Mrs. Merrill Pipkin, Press Supt.

A man's ability soon detects his own care.
You may break, you may fall, because if you will But the secret of success will find you in still.

There is no surerized formula for success but what has a backbone against all odds and strong backs.

The review that says and tries again, is the one who will succeed.

The object of all schools and colleges should be to teach how to live the hardest lesson of all to learn. If we can live right, we assuredly shall do right.

At Oklahoma City, Ok., August 2nd, the United Spanish War Veterans, in national convention, opposed the army cañon. After a motion advocating its reestablishment had been voted down, another confirming it was adopted.

Unhasted by successive defeats, the antiprohibitionists of Oklahoma are about to begin another battle to swing the "dead dry" State into the ranks of the "wets." The local option bill, to be presented to the voters of Oklahoma at an election to be held some time in December, is now in the hands of Frank P. Stearns, president of the Oklahoma Local Option Association. Petitions are to be collected in order to secure a sufficient number of signatures to call a special election.

Just Keep on Keeping On.

If the law looks kinder grammar An' some characters under strain It's the situation's up to me.

An' the project's with arms An' necessities keep pressin'. Till all hope is nearly gone, Be brittle up, and git your teeth, An' keep on keeping on.

Foolish never wins a fight, An' frettin' never pays. There ain't no good in headin' in These pessimistic ways. Smile just kinder cheerfully.

When hope is nearly gone, Be brittle up, and git your teeth, An' keep on keeping on.

There ain't no use in growlin' An' grumblin' all the time, When music's singin' everywhere And everything's a rhyme; just keep a smilin' cheertfully.

Hippe is nearly gone, Be brittle up, and git your teeth, An' keep on keeping on.

Saloon Revenue.

No paper in Missouri is more in favor of good roads than is the Record. No paper will go farther or advocate more strenuously the expenditure of money than will the Record. No men will willingly pay out more money for the improvement of the roads according to their worth, than will the owners and proprietors of the Record.

Not we seconded and sincerely object to the cash that we put for roadmaking going through the lands of the saloon-keepers before they receive the road fund. Indeed we assert that such money as we may contribute to the building and repairing of the road, or for other public purposes, shall be assessed directly for such purposes rather than be subjected to the rate of necessary for the support of the saloon and men's families who run the saloon.

The very men who raise the biggest howl about the revenue derived from the saloon for road purposes are the ones who, in order to make themselves able and willing to pay this revenue, take in the lion's share of the citizen's expenditures.

For the increase of their own wealth.

And know that if you did not spend the money you do for drugs, saloons, keepers would not have money wherewithal to pay for our being treated; therefore, it ought to please that you who are business men are the very ones who are paying for the good roads, while our good-humored saloon-keepers buy automobiles and drive them in a barouche while we plod through the mud on foot with windmills striking out for the woods.

Then there is your family to think of while we are talking about saloon revenues. You spend so little to live in order that this same corporation may be able to pay its debts into the road fund and indirectly the debts to pay out a loan for his wife or daughter while your wife or daughter is working over the washstand in order to save a little to help you support them and the children who are old enough to work.

Don't you feel good every time you dig a gash of that size which your money has helped to buy, or see that the smooth skating over the roads you have contributed to the building of, while your wife and children have to stay at home for want of decent clothes to wear?

Now the Reorganization Farce.

The following editorial in the Oklahoma Tribune tells the story of the organization farce that the Standard Oil Company is now presenting to the public:

"The officials of the Standard Oil company of New Jersey have notified its stockholders of the way in which the dissolution mandate of the supreme court is to be carried out. Each of them will be given a certificate of stock in each of the thirty three corporations owned by the Standard, an ownership which the supreme court held was illegal. Consequently, the few men who are now owners of a majority of the stock of the Standard will retain control of the subsidiary corporations with which it has been ordered to part company. There will be as little change in the oil situation as there was when the oil trust as it existed under the agreement of 1882 was dissolved because of the action of the supreme court of Ohio in 1892."

"The plan adopted then was essentially the same as the one proposed now. Individual holders of the trust certificates got to exchange a proportionate share in each of the twenty companies which were in the trust. At the meeting at which the plan was adopted Mr. Dodd, who had drawn up the first agreement, said the change would 'make no difference with the management of affairs. Your interests will be the same as now.' The various corporations will continue to do the same business as heretofore and your proportion of the earnings will not be changed."

"Will the present plan of dissolution, if acceptable to the supreme court, make any change in the management of affairs? Nominally the thirty-three corporations now owned by the Standard of New Jersey will be independent of it, but their officers will be elected by the men who control it. Their relations with it will be as amicable and non-competitive as are those of the independent steel and iron men who eat Judge Gary's 'friendly' dinners with the steel corporations. The formerly divorced oil corporations would do what H. H. Rogers said the men in the oil business did before the trust of 1882 was organized—work in harmony?" No contracts, no agreements, just harmony."

Could a fraud be more transparent? Can the supreme court see this conspiracy organized under the eyes of the judges and not protest? Is this the use the judges intended the company to make of the supreme court decision? And will a Democratic Congress stand by without doing anything to protect the public?

Washington Letter.

By EUGENE L. HORTON, Special Correspondent of The Times.

Washington, Sept. 11.—On Wednesday of last week, 1902, the government filed a petition for an injunction against the wool trust in a federal court at Chicago. On January 12th, the makers, after many obtained forty-two delays, filed a statement in the intervention case, and pleaded not guilty and not the forty-third time. The trial was postponed this time until November 20th of this year.

The status of the wool trust yesterday is exactly where it was the day the first papers were published a decade ago. The so-called "prosecution" of this anti-trust prosecution which was expected by one Benjamin attorney general after another innumerable times than nothing having man, woman and child security is convinced that it is a violation of law, both statute and moral, and nothing has been accomplished to stop the rampant wave of the distribution of thousands of dollars in fees to "trust-busting" attorneys.

"Big Stick" in New Role.

All the people of Arizona are asked to obtain statehood, and that the American people soon fully realize. Information comes to us from Washington that President Taft will sign, without delay, the amendment to the tariff bill which creates the "recall of authority" provision from its original.

How many when these facts are known can fail to significant the President's action beginning first that the people of Arizona are asked three times to one declaration of racial.

Second, that in order to obtain statehood the people of Arizona must go to the polls again and ratify a principle of government that they have already voted in to do, and which they believe to be right.

By thus robbing the people vote against a thing which their judgment tells them to be wrong, threatening to withhold from the people and their vote as the executive dictates, rights to which they are justly entitled under the constitution. President Taft has committed himself to an action which is without precedent in the history of the American republics.

The President has said to the people of Arizona in effect: "No good whether the majority helps or the recall of judges is wise, but unless that majority goes to the polls and pretends that it is against the recall, I will deprive the people of Arizona of statehood. Yes, I will deprive the people of Arizona of statehood whether they are admitted to it under the constitution or not, unless they vote for the way they may desire, but as I command you to vote."

While this method of forcing the people may be compatible to the mental workings of an executive with a "bold and temperate" soul after all making a farce out of representative government.

President Makes Another Mistake.

It is difficult to see how President Taft's $1,000,000 swing around the circle can end in anything but a sorry spectacle for himself.

If he tells the people the truth about how he vetoed the honest attempt of both branches of Congress to reduce the high cost of living in this country how apportioning office filled his cabinet with men connected with the law-breaking trusts, and how to tried and nearly succeeded in secretly giving Alaska away to the land grabbers, he will discredit himself.

Mr. Taft jiggles with the facts in the slightest degree, the insinuations, "swinging" along his trail, will point out his misrepresentations with such truth and logic that the President will be more discredited than if he had remained at home.

The record of the Taft administration is not one that can be debated with any credit to the President. The President has only himself and son like Aldrich, Quisenberry, Penrose and Lodge, to whose advice he listened exclusively, to blame.

Shady Woollies.

The wool trust's practice of cloaking the quality of its product while at the same time maintaining prices at the highest level ever known, is drawing the fire of the medical journals all over the country. Through these journals physicians are protesting against the lack of warmth and enduring underwear which causes the spread of innumerable diseases. Women and children suffer most from this form of greed. The medical journals are demanding a repeal of the high protective duties amounting to 100 per cent on the commoner grade of wool, necessitating in these high duties the sacrifice of the evil of which they complain.

See Taft's Defeat.

President Taft has declined an opportunity to greatly expand the post of clothing, wire and insulation which has defended what he said was indefensible. The President's defense of the tariff bills will make it difficult for him to be renominated but will practically justify his defeat if renominated.

This is an extract from the weekly market letter of the New York Consolidated Stock Exchange from Warren W. Erwin & Co. It shows that the New York business interests and Wall street have definitely concluded Taft cannot be reelected and are apparently ready to throw him over.

Suggestion for an Article.

In the September Columbian magazine Senator Bristow of Kansas tells "How the Interests Control America," and while this is an excellent exposé and one that everybody should read, Senator Bristow doubtless could please a great many people by writing another article next month on "How I Blocked the Election of Senators by Direct Vote of the People with an Amendment Which I Knew Would Kill the Bill."

An Excuse Only.

When the standard Republicans gave as their reason for opposing the Underwood-Lafollette revision downward word bill, the fact that the tariff board had not reported, they were only bluffing. The very men that set up that excuse bitterly opposed the creation of the tariff board in the first place, and will prove their inconsistency again later on by being the first ones to raise their voices in an attack upon that board to prevent revision when Congress comes to consider it again.
