foreign secretary declared all possible haste was being made to settle upon the peace terms. He was not to be taken by a question from one of the interviewers, who asked:

"There is much talk in the peace conference about various problems, such as the security of nations. Do you not think your real task is to settle everything else, to impose peace conditions upon Germany?"

After a moment's reflection, secretary Balfour replied:

"One can evidently criticize, without fault, the methods of work we have adopted, but rather than tell you that the fact that the problem of the security of nations was taken up before that of peace, but in no way signifies that the settlement of our accounts with the enemy will only come later."

"Let me explain," he continued. "The delegates to the peace conference have no intention of employing 'force' methods. They are using all their energy and skill to settle our accounts as peacefully as possible, but the whole world knows that this is not the end of the matter."

President Wilson presided last night over the commission of the security of nations, which had before it the question of settling the accounts of the peace conference. The commission was composed of the great powers, with two representatives from the small powers, to which the commission was to refer all questions of international law.

Two main plans were presented, which the members of the commission regarded as embodying the American view, though both plans were equally recommended, each as a unit, second an executive branch, consisting of two members from each of the great powers, United States, Great Britain, France, Italy and Japan, and also members chosen from the smaller powers. This gave the executive body a total membership of 19, of whom ten represented the great powers, and nine the smaller powers.

The first plan had three main features—first, a legislative branch, in which the great and small nations were equally represented, each as a unit; second an executive branch, consisting of two members from each of the great powers, United States, Great Britain, France, Italy and Japan, and also members chosen from the smaller powers. This gave the executive body a total membership of 19, of whom ten represented the great powers, and nine the smaller powers.

Changes in Revised Plan. The revised plan makes several important changes. The legislative branch is to be composed of the great powers, with two representatives from the small powers, to which the commission was to refer all questions of international law.

Huns Convicted For Propaganda Among Yankees

Picture Allied Soldiers Capitulating to Pretty German Woman.

Coblenz, Germany, Feb. 5.—(By the Associated Press).—Three Germans have been convicted in military courts here during the last few days on the charge of circulating enemy propaganda among American troops in the occupied area of Germany. The distribution of materials which is regarded as enemy propaganda by the intelligence department involved three shopkeepers.

Post Cards Confiscated. At Trier recently 1500 post cards were confiscated by American officers. They pictured a beautiful German woman with a handful of strings and at the other end of the strings were comparatively tiny French, British and American soldiers, dancing to her music.

By order of French military authorities, the study of the French language has been taken up in the schools of Bingen on the Rhine, according to German newspapers.

'Huns Not Beaten By Revolution Or By Blockade' German Writer Says Military Situation Alone Brought Defeat.

London, Eng., Feb. 5 (via Montreal).—Any idea that the Germans' final collapse was due to revolution or solely to blockade is scouted in an article in the Frankfort Zeitung by the military writer, Maj. Paulus.

"Von Ludendorff was beaten," says Paulus, "when he commenced to retreat to the Antwerp-Meuse line, for this line could not have been held. Neither flank was secure. In the north, the Dutch frontier left no room for retreat, and in the south, Verdun provided an invitation to the enemy to break through. The line from Dieulouart to Metz was lost."

Paulus therefore maintains that Ludendorff was right when he announced that it was impossible to continue the war any longer. This was not due, says Paulus, to anything that had occurred in the military situation.

"Did he say, in substance, that lack of the program would be fatal to his negotiations?" asked representative Rogers, of Massachusetts. Rep. Paulus replied:

"I cannot say. I only know that it involves more than our own domestic policy."

Representative Graham, of Illinois, asked representative Rogers, of Massachusetts, whether he believed the proposed program would be fatal to the country, representative Butler, of Pennsylvania, ranking Republican on naval construction, said that he did not believe it would be fatal to the country, but that it might not be intelligent as to the proposed construction.

Mr. Paulus answered:

"I cannot say. I only know that it involves more than our own domestic policy."

Representative Campbell, of Kansas, asked representative Rogers, of Massachusetts, whether he believed the proposed program would be fatal to the country, representative Butler, of Pennsylvania, ranking Republican on naval construction, said that he did not believe it would be fatal to the country, but that it might not be intelligent as to the proposed construction.

The people, the reports state, had become mad with hunger. The address added that the disorders had not yet been suppressed.

Yanks Can't Buy Food From Huns; Allies Help To Conserve Supplies

Coblenz, Germany, Feb. 5.—(By the Associated Press).—The determination of the allies to assist the people in the German occupied area to conserve the rapidly diminishing food supply has resulted in a big reduction in requests for leaves of absence. The officers and men of the American forces are less keen to visit Coblenz and other large towns in their own area because it is impossible to buy even a sandwich since the order was issued prohibiting the purchase of any food anywhere from Germany.

The latest protest court records reflect the chances the residents in the German occupied area to conserve the foodstuffs. The records show that in 24 cases where persons were proved guilty of having their possession property of the United States, the property was mostly bread, bacon and other food supplies traded to them by soldiers.
