

The Morning News

Morning News Building, Savannah, Ga.

SUNDAY, DECEMBER 4, 1904.

Registered at Postoffice in Savannah.

THE MORNING NEWS is published every day in the year, and served to subscribers in the city, or sent by mail; one week, 18 cents; one month, 70 cents; three months, $2.00; six months, $4.00; one year, $8.00.

THE MORNING NEWS by mail, six times a week (without Sunday issue), one month, 50 cents; three months, $1.50; six months, $3.00; one year, $6.00.

THE WEEKLY NEWS, two issues a week (Monday and Thursday), by mail, one year, $1.00.

Subscriptions payable in advance. Remit by money order, check or registered letter. Currency sent by mail at risk of sender.

Transient advertisements, other than local or reading notices, amusements and classified column, 10 cents a line. Fourteen lines of agate type—equal to one inch in depth—is the standard of measurement. Classified column advertisements, 1 cent a word each insertion. Every word and figure counted—No advertisement accepted for less than 15 cents week days, 25 cents Sundays. Contract rates and discounts made known on application at business office.

Orders for delivery of the Morning News to either residence or place of business can be made by mail or by telephone No. 210. Any irregularity in delivery should be immediately reported.

Letters and telegrams should be addressed "MORNING NEWS," Savannah, Ga.

EASTERN OFFICE, 23 Park Row, New York City, H. C. Faulkner, Manager.

34 PAGES.

IDEA TO NEW ADVERTISEMENTS

- Meetings—Savannah Lodge, No. 133, B. P. O. Elks, Memorial Service. Special Notices—At Joyce's To-morrow; Crew Notice, J. N. Wilson, Master; Lends Money, Empire Investment Co.; Ladies' Music Club. Business Notices—T.H. Bitts, Casino Restaurant; Sunday Dinner, Sommers' Cafe; Good Boys' Wheels, G. W. Thomas; When the Little Girl Needs Shoes, G. F. Cler; Fruits, Roos' Market; Ladies' Hand Bags, I. H. Friedman & Co.; Holiday or Wedding Gift Shopping, R. Van Keuren & Co.; Lovers of the Beautiful, Theus & Co.; Trucks, Conch-Kumman Carriage and Wagon Co.; Christmas Candles, Belsinger & Gross; Christmas Will Soon Be Here, A. L. Desoboullons. Amusements—First Artist Concert, Savannah Music Club. Lost—T. A. Bryson. The Great Christmas Store of Savannah—Foye & Eckstein. A Sale Before Christmas—B. H. Levy, Bro. & Co. In Looking for Holiday Gifts—Savannah Gas Company. Ready-to-wear Department—Leopold Adler. Chewing Tobacco—Dougan & Sheffal. Let Us Shoulder Your Troubles—Jackson & Gutman. Christmas Is Coming and Its Up To You—Ludden & Bates, Southern Music House. Great Holiday Sale of Men's Fine Hats—G. W. Merrill & Co. A Christmas Store in Real Earnest—Wash & Meyer. A Week of Grand Special Bargains—J. L. Morrison & Co. Christmas Gifts for Everybody—Estate Daniel Hogan. The Christmas Spirit Is On—The Metropolitan. Imperial Pilsener Beer—James O'Keefe, Distributor. Phenomenal Values—J. T. Cohen's Sons. A Fairland of Holiday Gifts—Connor Book Store. Libbey Christmas Outings—Thos. W. H. Co. Ready for the Rush—C. A. Munster. Completely Surrounded—Walker-Mulligan Furniture Company. Holiday Goods Sale—Gustave Eckstein & Co. A Straight Talk on Fake Whiskey Methods—Rose, the Distiller, Atlanta, Ga. The New Silverware Department—Leopold Adler, the Corner. Don't Forget The Bicycle—T. A. Bryson. Fine Stationery—M. S. & D. A. Byck. New Subscribers—Bell Telephone Co. Real Estate—Horse Rivers. Three New Homes in Savannah Today—Jerry George. Serviceable Sweaters—At The Bee Hive. Are Your Feet Tender—Globe Shoe Co. Gentlemen's Highest Grade Custom Made Footwear—Byck Bros. The Ford Motor Car—Electric Supply Co. Full Dress—Connor & Sullivan. Le Panto Cigars—Henry Solomon & Son. Red Lion Coughing Gln—Henry Solomon & Son. Buy Your Piano From Us—The Cable Company. Holiday Good Things—McGrath & Ransford. If You Had One of Our Rain Coats—Falk's, Around the Corner. Christmas Boxes—W. D. Skimins & Co. Christmas Past Approaching—The Dimonico Co. The Boy's Present—Edward Lovell's Sons. Lap Robes for Christmas—Leo Frank. Savannah Theater—Monday, Matinee and Night, "Sherlock Holmes" Wednesday, Matinee and Night, Barlow Minstrels; Saturday, Matinee and Night, "Quincy Adams Sawyer." Serpentine Care—Savannah-Georgia Laundry. Warburline Work Wonders—Rowlin-ski, Druggist. Sure Remedy—J. T. Shuptrine. Don't Make a Mistake—Letimora's, Eyeglass Guard—Dr. M. Schwab's Son. Druggists' Sundries—Livingston's Pharmacy. Charlotte Russe, Ice Creams, Etc.—At Condit's. Our Retiring From Business—Allen Bros. Get Our Prices—New York Cash Grocery. Our 17th Annual Holiday Sale—Dr. M. Schwab's Son. Our Offerings for 1905—R. V. Conner. Whisky—Lewis' 66; Casper North Carolina Sweet Mash. Foods—Postum Food Coffee. Sweets—Copper, Sweets, F. P. Ward & Co.; Bull Market, John H. Kimball & Co. Auction Sales—Carpets, Furniture, Etc., by C. H. Dorsett, Auctioneer.

SENATOR BACON'S LETTER. The letter of Senator Bacon to Representative Hardwick, which we publish elsewhere in to-day's Morning News, should be carefully read and pondered by the people of Georgia; in fact, by the people of the entire South. The arguments it contains in favor of the white people of the South standing together as long as the Fifteenth Amendment is in force are convincing. The white people, standing together under the banner of Democracy, wrested the control of the governments of the Southern States from the negroes and their white allies, and by standing together in the name of that party, have retained control of the South and made it prosperous. If they should abandon this wise policy and divide, the result would be a constant struggle between the whites and the negroes, the latter having a few white allies, or a struggle between two white parties each seeking the assistance of the negroes. In either case there would be brought about a condition of affairs that would result disastrously to the South's welfare. It is utterly impossible for two races, one inferior to the other, to live in harmony if they are in possession of equal political rights. If they could, they would amalgamate, and the people of the South would become a mongrel race, because with political equality would gradually come social equality. The only salvation of the South is for the white race to remain dominant, and it is the intention of the white people to continue so. They will do this even if they have to give up a part of their representation in Congress and the Electoral College. They will never consent to any condition of affairs that leads towards the Africanization of their section. Senator Bacon says there are indications that the Republicans are considering plans for bringing about a division of the white people of the South. He is in a position to know about such matters, and the people of this state and of the South have confidence in him as one of their leaders. It is to be hoped he is mistaken. In some of the recent utterances of leading Republican papers the impression is conveyed that it would be the part of wisdom on the part of the Republican party to let the South deal with her race problem as she thinks best. The Republican leaders may take this view. But, if they do not, and their party insists that the South shall put the negro on the same political plane with the white man or lose a part of her representation, the probability is she will give up a part of her representation, because the white race is of far more importance to her than a few more men in Congress and a few more electors in the Electoral College. Senator Bacon aims his arguments at the Republican leaders, but just at present Mr. Watson, the Populist leader, is a far greater force in dividing the white people of this state than the Republican leaders appear to be. In his speech at Crawfordsville the other day he ridiculed the Democrats for remaining huddled together because of the fear of negro domination. It looks very much as if it were his purpose to use his influence to the utmost to divide the white voters of this state. Did not Senator Bacon have him and his work in mind when he was writing his letter? The white people of this state, and of the entire South, understand the necessity of standing together. The prosperity of their section demands they shall do so until the negro question is adjusted. And the North is beginning to understand why the South is politically solid, and, as already pointed out, there are Republican leaders who are disposed not to embarrass her in her efforts to solve the problem that makes her solid. But, whatever the purpose of the Republican party may be, it is quite certain that the South is going to pursue the course that will enable her to maintain the domination of the white race within her borders. SOURCE OF THE COUNTRY'S WEALTH. The annual report of Secretary of Agriculture James Wilson, a full summary of which we published the other day, bristles with statements that seem almost marvelous, and yet they are supported by the best available data. Summed up, the report shows that the real source of the country's great wealth and prosperity is its farms. "The farmers of this country," the Secretary says, "have in two years produced wealth exceeding the output of all the gold mines of the entire world since Columbus discovered America." Economists and financiers everywhere watch the statistics of the gold production, and the discovery of a new gold-bearing territory of richness and promise has its influence on the world's finances. And yet in the short space of two years American farmers have dug out of the ground greater wealth than the gold miners have dug out in more than four hundred years! Is it in the least strange that a country with such an agricultural backing has pushed itself to the very front among the nations of the world? Corn is the country's greatest and most valuable crop. It is grown practically everywhere, from the Gulf of St. Lawrence to the Gulf of Mexico. It is a national crop, each state adding to the grand total of a thousand million dollars' value of the year's production. The second greatest crop is cotton, worth this year six-tenths as much as the corn crop. But this is not a national crop. Cotton is grown only in the Southern group of states. The value of the cotton crop this year is estimated at six hundred millions of dollars. Can the section having a monopoly of the production of this enormous crop of a staple that the world must have do otherwise than progress in wealth and power? Nor is cotton the South's one crop. Diversified farming is practiced to a greater extent each year in the South. Southern farms are producing about everything that can be grown in the temperate zone, and the section is on the high road to financial independence and even affluence. Still we have made only slight inroads upon our resources. There is especially one source of wealth for farmers that we have heretofore given little attention to in Georgia—the poultry business. Secretary Wilson says that in a single month of "their busy season" the hens of the United States lay eggs enough to "pay the year's interest on the national debt." These industrious and valuable hens live largely in other sections than ours. We have not hens enough to lay eggs for our own tables, and every week tens of thousands of dollars are sent out of Georgia to other states to pay for eggs and dressed poultry. Yet there isn't a single good reason why, instead of buying eggs, we should not have them for sale to other people. BREAKING DOWN AT THIRTY. What good is all of the wealth of John D. Rockefeller, Jr., going to do him if he loses his health? It is announced that he has been compelled to give up business for two or three months and go abroad. It seems he has been unable to stand the strain of his many business connections. He is a director in ten great corporations, and he is expected to know something about the affairs of each one of them—enough to enable him to act in its affairs intelligently. Besides, he has his regular business to attend to, and it is not improbable that once in a while he takes a flyer in Wall Street. He is said to be the richest man of his age in the world. He is only thirty, and leading Wall street men estimate that if his father were to die now he would control $1,000,000,000. This sum is so great that the mind can hardly grasp it. If Mr. Rockefeller wanted to it is probable he could bring on a money panic at any time, and could wreck about any corporation in this country. What pleasure does he get out of all of his wealth? Does the mere possession of it compensate him for the burden of taking care of it? Does the knowledge of the power it gives him make him satisfied to be its wielder? The legend under the picture read: "Hall Emperor; we who are about to die salute thee!" There could be no more striking summary of the situation. Stoessel and his magnificence from brave men, lacking authority from St. Petersburg, will die in their places before they will surrender. They are condemned to death for the glory of the Czar and the benefit of the military grafters who are fattening on the exigencies of the occasion. An ancient Indian prayer book was sold in New York the other day for $1,300, the name of the purchaser being withheld. It is understood that it was bought for J. Pierpont Morgan. It would be interesting to know if it was stolen from some church. PERSONAL. Former Senator George F. Edmunds recently visited one of the mountain hamlets in Vermont where he had not been for thirty years, and finding from inquiry of the local hotel-keeper, that the population had decreased about one-third, he said: "Well, I guess babies aren't born here very frequently, are they?" "Oh, 'bout once a week," replied the innkeeper. —Lord Ellesmere of England, already a well known writer under his pen name of "Charles Granville," has just issued his first novel bearing his full title. He is the owner of Hampton, the sire of five Derby winners. Though the owner of some of the finest private picture galleries in London, Bridgewater House boasts four Raphaels, fifteen Teniers, Titian's "Three Ages of Man," and Vandyck's only attempt to paint "The Virgin and the Child." BRIGHT BITS. —The Manicure Girl—"Aren't you afraid of dying an old maid?" The Hairdresser—"Certainly not. I dye one nearly every day."—Philadelphia Record. —Quite Some—"Father, what's the difference between a lunch and a luncheon?" "About a dollar and a quarter, my boy."—Cincinnati Commercial Tribune. —"Great guns!" exclaimed the absent-minded man. "I just stuck the lighted end of this cigar in my mouth." "How fortunate you were in discovering that," replied his wife, "for your good wife—Glasgow Evening Times. CURRENT COMMENT. The Charleston Post (Dem.) says: "The Congressmen are gathering at Washington and a good many of them are taking the opportunity to pack up their things preparatory to returning home for indefinite vacation. March 4 will see a pretty general clearing out of Democrats from Washington, except for the Southern members." The Baltimore Sun (Dem.) says: "The only practical change of policy in the South would be for the white people, or a larger part of them, to become Republicans. This the Republican party prevented by its consistent attitude of hostility to the South. The supreme act of hostility was in conferring the franchise upon the cotton-field negroes. Emissaries came from the North and organized them into a 'Republican' party, which at once engaged in systematic public brigandage and assault upon property and civilization. That has consolidated the white vote for self-protection down to the present time." The Mobile Register (Dem.) says: "Judge Emory Speer, of Georgia, hits the mark in the center when he declares that the white people of the South have not made sufficient appeal to the respectable blacks to assist in the control of crime, and in the legal punishment of criminals. In every country save this where superior and inferior races reside the superior race utilizes the inferior in what may be called the policing of the country. Wise men recognize that such policing has two results: It encourages the good element and it keeps very well in control the bad. The difficulty here is that the superior race does not wish to be in any way subject to the inferior, and will not be so; but there is opportunity to use the best of the inferior as a means for the superior advantage and for the good of the community, without conferring powers that may be objectionably used. Judge Speer is right. The difficulty here is that the superior race does not wish to be in any way subject to the inferior, and will not be so; but there is opportunity to use the best of the inferior as a means for the superior advantage and for the good of the community, without conferring powers that may be objectionably used. Judge Speer is right. The difficulty here is that the superior race does not wish to be in any way subject to the inferior, and will not be so; but there is opportunity to use the best of the inferior as a means for the superior advantage and for the good of the community, without conferring powers that may be objectionably used. Judge Speer is right. The difficulty here is that the superior race does not wish to be in any way subject to the inferior, and will not be so; but there is opportunity to use the best of the inferior as a means for the superior advantage and for the good of the community, without conferring powers that may be objectionably used. Judge Speer is right. The difficulty here is that the superior race does not wish to be in any way subject to the inferior, and will not be so; but there is opportunity to use the best of the inferior as a means for the superior advantage and for the good of the community, without conferring powers that may be objectionably used. Judge Speer is right. The difficulty here is that the superior race does not wish to be in any way subject to the inferior, and will not be so; but there is opportunity to use the best of the inferior as a means for the superior advantage and for the good of the community, without conferring powers that may be objectionably used. Judge Speer is right. The difficulty here is that the superior race does not wish to be in any way subject to the inferior, and will not be so; but there is opportunity to use the best of the inferior as a means for the superior advantage and for the good of the community, without conferring powers that may be objectionably used. Judge Speer is right. The difficulty here is that the superior race does not wish to be in any way subject to the inferior, and will not be so; but there is opportunity to use the best of the inferior as a means for the superior advantage and for the good of the community, without conferring powers that may be objectionably used. Judge Speer is right. The difficulty here is that the superior race does not wish to be in any way subject to the inferior, and will not be so; but there is opportunity to use the best of the inferior as a means for the superior advantage and for the good of the community, without conferring powers that may be objectionably used. Judge Speer is right. The difficulty here is that the superior race does not wish to be in any way subject to the inferior, and will not be so; but there is opportunity to use the best of the inferior as a means for the superior advantage and for the good of the community, without conferring powers that may be objectionably used. Judge Speer is right. The difficulty here is that the superior race does not wish to be in any way subject to the inferior, and will not be so; but there is opportunity to use the best of the inferior as a means for the superior advantage and for the good of the community, without conferring powers that may be objectionably used. Judge Speer is right. The difficulty here is that the superior race does not wish to be in any way subject to the inferior, and will not be so; but there is opportunity to use the best of the inferior as a means for the superior advantage and for the good of the community, without conferring powers that may be objectionably used. Judge Speer is right. The difficulty here is that the superior race does not wish to be in any way subject to the inferior, and will not be so; but there is opportunity to use the best of the inferior as a means for the superior advantage and for the good of the community, without conferring powers that may be objectionably used. Judge Speer is right. The difficulty here is that the superior race does not wish to be in any way subject to the inferior, and will not be so; but there is opportunity to use the best of the inferior as a means for the superior advantage and for the good of the community, without conferring powers that may be objectionably used. Judge Speer is right. The difficulty here is that the superior race does not wish to be in any way subject to the inferior, and will not be so; but there is opportunity to use the best of the inferior as a means for the superior advantage and for the good of the community, without conferring powers that may be objectionably used. Judge Speer is right. The difficulty here is that the superior race does not wish to be in any way subject to the inferior, and will not be so; but there is opportunity to use the best of the inferior as a means for the superior advantage and for the good of the community, without conferring powers that may be objectionably used. Judge Speer is right. The difficulty here is that the superior race does not wish to be in any way subject to the inferior, and will not be so; but there is opportunity to use the best of the inferior as a means for the superior advantage and for the good of the community, without conferring powers that may be objectionably used. Judge Speer is right. The difficulty here is that the superior race does not wish to be in any way subject to the inferior, and will not be so; but there is opportunity to use the best of the inferior as a means for the superior advantage and for the good of the community, without conferring powers that may be objectionably used. Judge Speer is right. The difficulty here is that the superior race does not wish to be in any way subject to the inferior, and will not be so; but there is opportunity to use the best of the inferior as a means for the superior advantage and for the good of the community, without conferring powers that may be objectionably used. Judge Speer is right. The difficulty here is that the superior race does not wish to be in any way subject to the inferior, and will not be so; but there is opportunity to use the best of the inferior as a means for the superior advantage and for the good of the community, without conferring powers that may be objectionably used. Judge Speer is right. The difficulty here is that the superior race does not wish to be in any way subject to the inferior, and will not be so; but there is opportunity to use the best of the inferior as a means for the superior advantage and for the good of the community, without conferring powers that may be objectionably used. Judge Speer is right. The difficulty here is that the superior race does not wish to be in any way subject to the inferior, and will not be so; but there is opportunity to use the best of the inferior as a means for the superior advantage and for the good of the community, without conferring powers that may be objectionably used. Judge Speer is right. The difficulty here is that the superior race does not wish to be in any way subject to the inferior, and will not be so; but there is opportunity to use the best of the inferior as a means for the superior advantage and for the good of the community, without conferring powers that may be objectionably used. Judge Speer is right. The difficulty here is that the superior race does not wish to be in any way subject to the inferior, and will not be so; but there is opportunity to use the best of the inferior as a means for the superior advantage and for the good of the community, without conferring powers that may be objectionably used. Judge Speer is right. The difficulty here is that the superior race does not wish to be in any way subject to the inferior, and will not be so; but there is opportunity to use the best of the inferior as a means for the superior advantage and for the good of the community, without conferring powers that may be objectionably used. Judge Speer is right. The difficulty here is that the superior race does not wish to be in any way subject to the inferior, and will not be so; but there is opportunity to use the best of the inferior as a means for the superior advantage and for the good of the community, without conferring powers that may be objectionably used. Judge Speer is right. The difficulty here is that the superior race does not wish to be in any way subject to the inferior, and will not be so; but there is opportunity to use the best of the inferior as a means for the superior advantage and for the good of the community, without conferring powers that may be objectionably used. Judge Speer is right. The difficulty here is that the superior race does not wish to be in any way subject to the inferior, and will not be so; but there is opportunity to use the best of the inferior as a means for the superior advantage and for the good of the community, without conferring powers that may be objectionably used. Judge Speer is right. The difficulty here is that the superior race does not wish to be in any way subject to the inferior, and will not be so; but there is opportunity to use the best of the inferior as a means for the superior advantage and for the good of the community, without conferring powers that may be objectionably used. Judge Speer is right. The difficulty here is that the superior race does not wish to be in any way subject to the inferior, and will not be so; but there is opportunity to use the best of the inferior as a means for the superior advantage and for the good of the community, without conferring powers that may be objectionably used. Judge Speer is right. The difficulty here is that the superior race does not wish to be in any way subject to the inferior, and will not be so; but there is opportunity to use the best of the inferior as a means for the superior advantage and for the good of the community, without conferring powers that may be objectionably used. Judge Speer is right. The difficulty here is that the superior race does not wish to be in any way subject to the inferior, and will not be so; but there is opportunity to use the best of the inferior as a means for the superior advantage and for the good of the community, without conferring powers that may be objectionably used. Judge Speer is right. The difficulty here is that the superior race does not wish to be in any way subject to the inferior, and will not be so; but there is opportunity to use the best of the inferior as a means for the superior advantage and for the good of the community, without conferring powers that may be objectionably used. Judge Speer is right. The difficulty here is that the superior race does not wish to be in any way subject to the inferior, and will not be so; but there is opportunity to use the best of the inferior as a means for the superior advantage and for the good of the community, without conferring powers that may be objectionably used. Judge Speer is right. The difficulty here is that the superior race does not wish to be in any way subject to the inferior, and will not be so; but there is opportunity to use the best of the inferior as a means for the superior advantage and for the good of the community, without conferring powers that may be objectionably used. Judge Speer is right. The difficulty here is that the superior race does not wish to be in any way subject to the inferior, and will not be so; but there is opportunity to use the best of the inferior as a means for the superior advantage and for the good of the community, without conferring powers that may be objectionably used. Judge Speer is right. The difficulty here is that the superior race does not wish to be in any way subject to the inferior, and will not be so; but there is opportunity to use the best of the inferior as a means for the superior advantage and for the good of the community, without conferring powers that may be objectionably used. Judge Speer is right. The difficulty here is that the superior race does not wish to be in any way subject to the inferior, and will not be so; but there is opportunity to use the best of the inferior as a means for the superior advantage and for the good of the community, without conferring powers that may be objectionably used. Judge Speer is right. The difficulty here is that the superior race does not wish to be in any way subject to the inferior, and will not be so; but there is opportunity to use the best of the inferior as a means for the superior advantage and for the good of the community, without conferring powers that may be objectionably used. Judge Speer is right. The difficulty here is that the superior race does not wish to be in any way subject to the inferior, and will not be so; but there is opportunity to use the best of the inferior as a means for the superior advantage and for the good of the community, without conferring powers that may be objectionably used. Judge Speer is right. The difficulty here is that the superior race does not wish to be in any way subject to the inferior, and will not be so; but there is opportunity to use the best of the inferior as a means for the superior advantage and for the good of the community, without conferring powers that may be objectionably used. Judge Speer is right. The difficulty here is that the superior race does not wish to be in any way subject to the inferior, and will not be so; but there is opportunity to use the best of the inferior as a means for the superior advantage and for the good of the community, without conferring powers that may be objectionably used. Judge Speer is right. The difficulty here is that the superior race does not wish to be in any way subject to the inferior, and will not be so; but there is opportunity to use the best of the inferior as a means for the superior advantage and for the good of the community, without conferring powers that may be objectionably used. Judge Speer is right. The difficulty here is that the superior race does not wish to be in any way subject to the inferior, and will not be so; but there is opportunity to use the best of the inferior as a means for the superior advantage and for the good of the community, without conferring powers that may be objectionably used. Judge Speer is right. The difficulty here is that the superior race does not wish to be in any way subject to the inferior, and will not be so; but there is opportunity to use the best of the inferior as a means for the superior advantage and for the good of the community, without conferring powers that may be objectionably used. Judge Speer is right. The difficulty here is that the superior race does not wish to be in any way subject to the inferior, and will not be so; but there is opportunity to use the best of the inferior as a means for the superior advantage and for the good of the community, without conferring powers that may be objectionably used. Judge Speer is right. The difficulty here is that the superior race does not wish to be in any way subject to the inferior, and will not be so; but there is opportunity to use the best of the inferior as a means for the superior advantage and for the good of the community, without conferring powers that may be objectionably used. Judge Speer is right. The difficulty here is that the superior race does not wish to be in any way subject to the inferior, and will not be so; but there is opportunity to use the best of the inferior as a means for the superior advantage and for the good of the community, without conferring powers that may be objectionably used. Judge Speer is right. The difficulty here is that the superior race does not wish to be in any way subject to the inferior, and will not be so; but there is opportunity to use the best of the inferior as a means for the superior advantage and for the good of the community, without conferring powers that may be objectionably used. Judge Speer is right. The difficulty here is that the superior race does not wish to be in any way subject to the inferior, and will not be so; but there is opportunity to use the best of the inferior as a means for the superior advantage and for the good of the community, without conferring powers that may be objectionably used. Judge Speer is right. The difficulty here is that the superior race does not wish to be in any way subject to the inferior, and will not be so; but there is opportunity to use the best of the inferior as a means for the superior advantage and for the good of the community, without conferring powers that may be objectionably used. Judge Speer is right. The difficulty here is that the superior race does not wish to be in any way subject to the inferior, and will not be so; but there is opportunity to use the best of the inferior as a means for the superior advantage and for the good of the community, without conferring powers that may be objectionably used. Judge Speer is right. The difficulty here is that the superior race does not wish to be in any way subject to the inferior, and will not be so; but there is opportunity to use the best of the inferior as a means for the superior advantage and for the good of the community, without conferring powers that may be objectionably used. Judge Speer is right. The difficulty here is that the superior race does not wish to be in any way subject to the inferior, and will not be so; but there is opportunity to use the best of the inferior as a means for the superior advantage and for the good of the community, without conferring powers that may be objectionably used. Judge Speer is right. The difficulty here is that the superior race does not wish to be in any way subject to the inferior, and will not be so; but there is opportunity to use the best of the inferior as a means for the superior advantage and for the good of the community, without conferring powers that may be objectionably used. Judge Speer is right. The difficulty here is that the superior race does not wish to be in any way subject to the inferior, and will not be so; but there is opportunity to use the best of the inferior as a means for the superior advantage and for the good of the community, without conferring powers that may be objectionably used. Judge Speer is right. The difficulty here is that the superior race does not wish to be in any way subject to the inferior, and will not be so; but there is opportunity to use the best of the inferior as a means for the superior advantage and for the good of the community, without conferring powers that may be objectionably used. Judge Speer is right. The difficulty here is that the superior race does not wish to be in any way subject to the inferior, and will not be so; but there is opportunity to use the best of the inferior as a means for the superior advantage and for the good of the community, without conferring powers that may be objectionably used. Judge Speer is right. The difficulty here is that the superior race does not wish to be in any way subject to the inferior, and will not be so; but there is opportunity to use the best of the inferior as a means for the superior advantage and for the good of the community, without conferring powers that may be objectionably used. Judge Speer is right. The difficulty here is that the superior race does not wish to be in any way subject to the inferior, and will not be so; but there is opportunity to use the best of the inferior as a means for the superior advantage and for the good of the community, without conferring powers that may be objectionably used. Judge Speer is right. The difficulty here is that the superior race does not wish to be in any way subject to the inferior, and will not be so; but there is opportunity to use the best of the inferior as a means for the superior advantage and for the good of the community, without conferring powers that may be objectionably used. Judge Speer is right. The difficulty here is that the superior race does not wish to be in any way subject to the inferior, and will not be so; but there is opportunity to use the best of the inferior as a means for the superior advantage and for the good of the community, without conferring powers that may be objectionably used. Judge Speer is right. The difficulty here is that the superior race does not wish to be in any way subject to the inferior, and will not be so; but there is opportunity to use the best of the inferior as a means for the superior advantage and for the good of the community, without conferring powers that may be objectionably used. Judge Speer is right. The difficulty here is that the superior race does not wish to be in any way subject to the inferior, and will not be so; but there is opportunity to use the best of the inferior as a means for the superior advantage and for the good of the community, without conferring powers that may be objectionably used. Judge Speer is right. The difficulty here is that the superior race does not wish to be in any way subject to the inferior, and will not be so; but there is opportunity to use the best of the inferior as a means for the superior advantage and for the good of the community, without conferring powers that may be objectionably used. Judge Speer is right. The difficulty here is that the superior race does not wish to be in any way subject to the inferior, and will not be so; but there is opportunity to use the best of the inferior as a means for the superior advantage and for the good of the community, without conferring powers that may be objectionably used. Judge Speer is right. The difficulty here is that the superior race does not wish to be in any way subject to the inferior, and will not be so; but there is opportunity to use the best of the inferior as a means for the superior advantage and for the good of the community, without conferring powers that may be objectionably used. Judge Speer is right. The difficulty here is that the superior race does not wish to be in any way subject to the inferior, and will not be so; but there is opportunity to use the best of the inferior as a means for the superior advantage and for the good of the community, without conferring powers that may be objectionably used. Judge Speer is right. The difficulty here is that the superior race does not wish to be in any way subject to the inferior, and will not be so; but there is opportunity to use the best of the inferior as a means for the superior advantage and for the good of the community, without conferring powers that may be objectionably used. Judge Speer is right. The difficulty here is that the superior race does not wish to be in any way subject to the inferior, and will not be so; but there is opportunity to use the best of the inferior as a means for the superior advantage and for the good of the community, without conferring powers that may be objectionably used. Judge Speer is right. The difficulty here is that the superior race does not wish to be in any way subject to the inferior, and will not be so; but there is opportunity to use the best of the inferior as a means for the superior advantage and for the good of the community, without conferring powers that may be objectionably used. Judge Speer is right. The difficulty here is that the superior race does not wish to be in any way subject to the inferior, and will not be so; but there is opportunity to use the best of the inferior as a means for the superior advantage and for the good of the community, without conferring powers that may be objectionably used. Judge Speer is right. The difficulty here is that the superior race does not wish to be in any way subject to the inferior, and will not be so; but there is opportunity to use the best of the inferior as a means for the superior advantage and for the good of the community, without conferring powers that may be objectionably used. Judge Speer is right. The difficulty here is that the superior race does not wish to be in any way subject to the inferior, and will not be so; but there is opportunity to use the best of the inferior as a means for the superior advantage and for the good of the community, without conferring powers that may be objectionably used. Judge Speer is right. The difficulty here is that the superior race does not wish to be in any way subject to the inferior, and will not be so; but there is opportunity to use the best of the inferior as a means for the superior advantage and for the good of the community, without conferring powers that may be objectionably used. Judge Speer is right. The difficulty here is that the superior race does not wish to be in any way subject to the inferior, and will not be so; but there is opportunity to use the best of the inferior as a means for the superior advantage and for the good of the community, without conferring powers that may be objectionably used. Judge Speer is right. The difficulty here is that the superior race does not wish to be in any way subject to the inferior, and will not be so; but there is opportunity to use the best of the inferior as a means for the superior advantage and for the good of the community, without conferring powers that may be objectionably used. Judge Speer is right. The difficulty here is that the superior race does not wish to be in any way subject to the inferior, and will not be so; but there is opportunity to use the best of the inferior as a means for the superior advantage and for the good of the community, without conferring powers that may be objectionably used. Judge Speer is right. The difficulty here is that the superior race does not wish to be in any way subject to the inferior, and will not be so; but there is opportunity to use the best of the inferior as a means for the superior advantage and for the good of the community, without conferring powers that may be objectionably used. Judge Speer is right. The difficulty here is that the superior race does not wish to be in any way subject to the inferior, and will not be so; but there is opportunity to use the best of the inferior as a means for the superior advantage and for the good of the community, without conferring powers that may be objectionably used. Judge Speer is right. The difficulty here is that the superior race does not wish to be in any way subject to the inferior, and will not be so; but there is opportunity to use the best of the inferior as a means for the superior advantage and for the good of the community, without conferring powers that may be objectionably used. Judge Speer is right. The difficulty here is that the superior race does not wish to be in any way subject to the inferior, and will not be so; but there is opportunity to use the best of the inferior as a means for the superior advantage and for the good of the community, without conferring powers that may be objectionably used. Judge Speer is right. The difficulty here is that the superior race does not wish to be in any way subject to the inferior, and will not be so; but there is opportunity to use the best of the inferior as a means for the superior advantage and for the good of the community, without conferring powers that may be objectionably used. Judge Speer is right. The difficulty here is that the superior race does not wish to be in any way subject to the inferior, and will not be so; but there is opportunity to use the best of the inferior as a means for the superior advantage and for the good of the community, without conferring powers that may be objectionably used. Judge Speer is right. The difficulty here is that the superior race does not wish to be in any way subject to the inferior, and will not be so; but there is opportunity to use the best of the inferior as a means for the superior advantage and for the good of the community, without conferring powers that may be objectionably used. Judge Speer is right. The difficulty here is that the superior race does not wish to be in any way subject to the inferior, and will not be so; but there is opportunity to use the best of the inferior as a means for the superior advantage and for the good of the community, without conferring powers that may be objectionably used. Judge Speer is right. The difficulty here is that the superior race does not wish to be in any way subject to the inferior, and will not be so; but there is opportunity to use the best of the inferior as a means for the superior advantage and for the good of the community, without conferring powers that may be objectionably used. Judge Speer is right. The difficulty here is that the superior race does not wish to be in any way subject to the inferior, and will not be so; but there is opportunity to use the best of the inferior as a means for the superior advantage and for the good of the community, without conferring powers that may be objectionably used. Judge Speer is right. The difficulty here is that the superior race does not wish to be in any way subject to the inferior, and will not be so; but there is opportunity to use the best of the inferior as a means for the superior advantage and for the good of the community, without conferring powers that may be objectionably used. Judge Speer is right. The difficulty here is that the superior race does not wish to be in any way subject to the inferior, and will not be so; but there is opportunity to use the best of the inferior as a means for the superior advantage and for the good of the community, without conferring powers that may be objectionably used. Judge Speer is right. The difficulty here is that the superior race does not wish to be in any way subject to the inferior, and will not be so; but there is opportunity to use the best of the inferior as a means for the superior advantage and for the good of the community, without conferring powers that may be objectionably used. Judge Speer is right. The difficulty here is that the superior race does not wish to be in any way subject to the inferior, and will not be so; but there is opportunity to use the best of the inferior as a means for the superior advantage and for the good of the community, without conferring powers that may be objectionably used. Judge Speer is right. The difficulty here is that the superior race does not wish to be in any way subject to the inferior, and will not be so; but there is opportunity to use the best of the inferior as a means for the superior advantage and for the good of the community, without conferring powers that may be objectionably used. Judge Speer is right. The difficulty here is that the superior race does not wish to be in any way subject to the inferior, and will not be so; but there is opportunity to use the best of the inferior as a means for the superior advantage and for the good of the community, without conferring powers that may be objectionably used. Judge Speer is right. The difficulty here is that the superior race does not wish to be in any way subject to the inferior, and will not be so; but there is opportunity to use the best of the inferior as a means for the superior advantage and for the good of the community, without conferring powers that may be objectionably used. Judge Speer is right. The difficulty here is that the superior race does not wish to be in any way subject to the inferior, and will not be so; but there is opportunity to use the best of the inferior as a means for the superior advantage and for the good of the community, without conferring powers that may be objectionably used. Judge Speer is right. The difficulty here is that the superior race does not wish to be in any way subject to the inferior, and will not be so; but there is opportunity to use the best of the inferior as a means for the superior advantage and for the good of the community, without conferring powers that may be objectionably used. Judge Speer is right. The difficulty here is that the superior race does not wish to be in any way subject to the inferior, and will not be so; but there is opportunity to use the best of the inferior as a means for the superior advantage and for the good of the community, without conferring powers that may be objectionably used. Judge Speer is right. The difficulty here is that the superior race does not wish to be in any way subject to the inferior, and will not be so; but there is opportunity to use the best of the inferior as a means for the superior advantage and for the good of the community, without conferring powers that may be objectionably used. Judge Speer is right. The difficulty here is that the superior race does not wish to be in any way subject to the inferior, and will not be so; but there is opportunity to use the best of the inferior as a means for the superior advantage and for the good of the community, without conferring powers that may be objectionably used. Judge Speer is right. The difficulty here is that the superior race does not wish to be in any way subject to the inferior, and will not be so; but there is opportunity to use the best of the inferior as a means for the superior advantage and for the good of the community, without conferring powers that may be objectionably used. Judge Speer is right. The difficulty here is that the superior race does not wish to be in any way subject to the inferior, and will not be so; but there is opportunity to use the best of the inferior as a means for the superior advantage and for the good of the community, without conferring powers that may be objectionably used. Judge Speer is right. The difficulty here is that the superior race does not wish to be in any way subject to the inferior, and will not be so; but there is opportunity to use the best of the inferior as a means for the superior advantage and for the good of the community, without conferring powers that may be objectionably used. Judge Speer is right. The difficulty here is that the superior race does not wish to be in any way subject to the inferior, and will not be so; but there is opportunity to use the best of the inferior as a means for the superior advantage and for the good of the community, without conferring powers that may be objectionably used. Judge Speer is right. The difficulty here is that the superior race does not wish to be in any way subject to the inferior, and will not be so; but there is opportunity to use the best of the inferior as a means for the superior advantage and for the good of the community, without conferring powers that may be objectionably used. Judge Speer is right. The difficulty here is that the superior race does not wish to be in any way subject to the inferior, and will not be so; but there is opportunity to use the best of the inferior as a means for the superior advantage and for the good of the community, without conferring powers that may be objectionably used. Judge Speer is right. The difficulty here is that the superior race does not wish to be in any way subject to the inferior, and will not be so; but there is opportunity to use the best of the inferior as a means for the superior advantage and for the good of the community, without conferring powers that may be objectionably used. Judge Speer is right. The difficulty here is that the superior race does not wish to be in any way subject to the inferior, and will not be so; but there is opportunity to use the best of the inferior as a means for the superior advantage and for the good of the community, without conferring powers that may be objectionably used. Judge Speer is right. The difficulty here is that the superior race does not wish to be in any way subject to the inferior, and will not be so; but there is opportunity to use the best of the inferior as a means for the superior advantage and for the good of the community, without conferring powers that may be objectionably used. Judge Speer is right. The difficulty here is that the superior race does not wish to be in any way subject to the inferior, and will not be so; but there is opportunity to use the best of the inferior as a means for the superior advantage and for the good of the community, without conferring powers that may be objectionably used. Judge Speer is right. The difficulty here is that the superior race does not wish to be in any way subject to the inferior, and will not be so; but there is opportunity to use the best of the inferior as a means for the superior advantage and for the good of the community, without conferring powers that may be objectionably used. Judge Speer is right. The difficulty here is that the superior race does not wish to be in any way subject to the inferior, and will not be so; but there is opportunity to use the best of the inferior as a means for the superior advantage and for the good of the community, without conferring powers that may be objectionably used. Judge Speer is right. The difficulty here is that the superior race does not wish to be in any way subject to the inferior, and will not be so; but there is opportunity to use the best of the inferior as a means for the superior advantage and for the good of the community, without conferring powers that may be objectionably used. Judge Speer is right. The difficulty here is that the superior race does not wish to be in any way subject to the inferior, and will not be so; but there is opportunity to use the best of the inferior as a means for the superior advantage and for the good of the community, without conferring powers that may be objectionably used. Judge Speer is right. The difficulty here is that the superior race does not wish to