Mrs. Field struck the key note of this

HANK WALL'S BARGAIN.

The Terms on Which a Robber Agreed Not to Molest a Stage Company.

The singular freedom enjoyed by the Northern Stage and Transportation Company from road agents during the early lays of its existence, when the trail led from Bismarck to Deadwood, was a welcome fact which many a weary traveller search of the land of promise can in search of the land of promise can cheerfully testify to, but nevertheless it was a source of much speculation as to how the immunity granted the line was to be accounted for. One day W. J. Gidley, who had charge of the drivers, was inspecting the line. The coach which he was on was approached by a horseman who proved to be the redoubtable "Hank" himself. Gidley knew him, and, after passing sal-utations, he inquired of Walt what he had been doing. "Hank" replied that he had been holding up these d—d Northwestern coaches till he had gone broke at it. He then mentioned the object of his visit. "It's this way, Gid. I've got a nephew in Deadwood who is anxious to get to his bome in Fort Wayne, Ind., where his mother is very ill. Now, they're 'onto' me in Deadwood, so that I can't go after him, and he's broke. Now, if you'll promise to bring the kid through on your next trip, and buy him a ticket from Bismarck to Fort Wayne, I'll ag ee never to 'hold up' another of your coaches or cause you any further trouble. Is it a go?"

Sidley thought the scheme a good one, and as he knew Wall to be a man who respected his word, whatever his other shortcomings might be, the agreement was made, and on the next trip through to Bismarck, the young man was a passenger. The ticket was purchased to Fort Wayne.

Wall was as good as his word, and from that day to this not another passenger was molested. Wall immediately turned his attention to the Sidney line, and the papers of that town came or with columns of abuse aimed at the mns of abuse aimed at the Northwestern Company, charging it with being in league with the road

Russian Progress in Central Asia.

New Orleans Times-Democrat. Whatever may be thought of the policy of Russia, either in Europe or in Asia, it is impossible to feel any other sentiment than admiration for the energy, the perseverance and the courage of the men who have been the instru ments in extending her dominion east ward and southeastward through the arid regions of Tartary and Turkestan. These men are simply servants of the State-soldiers, for the most part. They are not responsible for the aggressions which are effected through them; they simply obey instructions well and effectively. In obedience to the orders of his government, a Skobeleff attacks and destroys the Tekke Turkomans. We may execrate the central power that gives such directions, but we cannot re-fuse to recognize the admirable completeness with which the orders were out in the face of extraordinary difficulties. The successful laying and preservation of the track across the Kara-Kum desert is an especially noteworthy feat of engineering, the credit of which is due to Gen. Annenkoff. It was believed that the shifting sands of that barren tract would block the railroad to such an extent as to completely obstruct the traffic. But Annenkoff circumvented the shifting sands. He embanked his road with clay, revetted with branches of a desert shrub, and he planted and cultivated in the neighborhood of the track vast numbers of plants the roots of which hold the sand. He brought his water in pipes from the the roots of which hold the sand. He brought his water in pipes from the nearest mountains, from the Murghab River, and in some places obtained it from artesian wells. The entire country is almost devoid of fuel; but petroleum supplies the want, and not only drives the locomotives but warms the sixty railway stations that have already been established.

The latest from the Murghab Day I APRIL, A. D. 1888, otherwise judgment pro confesso will be entered against such as are in default.

But the triumphs of the Russians in Central Asia have not been solely of a anguinary kind. They have effected mechanical victories over natural obstacles for which they are entitled to unadulterated praise. Their Trans-Caspian Railway is a marvellous work, carried out in the face of extraordinary difficulcars passed just three weeks ago. It is about a thousand feet longer than the Brooklyn bridge, although the water spanned by the latter is in breadth and olume immeasurably greater than the water of the classic Central Asian river. All Central Asian streams are pretty much alike in character; the river bed is immensely broad in proportion to the stream. A river only a hundred feet wide struggles through a sandy nullah or canyon that measures half a mile across. But the banks of this canyon are generally steep, the river frequently shifts its course and the whole has to be bridged before a railroad can te brought across.
