Not Unusual Accident.

While J. L. Smith was building a fire at Mayfield in the stove of Z. T. Long & Co.'s store he became very near having a small fire.

He threw some coal oil in the stove, and upon striking a match to it, it suddenly exploded with a bang, and with so much force as to knock the stove over and greatly frighten those standing around. T. J. Carman's hair was slightly singed, and two little colored boys standing close by lost a part of their wearing apparel. — Fulton Leader.

FOR STOMACH SUFFERERS.

Don't Use Any Remedy That Keeps Its Formula a Secret.

People troubled with stomach weakness cannot afford to use a medicine unless they know what it contains.

Mi-o-na is the one remedy for stomach troubles that publishes its formula: chemically pure bismuth subgallate, to allay any inflammation of the stomach and bowels, cerium oxalate, to strengthen the stomach nerves; sodium bi-carbonate, to neutralize the poisonous acids that are present in stomach troubles; and nux vomica, which restores vigor to the digestive organs and tones up the whole nervous system.

This combination of valuable remedies is found only in Mi-o-na stomach tablets, and it so rarely fails to strengthen the digestive system, and cure even the worst form of stomach trouble, that Red Cross Pharmacy sell the remedy under guarantee to refund the money unless it cures.

A 50 cent box of Mi-o-na will give quick relief for indigestion, distress after eating, sleeplessness, or any of the other symptoms of stomach troubles. Unless it does this, the cost is nothing.

SOUTH FULTON.

Fulton was visited last Tuesday night by a very destructive fire, burning out the fronts of four buildings and partially destroying Jones & Chambers' and J. A. Miller's stores, consisting of men's furnishings, Ton Exem's fruit stand, Western Union Telegraph Co., and completely destroying C. R. Morris' restaurant, where the fire originated, also the offices of Dr. I. H. Reid, Dr. Seldon Cohn and Attorney H. T. Smith, who were situated in the second story. All were more or less covered by insurance except H. T. Smith's law office, which had expired a few days beforehand.

The farmers aid good roads meeting which was to have occurred Saturday afternoon was postponed until Saturday, March 2d, when a rousing meeting is expected to be held.

We were indeed glad to note that our friend Gypsy is still among the living and was brilliant enough to throw some stones at Cyclone, trying to apply him as being a troublesome fellow, or would soon give us trouble, when she is bound to know one of our greatest troubles is the Gipsies, a most abominable race—but I must confess this South Side Gypsy is peculiar to her nature.

The walk-out of the telephone girls at this place is still pending, and it is expected that a new manager will be sent here soon.

N-Know don't seem to know much these times and I reckon cousin Topsy has tied the cupid knot, as she is very silent. We would have thought, though, she would have given us a few dots about the matter.

The widow Cyclone has not started on his journey yet, as it will be a tiresome trip on account of the length of the journey, and she is making great arrangements. She says she don't associate with Gipsies, but is expecting to meet Mrs. G. M. Adams on her journey.

FOUNDER OF U. D. O.

Mrs. M. C. Goodlett, Well Known Woman, Nearing End.

A special from Nashville, Tenn., announces that Mrs. M. C. Goodlett, founder of the United Daughters of the Confederacy, and one of the most distinguished women of the South, is ill at her home, and fear is entertained that she will not recover.

She is a unique type of the old-time Southern woman. She is a descendant of two aristocratic families of the old world, the Douglasses of Scotland and the Meriwethers of England.

Her cousin, Captain Edward Meriwether, was the first Confederate killed on Kentucky soil, being shot when an escort to General N. B. Forrest, just before the battle of Fort Donelson.

Mrs. Goodlett was president of the Ladies' Auxiliary of the Nashville Confederate Home in 1890, and it was at her request that the name was changed to Daughters of Confederacy on May 10, 1892. Her death will be sincerely mourned all over the Southland.

RETRIBUTION.

The Thaw Trial Recalls the Fate of a Physician.

"They don't always get it as White did," said the asylum Superintendent, "but there are other ways. Now that one over there; notice him? Well, he has a story all right."

"So cold, cold," said the poor madman repeating the words over and over again, wringing his hands.

"You say he has a story? What is it?" And then the Superintendent sat down and related, in substance, the following:

"Several years ago Dr. —, a prominent physician in the city of Philadelphia, had occasion to make a dissection for an especial purpose: He had called at the college to inquire what cadavers might be available for his use. Subjects kept on hand in the pickling vat he did not want. Was there anything lately arrived? It happened that there was. The body of a young woman found frozen in the streets had been recently placed in the dead house.

"Queer case, doc," said one of the men who had brought in the body.

"We could not lay her out proper and she is a-sittin' on the operation table just like she was alive. Here she is," and he opened the door of the gruesome apartment. Even the doctor was startled and felt an uncanny sensation creep over him as he gazed at the dead girl seated upon the dissecting table, with her back against the wall of the room and partly draped with the white cloth that had been thrown over her. But most remarkable was the position of the right arm which was raised above the head as if in menace. Of course the frozen condition of the corpse was responsible both for the sitting posture and the upraised arm, but the effect was certainly weird. "Yes, it does look queer," said the doctor, "but we must get her limbered up so I can begin operations. Must have more heat here." The attendant went to the far end of the room to turn on more steam in the radiator, leaving the medical man standing beside the subject. Outside the darkness was intense and an icy wind shrieked and wailed drearily around the building. When the man turned to attend to the temperature of the place the doctor was stooping down and seemed to be regarding one of the feet that hung over the edge of the table. Suddenly a loud and terrible cry terrified the attendant and caused him to hastily return. Across the girl's lap rested the form of the physician, her hand upon his neck, nor did he ever recover reason, but from what could be gathered from his broken and insane babble it seemed that when the girl's dead and icy hand fell upon his neck he looked up and recognized the face of one whose downfall he had brought about, and indirectly her death. The suddenness of the recognition, and the circumstances, together with the shock of the falling hand, had dethroned reason. Of course, the strange falling of the arm was caused by the increase of heat in the room, but, happening as it did, it was certainly terrifying. "And that is why," said the official, "the once brilliant and famous physician now paces his cell a hopeless maniac. A curious yarn, I will admit, but I will vouch for its truth."—Jacob Herrington in Houston Post.

This man bought a supply of tobacco without acquainting himself with the distinctive taste of SCHNAPPS Tobacco, which has the cheering qualities that gratify his desire to chew, and at less expense than cheap tobacco.

SCHNAPPS has been advertised in this paper so that every chewer has had an opportunity to get acquainted with the facts and know that drugs are not used to produce the cheering quality found in the famous Piedmont country fine-cured tobaccos, and that SCHNAPPS is what he ought to chew. Still there are chewers who accept other and cheaper tobaccos that do not give the same pleasure.

Some day they'll get a taste of the real Schnapps—they'll realize what enjoyment they've missed by not getting SCHNAPPS long ago—then they'll feel like kicking themselves.

SCHNAPPS is sold everywhere in 5 cent cuts, and 10 and 15 cent plugs. Be sure you get the genuine.
