FARM WAGES HAVE DROPPED 40 PER CENT

Harvest wages in Oregon will be reduced fully 40 per cent this year, according to D. E. Budd, an employment agent, who was asked in regard to the matter this morning, says a Portland paper.

"The whole country is full of idle men, and Oregon has her share," he says, "and when harvest time comes around in 1908, you will see men willing to work for $1.50 a day, where they refused $2.50 in 1907. The shutting down of the logging camps and railroad construction last fall was a bad blow on the laboring classes in the northwest, and although times are slowly getting better, there are still plenty of idle men in the country."

"Last year men could get work anywhere, and they would not stay more than a few days on one job, because work was so easy to get at the next camp or farm. Young men who had been raised in the country had gone away from their homes in large numbers as a result of high wages offered at the big camps. These young men are all at home this year, and they will be ready to do the harvesting when the crops are ripe, without the assistance of transient men. This condition will reduce the wages offered, and the farmers will have it all their own way this season."

"There are quite a number of idle laborers in Portland now, but they refuse what work offers. There is little to do but clear land or work on a farm, and this work does not suit them. They hang around the free lunch counters, bawling the hard times and hope for a return of the prosperity of the past three years, which I fear is somewhat remote."

"At the same time, good men can get all the work they want, and at living wages. They can get $40 an acre for 'grubbing' and if they are a mind to work steady, they can clear $15 to $20 an acre.
years, and I never saw a time when years, and I never saw a time when good men could not get work. The hobo, who pretends to want work, however, is likely to keep traveling from place to place, as employers can tell a good man from a habitual tramp, and are not likely to waste much time on the weary Willies, when they can get their pick of men. Last year the men had it all their own way, and they abused the privilege shamefully. The shoe is on the other foot now, and men must work in order to hold a job."

Logger Crushed by Falling Tree.
John Anderson, employed as a bucket at a logging camp near Silver Lake, in Snohomish county, Wash., was almost instantly killed by a falling tree one day last week. His skull was fractured, his body crushed and one leg broken. Anderson was a stranger and the whereabouts of his relatives is unknown.

It is freely predicted in Boise, that within 60 days there will be developed in western Idaho and eastern Oregon, one of the biggest oil fields in the United States. Experts say the field is 60 miles square. Oil men are now rushing into the country by the score.

RANGE WAR FEATURES IN THE SMITH CASE

Ex-Sheriff C. Sam Smith of Crook county, indicted jointly with Larkin Elliott for the burning of J. N. Williamson's shearing plant was arraigned yesterday afternoon and given until this morning to plead. At 9 o'clock this morning he entered a plea of not guilty.

It is thought the work of securing the jury, which will be drawn from among men who are interested in neither sheep nor cattle, will not begin until Wednesday morning.

Elliott was also finally arraigned this afternoon. He has not attempted to secure bondsmen and is still held in the county jail. His confession implicating Smith is in possession of District Attorney Menefee, who is jealously guarding it. While it is positively known Menefee has this confession, no one but the sheriff and himself has been allowed to set eyes on the document, and every effort has been made to keep its contents an absolute secret.

Ex-Sheriff Smith, the accused, does not appear to be at all uneasy over the outcome. He has many friends in the community.

The case promises a great legal battle. Interest is keen at every point where the cattle and sheep industry is understood. While the present case is not in any sense the outcome of the range war, yet the old-time animosities are not forgotten, even if they are tacitly ended, and many will attend the trial.

The attorneys for the defense are Wetherford and Wyatt, of Albany, and George W. Barnes of this city, while the prosecution has H. S. Wilson of The Dalles, in addition to the regular staff of Frank Menefee and W. A. Bell, assistant district attorney.

NEW WORKS IN ITALY.

Extensive New Railway Construction—New Drainage Work.

The minister of public works of Italy recently introduced a bill into the parliament of that country which contemplates an extensive program of railway construction. The total length of the lines to be built will amount to some 1000 miles and the expenditure involved to over $100,000,000.

The most important of the proposed lines are those from Rome to Naples, from Bologna to Florence, and from Genoa to Milan. All three railways will be double lines, and will follow the shortest routes. It is said that electric power will probably be used on most of them, and they are intended mainly for fast passenger traffic.

The bill also contemplates better facilities for tramway and motor car lines, in the shape of increased subsidies to private enterprise. A dispatch from Rome states that the bill will be passed by a great majority.

Another government project relates to drainage works and improvements in the Pontine marshes, which will involve an expenditure of about $2,000,000. When the drainage works have been completed it is expected that the soil will be found to be most fertile, and a certain amount of hydraulic power will be available.

Daily Socialists in Straits.

The Chicago Daily Socialist is again in financial difficulties. The announcement is made that $5000 must be raised before May 1 or the publication is in danger of suspending. It is said to be running about $400 a week behind and owes $40,000 which it borrowed. A. M. Simmons, managing editor of the paper, said last week according to the Chicago Record-Herald, that, although the need of capital was urgent, the paper would certainly be kept going until after the national convention of the socialist party, which opens in that city on May 11.

SHIP SICK HORSE TO EXPERTS.

Wyoming Sends an Animal to Bureau of Animal Industry at Washington.

In charge of Veterinarian W. C. Long, a horse afflicted with marsh fever, was last night shipped from Cheyenne to Washington, where the experts of the bureau of animal industry will make a careful study of the disease which the animal has contracted, says the Cheyenne Tribune.

The horse is the property of R. S. Van Tassel and was brought to Cheyenne several years ago, where an examination showed that it would in all probability be able to stand the journey, and as soon as arrangements could be made, the horse was placed aboard a car and is now being rushed eastward on a fast freight train.

Marsh fever is a very unusual disease and has more than once baffled the veterinarians of the bureau, so that the report of a well developed case on the Van Tassel ranch was immediately followed by efforts on the part of the government to have the horse shipped to Washington for observations.

FOUND BOILING LAKE.

Wyoming Town Situated Over a Sheet of Hot Water.

An important discovery was made here when C. W. Harold, while sinking a well for water for drinking purposes, encountered a strong flow of hot water similar to that in the Big Horn hot springs, says a Thermopolis, Wyo., dispatch. The water raised to a height of 30 feet in the 108-foot well and, although no chemical analysis has been made, the water is known to be impregnated with the same mineral substances that are found in the hot springs waters.

The striking of this flow of hot water indicates that the entire town is situated over a lake of boiling water, and at small expense every family in the place can enjoy medicinal hot water baths. Should other wells tap a similar flow, Thermopolis people believe this town will at once become more famous, capitalists being expected to establish resorts, bath houses, etc., to accommodate thousands of people bathing in medicinal waters.
