ANACORTES..... JUNE 21, 1884

The subscription to the Bartholdi statue foundation in New York harbor still hangs fire. If New York cannot raise the money for the pedestal, we suggest that Rock Island, at the entrance to Deception Pass, near Fidalgo Island, be selected for the site of the statue, which would be sufficiently elevated, without a costly pedestal, to set off to proper advantage the colossal proportions of the statue. At this inner entrance to the great Straits of Fuca, midway between the Puget Sound cities of Olympia, Tacoma, Seattle & Port Townsend, south of it, and Victoria, Port Moody, West Minister and Whatcom north of it, in sight of all the commerce that enters the Fuca Straits from the Ocean, the only point on the straits directly accessible by railroad from the main-land, and withal having in Ship Harbor, Burrows Bay, and Deception Bay, as fine a series of harbors as can be found in the world, it is a question whether the future possibilities of this point, if not indeed their absolute certainties, would not justify the wisdom of selecting this bold, grand and remarkable passage, pronounced by General Sherman to afford the grandest scenery on Puget Sound, as the site for this equally grand statue. Let us hear from the Whatcom Reveille and the Mt. Vernon News, on the subject.

THE FALSE PROPHET.

Life in a Straw Hat—Thirty-nine Wives—The Black Man's Prophet a Total Abolitionist.

[Cor. London News.] Mohammed Ahmed is in person tall and powerfully built, but somewhat inclined to corpulency. His complexion is between brown and red. The expression of his countenance is agreeable, and when in repose his face is lighted up by a constant placid smile. If the statements of his enemies may be trusted this outer aspect of benevolence furnishes but a deceptive key to his character. Against those who refuse to recognize the divine nature of his mission he can be severe to cruelty. He is credited with the trick of weeping over the fate of those victims whom he orders to execution, so as to create the impression that he punishes dissent and disobedience with personal regret at the command of Allah. In barren discussion as to the nature or authority of his mission he loses no time. If any man be bold enough to challenge its divine origin or express disbelief, he is permitted to choose between submission, open acknowledgment, and decapitation. This method of reasoning has the advantage that it is brief and effective. Few men are bold enough to sacrifice their heads for their opinions, and the result is a general acquiescence in the divine authority of Mohammed Ahmed's mission. On the other hand he protects and encourages those who voluntarily accept him as the true Mehdi—the man sent by Allah to reform mankind.

Beyond question Mohammed Ahmed is a man of considerable intelligence and extraordinary force of character. No ordinary man could have raised himself from a humble position and made himself master over the restive and jealous Arab tribes, as Mohammed Ahmed has succeeded in doing. Mohammed Ahmed is the absolute master of the life and property of every man from Obeid to Fashoda. He boasts some education, as it is understood in the east; that is, he reads and writes, and is well versed in the Koran and commentaries. Some Catholic priests who have met him personally state that he is by no means a vulgar impostor, but, on the contrary, impressed them as a man thoroughly convinced of the divine nature of his mission and wholly devoted to carry out the religious reforms which he claims he has been sent to effect. Among the mass who are sunk in ignorance, Mohammed Ahmed is regarded as a prophet whom it is sinful to resist. Because he comes as a prophet the people fear to disobey him lest they should expose themselves to the divine vengeance.

Mohammed Ahmed's life is simple in the extreme. He indulges in none of the luxuries or vanities of life, except, perhaps, a weakness for a large number of wives. He is credited with the possession of thirty-nine of these aids to happiness. Perhaps the object of this family arrangement is to enable him to strengthen his influence by alliances contracted with the families of the most powerful sheiks, from among whom he is careful to select the partners of his joys and sorrows. He has several children, but none old enough to take any part in his political or religious work.

The prophet has had constructed for himself a hut of straw, in which he sleeps, and passes the time not occupied in business and public prayer. It is unlawful, contrary to the ordinances of God, to construct houses or live in them. Houses are effeminate luxuries, and therefore must be destroyed.

On the occasions of his public visits to the mosques Mohammed Ahmed rides a beautiful Arab horse, and by his side hangs a sword which is no idle ornament. His dress is a caftan similar in shape to that worn by other Mohammedan priests, but it is variegated in color and richly ornamented. On his head is a brass cap covered by a white turban, surmounted by a plume of ostrich feathers. At the hour appointed for public prayers, his followers assemble armed with their spears, swords, and shields, and when he mounts his horse this vast armed multitude surrounds him in a dense mass, and he is carried to the mosque in this human torrent. On his way back he is escorted with the same care and ceremony. This custom is perhaps not an unnecessary one. It argues strong devotion in the Mehdi's followers, and proves that he has known how to gain their affection as well as their obedience. There is one characteristic of the new prophet which will secure him friends in England. He is a total abstinence man of the purest water. Against the demon of drunkenness he wages fierce and relentless war. Not alone are wine and all sorts of spirituous liquors forbidden, but even the more harmless enjoyments of tobacco and coffee are anathema, and severe penalties inflicted on any one discovered using the forbidden luxuries.

The new champion of Islam is a fighting prophet; just the kind of man to appeal to the imaginations and win the affections of the wild men of the desert. He takes part in all the battles, and does not spare his own person.

He is the black man's prophet, and the black man is resolved that the white face shall not come into Africa as a master. This race antagonism is strengthened and deepened by religious sentiment. Those of the black race who have any religion at all are Moslems, and they view with natural apprehensions the interference of Christian states in the government of Egypt. The khedive is under the control of the infidel that has deprived his government of all moral influence in the Sudan, and which is gradually destroying his authority over Egypt proper. The Mehdi understands this, and will make no compromise nor enter into any relations either with the khedive or any other government tainted with infidelity. Gordon Pasha's idea of bribing him with an acknowledgment of his position as prince of Kordofan, was a clever move, and had Mohammed Ahmed made the mistake of accepting it his influence would have immediately begun to decline. Mohammed Ahmed is, however, a shrewder person than those who talk of him as a savage imagine. When he read Gordon Pasha's letter it is reported that he burned it publicly and sent word "his mission came from God, and did not need titles. If Gordon Pasha felt himself strong and would wait a little, he, Mohammed Ahmed, would come to Kartoum."

Feeling Hurried.

Probably nothing tires one so much as feeling hurried. When in the early morning the day's affairs press on one's attention beforehand, and there comes the wonder how in the world everything is to be accomplished, when every interruption is received impatiently, and the clock is watched in distress as its moments flit past, then the mind tires the body. We are wrong to drive ourselves with whip and spur in this way. Each of us is promised strength for the day, and we must not wear ourselves out by crowding two days' tasks into one. If only we can keep cool and calm, not allowing ourselves to be hurried, we shall be less worried when we have reached the evening. The children may be fractious, the servants trying, the friend we love may fail to visit us, the letter we expect may not arrive, but if we can preserve our tranquillity of soul, and of demeanor, we shall get through everything creditably.

Especially is this good advice for warm weather. Who feels the heat most? Who is most exhausted and prostrated by its severity? Why, the person who flies from fans to ice-water, becoming herself, who changes her dress a half-dozen times a day, who laments that it is so warm, and watches the thermometer with despairing certainty that it never was so hot before; who, in short, intensifies her own discomfort and adds to that of others by constant thinking of it. Women who can stay in-modes have the advantage of men in warm weather. It is wise to abate one's fervor in the early morning, and to keep it, as far as possible, close and darkened through the middle of the day. Dispense with a great fire in the kitchen range, and let the cooking be moderate. Fruits, salads, and simple, easily-digested cereals are the proper foods for summer. A good stove is an economy and a comfort. Find the coolest place to sit, go quietly about your work and make as little fuss as may be about its being warm. Let the children have frequent baths, and do not condemn them with heavy clothing. Common sense and an easy mind help one over most of his rough places with little friction.

Specifications for Buildings.

Messrs. Palliser, Palliser & Co., of Bridgeport, Ct., the well known architects and publishers of standard works on architecture, have lately issued a sheet containing plans and specifications of a very tasteful modern eight-room cottage with tower and also with the necessary modifications for building it without the tower, and with but six rooms if desired. In its most costly form the outlay is estimated at $8,000; without the tower it has been built for $2,500; and if only six rooms are included, the cost may be reduced to $1,700 or $2,000. Details are given of mantels, stairs, doors and casings, cornices, etc. The publishers have found it the most popular plan they have ever issued, and state that it has been adopted in more than five hundred instances within their knowledge. The same firm issue specifications in blank adapted for frame or brick buildings of any cost; also forms of building contract, and several books on modern inexpensive, artistic cottage plans which are of great practical value and convenience to everyone interested.
