AMERICANISM AND WAR

(By Robert Bridges)

I might cite a hundred cases equally as cruel and unfounded, and these persecutions are still going on. Men are still denied their liberties.

Eugene V. Debs still languishes in prison, while Henry Albers was set free on the "confessed" error by the government; and Albers was a million-aires who has passed away after his "victory."

Never in the history of America have such persecutions prevailed—such open violations of the Constitution.

During the Mexican war, James Russell Lowell issued his Biglow papers, and had been prosecuted as men in the late war were, he would be serving probably a thousand years in the penitentiary.

During the Civil War, General Burnside curbed some hostile newspapers; but President Lincoln sharply rebuked his general, saying that the denial of a free press "would likely do more harm than good."

When it was suggested that some hostile Chicago papers attacking Lincoln be suppressed, he replied: "You don't know how important and fundamental is the right of free speech and free press. On these rests the foundations of the Republic."

Lincoln was a statesman and a man of sense.

Take England as an example. No nation ever had a closer call in the late war than England had. For years it looked like Germany would win and that meant that there would be no more England and the English newspapers were permitted to go their limit in criticizing the government and the administration of the war; and Lord Northcliffe openly attacked Kitchener. And the few cases they had were punished by a short term of imprisonment, while in America, we gave them twenty years.

After the war was over every country in Europe pardoned its political prisoners. But in America many of them still sit in jail. Germany, England, France, Italy—each has turned loose her political prisoners.

The war in those countries was very bitter, but in none of them were such heavy penalties imposed as in America.

In Germany, Rosa Luxemburg and Karl Liebknecht were convicted and given four months; while in America Eugene V. Debs, one of our greatest thinkers, was handed ten years.

Look at the suppressions that have been going on as to free speech. Progressive speakers, those who believe that war is wrong; those that think that the laboring man should be given a square deal have been imprisoned all over the country.

Those persecutions are generally perpetuated under some hypocritical guise. It is usually the guise of "patriotism." If the predatory interests want to send a man to the penitentiary they raise a great howl about him being a "red," or "Bolshevik" and they put him behind the bars.

"Patriotism." By what divine right do these people get authority to declare what is patriotic and who is not patriotic? "On what meat has this our Caesar fed that he has grown so great?"

"Patriotism." Everybody is unpatriotic unless he cut his cloth according to their pattern. If one believes in long hours, poor pay, and wretched conditions for the toilers, he may be considered "patriotic." But if he believes that the laboring man should have a just and square deal, he becomes a dangerous agitator—a menace to the country.

In order to "cinch" these "dangerous" the most fundamental rules of law, the most revered and sacred constitutional provisions are overridden. We know that men who defend the "masters" have been thrown into prisons and kept there for indefinite periods without a hearing and without a charge being filed against them.

The most precious possession of humanity is liberty; and by a strange irony it seems that people will submit to restrictions on their liberty without a whimper of protest.

From the days when the feudal barons battled with the kings for their rights; and from the time when the free cities fought for their liberties; and from the succeeding periods when people themselves fought, bled and died for liberty, the story of human rights and freedom has been a trail of blood.

Before the war we had, or we thought we had, obtained a reasonable degree of liberty of speech and press; but it appears that these have been seriously curtailed. Indeed one is almost justified in saying that they have been lost—at least for the time being.

When the war was raging the people voluntarily surrendered some liberties. A nation at war is like an army; it must have a driver and know that he has the reins. We know that. We told President Wilson to go ahead and run the war, and we would stand behind him. We did stand behind him with all our might. We poured out our treasure and we sacrificed the precious lives of our sons. And we permitted the authorities to exercise a power never dreamed of in pre-war days.

But when the war was over what happened? Instead of being followed by an effort to reinstate things in their normal condition, a frenzy of persecution ensued. Over NINETEEN HUNDRED PERSECUTIONS followed. It was hysteria that can be compared with nothing so much as the "witch-hunting" of three hundred years ago.

It went even farther than that. In New York several men were fairly elected to the legislature. But, lo and behold, they were unseated because of alleged disloyalty. And the witch-hunting reached its climax when one over-heated patriot openly accused Charles E. Hughes of being unpatriotic, because Hughes thought the Socialists should be seated.

Newspapers everywhere were suppressed; the hand of violence was raised. Raid after raid was made. Property was destroyed. Literature was burned; books suppressed; editors and writers jailed. To appeal to the law or to the constitution evoked a smile—a smile of half pity, half contempt.

The one dominant idea in the minds of the fanatics was violence. Force! Use force and use plenty of it! That's the way to cure our ills. Oh, what a fallacy! All history points its condemning finger at the brutal and foolish idea that problems can be solved by using force. I say all history, from the earliest Greeks to our own day, whenever force is used it means an eclipse of the sun of reason and intelligence. It means that the lamp is out and we are groping in the dark.

Why? Because ideas cannot be killed by force. An idea is not a material thing. It is not made of atoms or of molecules. It is not material. Being immaterial you cannot kill it by shooting, nor by hanging, nor by burning at the stake, nor by hurling it into a dark, damp dungeon. (To be continued next week.)

A bishop was ordered by his physician to spend the winter in Cuba. The divine said it was impossible; he had so many engagements.
"Well, my reverend," said the specialist, "it means either Cuba or Heaven."
"Oh, in that case," replied the bishop, "I'll go to—Cuba!"
"I can't imagine why you call your place a bungalow!"
"Well, if it isn't a bungalow, what is it? The job was a bungle, and I owe for it!"
