If you attend, you will be entertained, you will be made to laugh and you will be paid for your trouble.

The dance given by the members of the Mixed Choir at Turner Hall last Thursday evening was one of the most original and happy events in many months. Everything was arranged on the railroad plan and the dance itself was styled "The Screamers Union Hop-away Line." Programmes were issued in the shape of coupon tickets, signed by A. J. Baldwin as passenger agent, and which specially provided that the company would not be responsible for lost affections or other trifles. The dances were announced after the manner of calling off stations in a Union depot and were all intended as drives at the members of the choir.

Sometime ago a party by the name of Charles Johnson, living in Lake Hanska, executed a bill of sale to a man in Madelia. In compliance with the provisions of this document, certain parties drove out to the place where Johnson's mother is living, and in the darkness of night removed a part of the wheat from her granary—much more, it is claimed, than was named in the bill of sale. This action caused warrants to be issued against Johnson, a man by the name of Rice and another by the name of Johnston. The latter, it turned out, had had nothing to do with the affair and of course was relieved. Charlie Johnson, however, failed to appear and has not yet been located. The other man, Rice, had a hearing before a Sleepy Eye justice last week and on the strength of certain testimony was bound over to appear before the grand jury at the next term of court.
