Religion Proves Obstacle

That a difference in their religious beliefs was too great an obstacle for them to overcome in their married life s the claim made by S. L. McIntosh in a suit for divorce from Emily Mcntosh, which has been filed in cir-cuit court. He is a Protestant and the a Roman Catholic, he sets forth. They had agreed to refrain from dis-cuesing religious issues when they were married, he claims in his com-plaint, but he charges that his wife fulled to abide by this agreement and that they were unhappy as a result and finally could not longer live together, S. A. Newberry represents the plaintiff.
