In Memory of Little Estie Johnson.

On Feb. 22 at twelve o'clock p. m. the angel of death entered the home of Mr. and Mrs. James Johnson and snatched from their bosom and home their precious baby. Little Estie was born Sept. 20, 1909, died Feb. 22, 1911, age one year five months and one day. The sky is now hung with black and somber clouds, vision is obscured with the gloom of sorrow and every sound that strikes the ear has in it a cadence of despair without the presence of the loved ones, who has gone from their companionship to live with the angels where peace is forever more. The only consolation that is vouchsafed to them is the sweet realization of the fact that their loved ones are at rest. Bending over the open casket looking at the folded hands that will never clasp mother's again in this world is safe with the angels in heaven.

On April 4, 1910, little Worthey, age 3 years 8 months and 24 days, was called by the gentle voice of our blessed Saviour to that sweet home up yonder. The poor little worn frames that were once so racked with the agonies of pain are now sweetly sleeping in the arms of our loving Saviour.

It is hard, oh, so hard to part with our dear children, but they can rest assured that their loss is Heaven's gain, and 'twill be only a little while until we will cross the dark river and join our precious children among the hosts of saved on the other bright shore.

The remains were laid to rest at Old Republic on the following day in the presence of a host of sorrowing friends, Rev. Jones conducting the funeral service. We extend our sympathy to the bereaved family, and pray God to comfort and bless them with the great consolation that the parting here on earth with their dear children will not be forever, but will meet them in that land where parting will be no more.

Another little lamb has gone to dwell with him who gave.
Another little darling babe is sheltered in the grave.
God needed one more angel child amidst his shining band.
And so he bent with loving smile and clasped our darling's hand.
ONE THAT LOVED HIM.

Miss Walters' Class.

The class was seen in a recital at the opera house last Friday night in a very interesting program under the head of the Shakespearean Burlesquers. Fact is there were the usual two parts with a Shakespeare-burlesque only in the first part, but the manner in which the class acquitted themselves in this sketch entitles them to this distinction.

The recital opened with songs and drills by the juvenile members and then came the title part, "Petruchio's Widow." Miss Ina Nailling was cast for the widow and right well did she sustain the part. Miss Nailling takes the lead with the most satisfactory assurances and with the confidence of one accustomed to the center of the stage. The young lady has the advantage of acting talent, a good voice, presence and magnetism, and the training under Miss Walters has developed the Shakespearean cult and a versatility in her work.

John Harrison was the Romeo with the shattered hopes and Geo. Kinkle the Shylock, sustaining the male section of the cast with considerable effect. And then there were seen three of Shakespeare's heroines by as many talented young ladies. These were Helena by Miss Ruth McConnell, Desdemona by Miss Ruby Mays and Jessica by Miss Allie B. Campbell. These parts were cast in exceptionally good hands with the evidence of a master hand directing the work. It was altogether a splendid conception and interpretation of the Shakespearean school with a command of the humorous or burlesque effects.

In part second was the "Prisoner's Plea" by Ben Welch, the "Happy Pair," a comedieta by Paul Erwin and Virginia Swiggart, a vocal number by the boys, "Playing the Society Belle" by Miss Gladys Raymer, and "Manners and Modes," a millinery burlesque by Misses Ruby Mays, Mary Dahnke, Allie B. Campbell, Janie Garner, Virginia Swiggart, Miss McConnell, Louise Lutten, Ina Nailling. The entire program was interesting indeed. The young men received a storm of applause in their chorus and the millinery burlesque in the hands of these young ladies was a genuine satire on shopping. It was an interesting sketch illustrating the whims and caprices of the downtown shopper and the shopping girl in her element. In the preceding numbers there were two very decided achievements in expression in the parts assumed by Miss Virginia Swiggart and Miss Gladys Raymer. The young ladies are both accomplished in this work.

The evening was a distinct success from a literary standpoint and a treat to those who enjoy the humorous side of life. Miss Walters has developed the fact that she is an accomplished teacher as well as a talented lady. She has the largest class in expression ever assembled in Union City and she is doing a noble part in the work of developing the mental and expression faculties.

The Big Fun Show.

That popular attraction, Coburn's Greater Minstrels, with their funny comedians, splendid dancers, uproarious, rollicking, laughter-provoking end men, and jokers, will be seen again this season at Reynolds Opera House next Monday night, March 13. No introduction is needed to any man, woman or child in America, no guarantee required as to the merits of this company as a first-class, reliable, enjoyable and progressive old-time minstrel show. The singers are the best, the music the latest, the comedy the cleanest, and the fun the funniest of all the minstrel companies who make their yearly visits to Union City.

The old saying that "all minstrel shows are alike" does not hold good with Joe Coburn's attractions for the reason that he brings a new show every year, new faces, new novelty and comedy features, new scenery, costumes, music and comedians. The performers must be live ones, their work clean and artistic, their music, jokes and acts the latest or there is no place for them with the big show. Coburn's Minstrels never disappoint, never fail to please, and never break a contract either with the manager or the public. It's a good, wholesome, clean attraction.

Frecks.

Esq. Whitson exhibited a curiosity in the office this week, a lamb's head without a mouth. The lamb was discovered by B. F. Merrell, of Terrell. It was developed in other ways except that portion of the head where the mouth should have been. A calf was also born north of town a few days ago, developed in every way except the terminal extremity, in which the organism was displaced altogether with a solid growth. The calf belonged to Mr. Tom Hamilton and was suckling a few hours after birth.

Great Boone Spectacle Coming.

"Daniel Boone on the Trail" is coming with its tribe of full blooded Sioux Indians, its pack of Siberian wolves, its den of bears, and its great St. Bernard dogs just to show the natives of Union City how Daniel did things up in the earlier pioneer days.

Where is the fireside where the great stories have not filled the old and young with pride. Boone, though dead, his memory lives forever in the hearts of his race. "Daniel Boone on the Trail" can truthfully be called one of the real successes of the season. The public are growing tired of seeing the moving pictures of some Indian story in which an actor is painted to represent the savage Indian. They long for more realism, as in Daniel Boone, where the savage is played by a real Indian, one that cannot speak other than his native tongue.

In Boone you will see these painted devils, as the earlier settlers called them, burn the Boon cabin; you will hear their weird chant as did Boone in the night when he found himself homeless, a prisoner in the hands of the savages.

This is one of the plays dealing with romance of colonial days, a play that fires the heart of every true man, woman and child. The coming of the night, the burning of the last stick and the attack of the howling wolves is worked behind a large screen curtain and in full view of the audience, as well as the great den scene in which Boone's daughter is thrown in among the bears and Boone's thrilling rescue, which calls forth great applause from the parquet as well as sets the gallery gods wild with excitement.

The story of Boone is a pure, sweet romance filled with a great something that is needed to weather the success of any dramatic production.

Bounding Elk, the great Sioux warrior, is with the company and chief of the tribe of Indians carried. This famous old warrior fought against Custer in the battle of the Little Big Horn and was near Custer when he fell. The old war horse is in his 90th year and his eyes have not ceased to sparkle with fire when the stories of the Indian wars are told. He is very quiet and seldom speaks. Who knows? Down deep in his broken heart there is still raging a battle in his conscience of the great wrong done his people.

Round Trip.

On Friday, Feb. 24, I left for Kentucky, stayed all night with A. M. Roper between Hickman and Moscow; left his place at 7:45, went to Hickman and took dinner with my son, Ben Harrison, then went to town and shook hands with my old friend, Ferd Berendes, and many others; came to Union City, left at 4 p. m. for Rives, took supper with my friend, Fount Holloway, came home at 7:15, where I stayed until 7:45 Sunday morning. I then went to Paducah, stayed with my daughter and family until 4 a. m. Monday, then went to Rives, went to Frank Holloway's and awakened him and his family, ate breakfast and came home at 10:40 a. m. Monday.

DICK HARRISON.
