Mr. Felix Meier, an ingenious me-and accuracy of its performances, eclipses the far-famed Strasburg clock, which it resembles in some particulars. It was exhibited on Saturday at the residence of Mr. Meier, 477

Sherman street, to representatives of the press and a few specially invited walnut frame elaborately carved and ornamented. It is called the American National and Astronomical Clock.

Very appropriately the crowning figure is that of Liberty, upon a canopy over the head of Washington, who is seated upon a marble dome. The the figure of Father Time. The strik-ing of this clock is its interesting per-formance. At the quarter hour the igure of the infant strikes its tiny bell; at the half hour the figure of the youth strikes its bell of louder tone;

at the third quarter the man strikes his bell, and at the full hour the gray-beard. Then the figure of Time steps out and tolls the hour. Then two small figures throw open doors in the columns on either side of Washington, and there is a procession of the Presi-dents of the United States. As the procession moves Washington rises and salutes each figure as it passes, and it in turn salutes him. They move through the door on the other side and it is then closed behind them.

The figures of the Presidents are pretty fair likenesses of the persons they are intended to represent. This procession moves to the accompanito count us among her family, and let us share their fresh butter and sweet cream. These and the strawberries, and the chickens, were all very nice, but the most refreshing sight there was a real genuine servant.

She was a middle-aged woman, with horny hands, hair touched with gray, and a patient, sad expression in her eyes. Her voice was low and pleasant, and her smile very winning, although she was uncommonly plain, and bore marks of an encounter with that destroyer of beauty—the small-pox.

Catherine—she answered to no such pet name as "Katy," or "Kitty"—always wore a clean, well-starched print, with a frill of the same at the neck; a checked apron, tied with tape around her waist, and her hair was always combed smoothly over her fore-head. She was one of those rare women who can get up a dinner, and then, as if by magic, put herself in per-fect order to serve at table.

Catherine was doing double duty at this time. The boy, whose duty it was to milk seven cows and feed two hundred hens, had gone home, ill, and as the men were all busy in the harvestfields, his work came on her. The farmer had gone down to New York to get another man, and was expected home the next day.

That evening, we went out to see Catherine milk, and, as we stood beside her and the delicate buff-colored Jersey cow she was milking, we fell into conversation with her. She told us she was well acquainted with her work, having been a farm-servant in "Hengland." She thought work lighter and wages better here than there, and remarked: "If servants were willing to be like servants here, and not be always struggling to look like ladies, they might lay by a good bit for a sick day, or for old age."

I said that it was cheering to meet one who was contented with her lot; upon which she heaved a deep sigh, and I saw that it was the same old story—"an aching void," if no deeper

"Well, one sighs for the very green earth of his native land," I said. "Oh, well, I don't know about that, ma'am; I never think of that. It's just as green and sweet here. God's earth is about the same all over;" and again there was a deep, deep sigh.

We followed Catherine as she bore the shining pails into the dairy, and there we met the lady of the farm. Yes, we mean just that, for she was a lady as well as a farmer's wife. She met Catherine with a smile, and

"Be patient one more milking, Catherine. The master's coming to-morrow with a man who will be twice the help to you Joe was." Catherine smiled and replied: "I'm Catherine stood in the doorway, the picture of neatness. She was dressed in one of her "Henglish gowns," in which good-sized cowslips reposed on a ground of refreshing lilac color. I complimented her dress, and her high-topped comb, and her broad mus-lin collar, when she smiled and replied:

"These all were given me at a fair at 'ome, years agone, and I have worn them but twice. Some way, I just felt like dressing up this afternoon. Perhaps it was to please you, who have spoke so kind to me."

"Thank you, Catherine. Here comes the wagon. See what a great muscular fellow the master has brought!" The master gave the reins to one of the hay-makers who was just coming in to tea, bade another to take Timothy's "box" into the barn-chamber, and then he walked into the kitchen with his

He then held her off at arms' length

"Is it ye, indeed, Catherine, that thought dead, found by a mericle?" "O Timothy!" gasped Catherine,
"I'd long thought ye dead in Haustralia!"

"I never set foot on it, sinner as I was to tell ye I was goin'."

Here we all withdrew from what should be a strictly private conference. That night Catherine tapped at my door; and, when admitted, she said, with a courtesy:

"I couldn't let ye sleep, ma'am, till I'd explained, lest ye might think me an onmodest girl that a stranger would dare be kissing.

them sufficiently, he was inclined to the belief that they told the truth. He re-flected upon the subject, and finally laid down the course he would pursue. He ordered that the man in change of Mr. Filchum's geese should gather together all the geese upon the place, and repair with them to an open piece of cleared pasture land, on rising ground, at a point about half way between the two localities—the farm of Mr. F. and the farms of the complain-

Well, evening drew on very shortly after the geese had eaten the last of their meal, and the Judge then directed that every person, saving alone the four parties in the suit, should withdraw behind a thick copse of birches and maples, and when they had gone, the farmers were to call out to the geese, as was their wont when gathering them for the evening meal, and then each was to turn toward his home—and we will say that from the elevated position where the gathering had been held the farm buildings of all were in sight—those of the three complainants being in one direction, and those of Mr. Filchum in a direction nearly opposite.

Some of the gentlemen of the Sewing Machine Committee were residents of Europe, others of America, and they were all selected on account of their peculiar fitness to perform the task imposed upon them. They spent over six weeks in examining sewing machines, and the tests applied were most thorough and exhaustive.

The result of this trial shows that the claim that the No. 8 possesses many points of superiority over any other machine was fully endorsed by the committee.

The No. 8 is not the old style Wheeler & Wilson Sewing Machine improved or changed, but is An Entirely New Invention. The No. 6 and No. 7 STRAIGHT Needle Manufacturing Machines are especially recommended for SHOEMAKERS' and TAILORS' use.
