USEFUL COMBINATIONS. tachable Hoes and Handle for Use the Gard on.

Herewith pen sketch of a combina-tion detachable hoe and handle for use in the garden, which I have used to advantage. The handle is of wood, like the ordinary hoe handle, but the ferule at the business end is square and of steel, tempered hard, with a threaded hole running through the solid end (mine was three inches solid) for a threaded steel screw bolt. The hoe blades have a round hole for the insertion of the screw bolt and a plate of steel with a square hole riveted firmly to the blade. The square end of the ferule on the handle fits snugly into the square hole in the plate, holding the hoe blade in a fixed position and preventing any stress on the screw bolt tending to unserew it. The advantage of this hoe is the saving of storage room, for here you have as many different shaped hoe blades as your fancy or necessity may dictate, and only one handle, though it were wishing to use more than one blade at one time. The facility with which one can sharpen the hoes is remarkable, merely taking them off the hand e and putting them to the grindstone.

The various forms of blades are only such as I had made myself. The round one I found very handy in stony ground for breaking clods, the square one in any land.

All of my bludes were made of old blades, and were light; the long-toothed and also smooth-edged blades I found very handy for young weeds. I had also several blades of the shape "D" of various lengths and widths, the longer the blade the heavier the steel and the thicker the riveted plate -B. W. Drinkard, in American

It has given satisfaction to millions and met with the approval of the medical profession, because it acts on the Kid-neys, Liver and Bowels without weak-ening them and it is perfectly free from every objectionable substance. Syrup of Figs is for sale by all drug-gists in 50c and $1 bottles, but it is manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co. only, whose name is printed on every package, also the name, Syrup of Figs, and being well informed, you will not

Don't Blame the Cook

If a baking powder is not uniform in strength, so that the same quantity will always do the same work, no one can know how to use it, and uniformly good, light food cannot be produced with it.

All baking powders except Royal, because improperly compounded and made from inferior materials, lose their strength quickly when the can is opened for use. At subsequent bakings there will be noticed a falling off in strength. The food is heavy, and the flour, eggs and butter wasted.

It is always the case that the consumer suffers in pocket, if not in health, by accepting any substitute for the Royal Baking Powder. The Royal is the embodiment of all the excellence that it is possible to attain in an absolutely pure powder. It is always strictly reliable. It is not only more economical because of its greater strength, but will retain its full leavening power, which no other powder will, until used, and make more wholesome food.
