CARRANZA OFFICERS CLAIM LAST OF BANDIT FORCES ARE SCATTERED

Defeat of Villa Near Durango City Believed to Have Been Decisive Blow Against Outlawry in Northern Mexico; Whereabouts of Martin Lopez and Felipe Angeles is Unknown to the Federal Officials.

By FRANK WITTRAM.

With the defeat of Francisco Villa and 700 bandits six miles east of Durango City on Tuesday morning, and with reports continually arriving in El Paso and Juarez to the effect that various small bands of rebels are seeking amnesty and a return to civilian life, Carranza officials along the border believe that at last the blow has been struck which will result in the complete disintegration of bandit forces throughout northern Mexico.

Late reports on the battle in Durango stated that federal cavalry pursued the bandits until they were scattering like quail throughout the region about Durango, so that the federal troops were unable to meet any considerable force.

No reliable information regarding the whereabouts of Martin Lopez has been received, either in connection with the recent battle or for some time previous. One indefinite report was to the effect that Lopez and Villa quarreled and that the two bandits had split their forces. This was not verified by federal officials, however. Another unverified report was to the effect that following the quarrel Lopez continued in command but was not given any important work by Villa.

Nothing Heard of Angeles.

Although little has been heard for some weeks of Felipe Angeles, Carranza officials are inclined to believe that he has left Villa and is not now in command of any rebel forces. The recent departure of Angeles's family for New York gave rise to the rumor that the leader, who had acted as Villa's chief assistant, had gone by water to New York, where he would join his family.

Carranza cavalry forces recently detoured from their march toward Juarez and went to the Ojinaga district, with the expressed purpose of cutting off the northward retreat of Hipolito Villa, who was seeking to join his brother in Durango state. Latest reports from this detachment are to the effect that they have thus far been unable to meet the little band of rebels, which is believed to be hiding near Palomas, waiting an opportunity to slip through the federal lines and flee to the southward.

Hipolito Villa recently recovered from a severe illness, having been taken into the Palomas district in a horse drawn ambulance, with three other bandits who were wounded in the Juarez fight in June and whose illness necessitated their leaving the field camp of Francisco Villa.

Troops Coming to Juarez.

It is considered probable that, following further immediate search for this bandit force, the cavalry troops will be ordered to Juarez, where they will be divided into troops for border patrol work.

The presence of Col. Valle, chief of staff to Gen. Manuel M. Diegues in Juarez, is taken by many to indicate the speedy arrival of the cavalry in Juarez, the belief being that he has been sent to superintend the placing of the border guard.

Army officers in Juarez recently expressed the belief that the rapid decline of bandit power is the result of a strenuous campaign inaugurated by Gen. Diegues. Although it has not been officially announced it is generally known that the federal troops have been ordered to show the bandits no mercy, but to use every means to exterminate them.

Gen. Diegues Supported.

"Gen. Diegues has the hearty cooperation of every officer and man in his district," said one officer in Juarez. "The recent mutiny at Chihuahua was the outbreak of a remnant of disloyal officers who have been dissatisfied for some time with the general tightening up of army discipline in Mexico. They were hopelessly in the minority, however, and the outbreak was not nearly so serious as was at first reported. There was not a time when the federals were not in complete control of the situation. It is close cooperation and the general business like nature of the campaign that has resulted in breaking bandit power. We have nothing of a serious nature to fear from the bandits hereafter."

Epifano Holguin, a bandit leader who for some time has been operating independent of Villa in southern Chihuahua, has thus far not replied to the federal offer of amnesty. Following his formal request for a pardon to the authorities in Juarez, a rider was dispatched with word that he would be granted a full pardon o nondition that he come to Juarez and cease his operations in the field. The rider returned without an answer to the message but it was expected that in a short time Holguin would arrive in Juarez in person. With three weeks passed, however, the authorities are inclined to believe that Holguin has decided to remain in the mountains, although it is known that he is not at present taking part in any bandit activities.

Many Sign Up For Protection Of Americans

Bulletin Tells of Work of Association to Protect Rights in Mexico.

The attitude of the people of the southwest toward Mexico's mistreatment of Americans is reflected in the rapidly increasing membership of the National Association for the Protection of American Rights in Mexico.

This organization, which of course favors the protection of American rights on this side of the Rio Grande as well as in Mexico, acquired 699 new associate members during the month of August, according to a bulletin just issued from the association's national headquarters in New York. In addition to the associate members, 32 active members were obtained. Much of the credit for this growth is given by the bulletin of the organization to J. N. Quail, field secretary for the border district.

Maj. John G. MacDonnell, who has the Pacific coast district, also has obtained many memberships and has done much good work, the publication avers.

Getting members is not all the association does. One of its main objects is to educate the people of the entire country to conditions in Mexico and to stimulate a desire to protect the legitimate interests of Americans who were invited to Mexico and who went there and helped Mexico by investing not only their capital but their lives. Mr. Quail is confident that the people will prove patriotic when they have learned the truth.

The New York publication which reached here Friday says of Mr. Quail, who now has headquarters in El Paso, and his work:

Mr. Quail began operations in El Paso about July 1, and with the cooperation of a number of leading citizens secured the active membership and the endorsement of the El Paso chamber of commerce, the endorsement of the mining circle of the University club and the cooperation of many cattlemen. The chamber of commerce offered the use of offices in its building if the association would make El Paso state headquarters. The association was pleased to accept this offer and the El Paso office was accordingly opened with C. J. Henry in charge.

From El Paso, Mr. Quail went to Austin, where on July 17 he secured an endorsement by the Texas state senate, and had the pleasure of indirector Gov. W. P. Hobby accept membership in the association, and of obtaining a few days later the membership of Gov. J. R. A. Robertson, of Oklahoma.

The chamber of commerce of Houston became an active member after heartily endorsing the aims of the A. In San Antonio, a very enthusiastic meeting was held on July 31, at which a citizen's committee was formed, a branch office opened in the suite of A. B. Spencer, Riverside building, with J. D. Goodrich acting as secretary, and a promise was given that San Antonio would furnish 1000 members. Mr. Quail reports that he has been accorded a cordial reception at Del Rio, Eagle Pass, Brownsville and Laredo.

In addition to the personal work of Mr. Quail, the El Paso office, under the direction of Mr. Henry, reports that the German, Texas Post, American legion, and the German chamber of commerce have passed resolutions favoring the purposes of the association.

GONZALES MAY BE GOVERNOR

Carranza May Appoint Juarez Commander Governor of Tamaulipas.

The probability of Gen. Francisco Gonzales, commander of the Juarez garrison, being named as provisional governor of the state of Tamaulipas, was strengthened Thursday when his was one of three names submitted to president Carranza from which to choose the governor. The other names were Col. Pablo Villanueva and Dr. Angel Gutierrez.

Of the three candidates the general favorite is said to be Gen. Gonzales. Gen. Gonzales has a good military record in the south, his friends say, and his home is in Tamaulipas. His heroism in connection with the recent battle of Juarez is largely responsible for his growing popularity in diplomatic circles, which added to his military following insures his strong favor in the eyes of the people. Little is known here regarding the other candidates.

Law an Absurdity If Construed Literally, Says Attorney General

Austin, Texas, Sept. 5.—In constructing the law relative to the compensation of tax collectors and assessors for assessing and collecting in the subdivisions of counties the attorney general has held that, although the statute provides that the assessor shall be paid one-half of one percent for each $100 of the assessed values of such districts or subdivisions, the evident intention was to allow him one-half of one cent on the $100 valuation.

To follow the words of the statute literally, says the attorney general, would lead to an absurdity, as the assessor and collector would get more than the amount of taxes received.

MEXICO IS HOME OF MANY RACES

Southern Republic Is the Melting Pot of Western Hemisphere.

Washington, D. C., Sept. 5.—What manner of folks are the Mexicans?

Whatever one's views on the wisest political course toward Mexico, it will help in a thorough understanding of that country to examine the rich history, the ancient civilization, the prehistoric remains, to be found among our southern neighbors, according to a bulletin from the Washington headquarters of the National Geographic society.

This bulletin, based on a communication to the society from John Birkinbine, follows:

"Of the 16,000,000 inhabitants, two fifths claim direct descent from ancient tribes of families which are accepted as the basis of Mexican history, two fifths are of mixed native and foreign blood, the remainder being classed under the common appellation of 'foreign.'

Remnants of Ancient Tribes.

"Throughout much of the country, and often within short distance of railroads, are remnants of some of the ancient native tribes or races, adhering to customs, methods and speech of their ancestors.

"Thus in Oaxaca are the Zapotecas and Mixtecas, the estimate for the two races being 500,000, and a government publication mentions a dozen other families in the same state.

"In Hidalgo and adjacent states, the Otomis; in Puebla and Oaxaca, the Mexicanos; the predominating Mayas in Yucatan; in Michoacan and Jalisco, the Tarascans and the Tlaxcalans in their native state, and other groups elsewhere still maintain the tribal individualities.

Natives Use Vernacular.

"Although Spanish is the language of the country, and much English is spoken in the regions most visited, a large number of the natives use only the vernacular.

"Prescott refers to the Aztecs, Tlaxcalans and others as producers of delicate fabrics, colored by vegetable dyes; intricate designs in the precious metals and beautiful decorations made of feathers; numerous ruins also indicate marvelous skill of ancient peoples in stonework, especially as the tools used were obsidian or copper.

"Evidences that this deftness in handwork has been retained appears in the leather work, wood carving, stone cutting, etc., of the present day. The beautiful pottery and unique weaves of serapes, made with the crudest appliances, and excellent fabrications in cast or wrought iron, filagree silver, etc., also bear testimony to the skill of the Mexican Indian.

Land of Surprises.

"Mexico may be described as a land of surprises, a country of extremes, a nation of contrast, a domain of apparent contradictions; where the old and the new, the poor and the rich, the crude and the refined, are near neighbors; where the vices of centuries of foreign contact continues adherent to present activities, and where ultra conservatism is elbowed by pronounced evidences of modern progress.

"Mexico has a wealth of archaeological relics, remnants of an ancient civilization of which no well-defined trace exists. Volumes have been written to demonstrate that the builders of what are now ruins were of Mongolian, Semitic or Phoenician origin, but the riddle cannot be admitted as solved. All authorities, however, unite in praise of the magnitude and the perfection of workmanship shown at various ruins found throughout the Mexican territory. The region adjacent to some of these ruins is the question as to the source of sustenance for multitudes which must have them existed, and causes speculation upon changes which may have occurred in the interval.

"Prominent among these ruins are Uxmal and Chichen-Itza, in the state of Yucatan; Palenque, in the state of Chiapas; Mitla, in the state of Oaxaca, and Xochicalco, in the state of Morelos.

"The pyramid of Cholula, in Puebla, and those of the sun and moon, in the state of Mexico, have also been liberally described, but distributed over wide areas are many other ruins which have had but little or no investigation, and such ancient pottery, found in numerous localities, are the only records of peoples whose history is unknown and whose names even are lost."

Skids 42 Feet Going 10 (?) Miles an Hour

A woman arrested Friday by speed cop Elmer Wilson for driving more than eight miles an hour past a school told the policeman that she was going only 10 miles an hour. When Wilson measured the mark which the tires on her car made on the pavement in skidding to a stop he found that the car had skidded 42 feet.

"Lady, if you ever drive 10 miles an hour and want to stop at Ysleta, you had better put on the brakes when you pass Washington Park," said Wilson. The driver said she couldn't see why she was arrested as she had "perfect control over the car at such low speed and couldn't hurt a fly."

DEFENDANT MEETS COMPLAINT BY FILING A COMPLAINT

Here's a new point of law connected with the complicated regulations that justice Clark Wright is attempting to solve. Early Friday, Domingo Ortiga, who was driving a wagon on the lower valley road, came into justice Wright's court and filed a complaint against James H. Duthie, alleging reckless driving. A few minutes afterward Duthie came into justice Wright's court and filed a complaint against Ortiaga alleging driving on wrong side of the road.

Investigation disclosed the fact that Duthie, while riding an automobile down the valley road, collided with Ortiaga's wagon and badly disabled the vehicle. Duthie claims that Ortiaga was traveling on the wrong side of the road, while Ortiaga alleges that Duthie was violating the speed limit.
