TED COY, OF YALE, IS STAR OF YEAR

Timid on the Gridiron. He Is a Terror When in Action.

POWER LIES IN HIS LEGS

Drop-Kicked Field Goal at 55 Yards in His Freshman Year.

The greatest star in football today is Ted Coy, of Yale. The same thing could have been said last year with just as little fear of contradiction.

Coy, as timid as a schoolgirl when on the gridiron, is a terror in action. He forgets everything but the fact that Yale must win, and the Princeton line remembers to its sorrow how an attempt was made to stop his vicious rushes a year ago.

Experts say that Coy's great power is in his legs. He weighs less than 160 pounds, and he is only 5 foot 10 1/2 inches high. The proof that his wonderful power is in his legs is shown by his marvelous punts. He is the greatest punter in the world. It is on Coy that Yale depends for a complete string of victories this season.

Drop-Kicking First Attracts Attention.

The wonderful career of Ted Coy as a football hero began four years ago, when, as a freshman, he stood in the middle of the Yale field and sent a drop kick whirling, over the goal posts, 55 yards away. This occurred when the varsity team was taking a rest and the freshmen were permitted to romp over the gridiron for exercise.

"Who is that boy?" one of the coaches asked Walter Camp.

"Wait a minute," replied Camp. "Watch him. He is about to try a punt."

Punts Seventy Yards.

With a pistonlike drive of his leg the youngster stuck his toe into the ball, and it went spinning across the field for seventy yards.

"Why, that kid is a marvel," observed the coach. "Who is he?"

"That is Ted Coy, a freshman," replied Mr. Camp. "He is a son of Professor Coy, principal of the school at Hotchkiss, Conn., an old Yale man. Don't you remember his brother, 'Sheck' Coy, who played on the varsity some years ago?"

Totally unconscious of the fact that he was attracting attention from the varsity coaches, Coy continued to make those wonderful punts. His leg apparently had the force of a pile-driver. No matter how he kicked the ball, the terrible force behind it would send it skimming over space. The coach walked out and tapped Coy on the shoulder.

He Is Very Timid.

"Try to kick a high one straight toward the post," suggested the coach. "Why," stammered Coy, "wasn't I doing it right?"

He tried again and again, but he was so covered with embarrassment that his kicks fell shorter and shorter. As soon as he got a good opportunity the freshman quietly slipped off the field, and nobody saw him for two or three days. After being noticed by a varsity coach he was too timid to even don a uniform.

The freshmen were not long in learning of Coy's ability, however, and two weeks later he appeared in the line-up of the lower class team. To this day, they talk in Yale of how he ripped up that opposing line as if it was made of cardboard.

The next year Coy reached the height of his ambition, and appeared with the big "Y" on his shirt front. That fall he tore the Princeton line into ribbons and turned defeat into victory. Last year he did the same thing, carrying the whole Princeton rush line on his shoulders.

"It is pretty hard to figure how Coy could be a greater football player," said James Hogan, the former Yale captain. "But his failure to be noted means a world wonder has first year was due to his own shyness. Coy is a natural punter. He could kick just as well when he started as he can now. Coaching has been of little avail to him."

MOST CAPTAINS FROM LINE.

Ristine is the Fourth Center to Lead Tiger Team.

Carl L. Ristine, captain of the 1909 Tigers, is the fourth center who has held that position on the University of Missouri teams. Most of the leaders of the twenty teams that have represented Missouri were picked from the line. Only one man has held the captaincy more than two years. That was Charles E. Young, full back, who was captain of the '03, '04 and '05 teams.

A full list of the Tiger captains follows:

- 1890—William R. Litchell, center.
- 1891—Curtis Hill, quarter.
- 1892—J. L. Shawhan, left half.
- 1893—C. E. Young, full back.
- 1894—C. E. Young, full back.
- 1895—C. E. Young, full back.
- 1896—Thomas Shawhan, left half.
- 1897—John Hill, right guard.
- 1898—J. P. Howard, center.
- 1899—John Krumm, center.
- 1900—Carl Kause, right tackle.
- 1901—Charles Wagner, right tackle.
- 1902—M. E. Ely, right tackle.
- 1903—Almer C. Blaney, quarter.
- 1904—H. H. Hagyard, right tackle.
- 1905—H. W. Anderson, right guard.
- 1906—H. W. Tiffin, full back.
- 1907—Eugene Safford, left end.
- 1908—E. L. Miller, right tackle.
- 1909—E. L. Miller, right tackle.
- 1910—Carl L. Ristine, center.
