CIRCULAR ROOMS.

They Bring Insanity to Those Who Must Abide Alone in Them.

The Minot Ledge light is famed for the number of men who have gone crazy in it, and for that reason it is an object of interest to students of mental diseases. It is, as everybody knows, a piece of engineering of the highest order, being in that respect only second to the famous Eddystone light. More than a year was consumed in getting a foundation for it, and so high are the tides and so terrific the storms that the entrance to the light is more than forty feet above the water.

Then, one above the other, come the five rooms occupied by the keepers and used for storage purposes, and then the watch room and finally the lantern. The tower being circular and space greatly in demand, naturally everything is made to conform, so that no room shall be lost. Even the beds on which the men sleep are curved, the tables against the walls are circular and the benches are half moon. Everything is round.

In this lighthouse there have been at least five well marked cases of insanity and others in which madness has been suspected, and the men relieved from duty. Experts in mental diseases who have made a study of conditions at the Minot Ledge light attribute the unusual prevalence of insanity there to its peculiar form of structure. There is no point, they say, on which the eye may rest, so it travels round and round in a maddening whirl.

They therefore suggest that some means be devised for filling the curves and producing corners and angles. In support of their theory they cite instances of men who have lost their mental balance during long confinement in circular prisons, but have quickly regained it on being transferred to an ordinary room of corners and angles.

Baron Trenck spent much of his time in prison making marks and corners to break the circularity of his surroundings and keep his reason from slipping away on the whirl of encircling walls. Casanova, an Italian engineer who was imprisoned in a round tower, gives much the same testimony. He says he felt great mental relief on being moved to an ordinary square room.

As it is well nigh impossible to make much change in the form of the structure of the Minot Ledge lighthouse the number of men in charge of it has been increased to five, in order that they may have frequent leaves from duty and take turns in going ashore for a visit to family and friends. This system has resulted in a decrease in the number of cases of melancholia and more serious mental disorders.

In fact, but for the frequent changes made in the service by shifting men from one station to another the number of cases of this sort everywhere would be much greater than it is. In some cases a man is kept in a place for only a few months and then sent to some less isolated station for awhile.

To give the men something to think of other than their loneliness and to occupy the long hours during which they have nothing to do circulating libraries of fifty books each are provided. The books are carefully selected and changed every three months when the inspector makes his visit. In the collection are biography, history, travel, fiction, poetry, illustrated magazines and in some cases newspapers; also medicine chests are provided for relief in cases of sickness and careful directions given for the use of their contents.

Despite the dangers and hardships of lighthouse life there are many applicants for positions in them. Whenever a vacancy occurs in the service there is always a number of men to select from. And yet the pay is small. In fact, the law provides that the average compensation given keepers shall not exceed $600 a year. Probably the best paid keeper in the service is the man at Hell Gate, who gets $1,200 a year.—Chicago Chronicle.

The First Oil in Kansas.

The first discovery of oil in Kansas was made by a farmer in Johnson county who lived near the old Santa Fe trail and found oil in a well on his farm and sold it to the freighters for wagon grease. The early settlers learned from the Indians these oil wells existed in different parts of the state, but little attention was given them. It required the financial remuneration from the Pennsylvania field to stir the pioneer elements to action in the undeveloped districts and to bring to the Kansas field men of capital and experience who would not be discouraged by a few dry holes. General attention was attracted to the Kansas field in 1873, when the Acres well was drilled at Iola, where enough gas was found to make it a commercial quantity and show that it existed in sufficient volume for fuel and lighting purposes. Prospecting was rapid all over the southeastern part of the state, with the result that in 1890 many towns were supplied wholly or in part with heat and light for domestic use.—Pleasanton (Kan.) Observer.

A Queer Place For Ears.

On the tibia of grasshoppers and crickets' fore legs may be seen a bright shiny spot, oval in form, which has been found to be a true ear. Old naturalists supposed these strange structures helped in some way to intensify the penetrating, chirping sounds of crickets. No one for a moment thought they might be ears. Sir John Lubbock and other naturalists have decided that crickets, bees, ants and other little animals shall not keep their sense organs a secret from us any longer, and, although these are often in the least suspected places, still by careful experiments they are sure to be discovered, as was the cricket's ear. Some grasshoppers have no ears in their legs, and, as a rule, these cannot sing.
