NEW YORK FREIGHT HANDLERS REMAIN IDLE

New York, Jan. 3.—New York freight handlers, whose strike was assigned by regional railroad directors as one reason for including U.S. port in the embargo placed today on the movement of export freight into New York, Philadelphia and Boston, voted this afternoon to remain idle until the railroad wage adjustment board passed upon their demands.

A representative of the federal food board appeared at the meeting at which the vote was taken and pleaded with the men "for the public's sake" to place in transit perishables now on the city's docks, including food for the American army and starving peoples of Europe.

In reply the men said that they were not going to work unless they went in a body. Meanwhile the managers of all railroads entering the New York harbor district met late today to consider the strike situation.

SHERMAN JUMPS ON WAR DEPARTMENT

WANTS INFORMATION FURNISHED WHEN INQUIRIES ARE MADE REGARDING MEN IN FRANCE.

Washington, Jan. 3.—Senator Sherman of Illinois, republican criticized in an address today what he described as the use of trans-Atlantic cables for the transmission of detailed reports of President Wilson's visit abroad while parents were anxiously endeavoring with little success to obtain information relative to the welfare of their sons now in the American army over-seas.

"I have no objection to this news," he said, "but I want mothers who lie awake nights to obtain information first as to whether their sons are dead or in hospitals, and then the news."

Senator Sherman referred to press dispatches of which he said, described in detail the interior of the Mirat palace in Paris where the president and Mrs. Wilson are staying, and to accounts of receptions in news matters accredited to the Associated Press and other agencies.

Senator Thomas, of Colorado, said he was informed that "much of this stuff" has been prepared in advance by correspondents.

Senator Sherman asked the Colorado senator to make a personal investigation but added that the Associated Press had reported these items as cablegrams and that on previous occasions he had found the Association's reports accurate and that it had verified matters that could not be verified from other sources.

During his speech, Senator Sherman referred to repeated failure on his part to obtain information through the war department relative to soldiers abroad and declared the navy department was the only place where he had found "human sympathy, and prompt action."

ADMIRAL RODMAN FAVORS SINKING GERMAN SHIPS

CONTENDS THAT THE EXPENSE OF MAINTAINING THE SHIPS WOULD BE ENORMOUS.

Washington, Jan. 3.—Destruction of all capital ships of the German navy, surrendered to the allies, was recommended to the house naval affairs committee today by Rear Admiral Rodman, who commanded the American fleet in the North sea during the war.

"During the war the combined British and American fleets have had such a predominating superiority over the German fleet that it did not come out and fight us," Admiral Rodman said. "If that supremacy could be maintained when the German fleet was in existence, what would be the object in adding their ships to our force when the danger of their attacking us had been removed?"

"The expense of maintaining the ships would be enormous. The types are entirely different from those of the British and American fleet. They are equipped with different guns and use a different kind of ammunition. The expense of making them correspond to ours would be almost prohibitive."

"Furthermore, there is no object for the allies to keep them for protection. By the time Germany can build new ones and again become a competitor for the world's largest fleet, these ships will have become obsolete and would have to be thrown away anyhow."

Admiral Rodman said the ships should be taken out in the North sea and sunk "so deep that they could never be found again," adding that if the allies keep them, they will soon find that they "have annexed a herd of white elephants."

Asked how officers and enlisted men of the American navy compared with those of the British navy, Admiral Rodman said that in many respects American personnel as well as our ships, has shown points of superiority.

"Before the war our ships were equal to any in the world," he said. "Soon after we entered the war the efficiency of our fleet was lowered because of sending so many armed crews to the merchant service, and by the tremendous expansion. But after our fleet had been merged with the British grand fleet and we had time to get back to our old footing our fleet was equal to theirs in every respect. Now after a year of war there is not a shadow of difference between the two, and I believe that as far as our personnel is concerned, it is very much superior. This is particularly true of the commanding officers for no other reason than our officers are largely college men."

"The enlisted personnel of our navy is much more adaptable for the reason that our men are taught from their earliest school days to be self-reliant, and also because there is no great social distinction between the officers and men. In many cases they are drawn from the same social strata."

Admiral Rodman made it clear, however, that he did not want to appear to be drawing sharp contrasts between the navies of the two countries "because the British navy has proven that it is amply able to take care of itself and has helped ours, with the greatest friendliness, in many ways."

INQUIRY ABOUT CLAIMS AGAINST MEXICO.

Washington, Jan. 3.—Senator King of Utah, made an unsuccessful effort today to call up his resolution asking the secretary of state for information as to what steps, if any, have been taken relative to the settlement of claims of Americans resulting from Mexican depredations. At the senator's request it was referred to the foreign relations committee.

In seeking to call up the resolution, Senator King said claims for hundreds of millions of dollars have been filed with the state department and that inquiry there shows nothing has been done as to them.

be much less than it was in the year 1918."

Wage advances to railroad employees last year added between $600,000 and $700,000 to the payrolls, Mr. McAdoo testified. In addition the coal bill was $140,000,000 higher for the ten months of 1918 ending November 1 than the same period of 1917, and the cost of cross ties and lumber increased $65,000,000.

Many economies brought about under unified management, such as re-routing, common use of terminals and equipment, heavier loading and elimination of useless competition, Mr. McAdoo explained, will not be reflected until this year. Nevertheless, he said, reports from five of the seven operating regions show that on a group of selected principal items of economy savings totalling $85,576,000 have been effected.

"Many of the changes in railroad operation inaugurated during last year," the director general testified, "should prove of permanent value and should continue, if possible, regardless of what form of control is decided upon for the railroads."

The retiring director general told the senator how the government, taking over the railroads the first of last year at a time when they were threatened with physical and financial breakdown, had righted conditions gradually, moved 6,496,000 troops, hauled great quantities of food at a critical time in February when the very success of the war depended on the food situation and had hauled 7,033,000 more tons of bituminous coal during the ten months ending October 31 than in the same period the year before.

"Whatever inconveniences may have resulted to civilian travelers," he asserted, "are due entirely to war conditions and are in no way related to the fact that the railroads were under government control."

He emphasized that waterways should be used more extensively in coordination with railroads, but expressed doubt whether this would be done if the roads went back to competitive private management.
