U. S. NOTE TO ENGLAND

of cotton for a neutral destination only, the principal representative of the American cotton interests described it to his majesty's ambassador at Washington as conceding all the American interests could properly ask. It was never suggested that vessels or cargoes with an enemy destination should be allowed to proceed. His majesty's government were moreover given to stand that the provisions of arrangements were acceptable to the United States government.

"The plan referred to is the one which was entered into between the cotton shippers of this country and the British embassy, a portion of which is quoted in the statement of the British foreign office.

"Without discussing at this time the statement that 'it was never suggested that vessels or cargoes with an enemy destination should be allowed to proceed,' the foreign trade advisers who informally and unofficially represented the cotton shippers in the negotiations which led up to the so-called cotton arrangements, state that it was distinctly understood between Sir Cecil Arthur Spring Rice, the British ambassador at Washington, and Robert F. Rose, the foreign trade adviser, conducting this discussion on behalf of the American cotton exporters, that nothing done by the foreign trade advisers should be regarded as official and in no way binding the United States government to any arrangement reached or be construed as a recognition of the order in council to be issued, or the declaration of March 1, which had been issued.

"This statement was made to the British ambassador on March 2, when the first conference in the matter was held, was repeated at each subsequent conference and each time the absolute assertion from the British ambassador was received that in acting the foreign trade advisers were to be regarded as not representing the United States government in any manner.

"The American embassy at London cabled to the state department today that it had on recent covering the entire period since war began, the for the cotton shippers in any way, names of 33 ships carrying cargoes of American cotton which have been detained by Great Britain. Of these ships the cargoes of eight are before the prize court and ten have been released with their cargoes, three of them being permitted to go forward before the publication of the British order in council.

"The British government, the embassy says, has agreed to purchase all or a part of the cargoes of 13 of the ships detained. In several cases part of the cargo was put into prize court and part the government states it will purchase."

TWO POPULAR DEBUTANTES ENGAGED

Misses Marie Teller (left) and Margaret Andrews (right), popular debutantes in eastern society whose engagements have been announced. Miss Teller, whom the Grand Duke Michaelowitch, cousin of the czar, called the most beautiful woman in the world, is to be married to S. Bryce Wing. Miss Andrews' future husband is Morgan Belmont, son of August Belmont.

Fooling a Burglar.

A new means of preventing your house from being robbed by burglars has been evolved by a contributor to the Public Mind column. It is quite simple. Recognize the burglar on his first attempt, then notify him through the newspapers that a double-barreled shotgun is awaiting him next time.—Kansas City Star.

Saved-Off Sermon.

What a happy old world this might be if his Satanic majesty never cared to wander from his own fireside.—Indianapolis Star.

Non-Tarnishing Steel.

Steel made by a new process and said to be non-rusting, unshrinkable and untarnishable has been brought out by an English firm. It is especially adapted to use in making table cutlery, the claim being made that it retains its polish indefinitely with use, even when brought in contact with acid foods. The cost of this steel is about double that of ordinary steel.

CALIFORNIA VOLCANO AGAIN IN ERUPTION

PEOPLE IN HAT CREEK VALLEY ARE WARNED TO ESCAPE THE FLOOD OF LAVA.

Redding, Cal., May 21.—Mount Lassen, the only active volcano in the United States, is again in eruption. From shortly after midnight until 10 o'clock today huge columns of sulphurous smoke poured out of the crater and a river of mud and lava poured down the mountainside. Hat creek valley, in the eastern part of Shasta county, was practically inundated. On a number of farms in the path of the flow, buildings were destroyed and livestock killed, but residents of the valley, warned in time, fled and no lives were lost.

When the eruption started, Fred Seaborn, a government forest ranger, rode through the entire Hat creek valley warning the settlers, who, scantily clad, escaped to the hillsides out of the path of the flood.

The mud river moved 30 miles down the mountain, sweeping away bridges and converting roads into morasses.

KANSAS HAS BIG WHEAT CROP.

Topeka, Kan., May 21.—A yield of 136,600,000 bushels of winter wheat in Kansas this year is expected on present prospects by the Kansas board of agriculture, which today issued its May crop report. This yield would be the second largest in the state's history.

"Reporters suggest there has been a depreciation in the Kansas wheat prospects in the past month of about 12 per cent owing principally to damage by the Hessian fly and the chinch bug," says the report.

Her Criticism.

Wee Mabel had a little disagreement with her grandmother one day. She was relating the affair next morning to her parents and in conclusion she said with a sigh, "Well, grandma is certainly a very twee lady."
