AMONG THE EXCHANGES OF THE INLAND EMPIRE

Prospector Blocks Street.

"You would not think an old prospector like me could cause a block in the streets of Philadelphia, would you," said a grizzled old man as he sat in the smoking apartment of the Pacific hotel last night. "But that's what happened," he added. "I was with my partner in the big city some 10 years ago, just after having closed a successful placer mining season in the Boise basin and had a bottle containing about $150 in gold dust. As we were going down the street my partner happened to meet an old friend of his who was an attorney, and in the course of conversation he mentioned about me having a bottle of gold dust. The attorney expressed a desire to see it and I took it from my overcoat pocket and handed it to him. The bottle was not large and he never gave a thought about its being heavy and let it slip through his hands to the walk where it crashed, spilling the yellow dust all over the walk. We at once gathered around the precious metal and began brushing it up, but the news soon spread that a miner had spilled a big bottle of gold dust on the walk and within three minutes such a crowd had gathered that it took the police fully half an hour to open the blockade."—Boise Capital News.

Northwest Scenery Best.

One of the most enthusiastic "See-America-first" boosters in the country just now is George H. Prince, vice president of the Mercantile National bank of St. Paul, says the Spokesman-Review. Mr. Prince is feeling sorry for the hordes of New Yorkers and middle westerners who "do" Europe every year by following the beaten paths through the Alps and the Pyrenees to exclaim over nature's wonders which would not be wonders at all if Americans knew their own country.

Mr. Prince has seen Europe and he has also seen most of America, so he is able to draw comparisons; but since taking the trip over the Canadian Pacific from Vancouver to Nelson, B. C., along the shores of Arrow lake, European scenery has no more attractions for him.

"Outside her historical associations Europe can not compare with America in point of interest to the traveler," said Mr. Prince. "The Alps and the Rhine, picturesque though they are, are neither so beautiful nor on so grand a scale as the scenery which we saw between Vancouver and Nelson. Arrow lake, a mountain-locked sheet of water with peaks and precipices on every side is as beautiful a lake as there is in the world. Every mile of road has its wonders. There are chasms, and precipices, and peaks besides the most wonderful cataracts. "At times we seemed lost in the mountains, with towering peaks on every side of us, but by turns and bends the tortuous road led out through the chasms. People in the east have no idea what wonderful scenery there is in America. I think in grandeur, beauty and magnificent distances the scenery in the northwest exceeds that of Colorado."

Scramble for Timber.

It is said that most of the cabins that were built last fall during the scramble for timber land in the Slean and Hly country are now occupied, and in several cases more than one person is yet residing on the same quarter section.

Some of the claims which had three and four contestants on them, last fall are entirely deserted now, the land long since having been proved upon under the timber and stone act.

Homesteaders are beginning to realize that it is an extremely difficult matter to hold a claim in the timber belt as the homestead and comply with the laws in every sense of the word, and to avoid any chance of losing their claims by being contested they are relinquishing to the government and placing timber and stone filings or else allow some one else to place the filing.—Central Oregonian.

All Caused by One Little Bee.

Mr. Worthington was "bitten" by a little, measly honey bee last Monday, the stroke being squarely between his eyes. You ought to see the shape and contour of his face! Both eyes swelled shut, his nose the size and shape of a ham, a small ham, and a "bump" on his forehead smaller than a haystack.—Irrigon Irrigator.

and the gold has not worn off the wheels of the band wagon. It is a chance to see a circus with all the warpaint on.

Speaking of animals, Tammen has only seven lions this season. Four lions are enough for most road shows, but Tammen has them all ages and all sizes, from the old black-maned father of the tribe down to the three baby cubs. The six tigers are also eye-openers and the elephants headed by that old German frau, Mamma, still retain their place on the bill as headliners.

From the concert under the big tent to the clown races—without which the children would have good right to consider themselves defrauded—the circus is worth seeing.

There is not enough room in which to mention all the feature acts, but here are a few of them: The Man Frog, who ties himself into so many knots that it is a real relief to see him take off his mask. As a contortionist the frog party has something on the best of them, and the way he caresses the back of his neck with his toes is worth any man's time.

The six trained elephants have learned some new stunts for this season. Floto, grown into quite a respectable mountain of flesh, like his celebrated namesake, does stunts on a barrel, walking all over the ring and then coming back again. Mamma dances the sailors hornpipe with her front legs, which is surely going some for a four-ton beast. They all walk on their hind legs and hurry through their drill like a squad of infantry.

Then there is the gentleman in purple bloomers, who throws butcher knives at two purple ladies, just managing to miss them every time. He winds up his act by setting the handles of the knives on fire and edging the purple ladies with flame, after which he throws about a dozen cleavers after the knives—a very uncomfortable part for all parties concerned, but they say he never makes a mistake.

DEMOCRATS ARE "DRY."

Weiser Convention Declares for State Wide Prohibition.

The democratic convention held in this city last night to elect delegates to the state conventions at Twin Falls and Wallace was largely attended and considerable interest and enthusiasm prevailed, says a Weiser letter to the Boise Capital News.

The resolutions passed unanimously instruct for William J. Bryan for president, the election of Fred T. Dubois and Henry Heitfeld to the national convention at Denver, the complete separation of church and state, denounce any and all attempts at church interference and dictation in the political affairs of the state, the literal enforcement of the provisions of section 3 of article 6 of the state constitution relating to the qualification of voters of the state and amendment to the constitution providing for state wide prohibition of the liquor traffic.
