take an internal remedy. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally and acts thru the blood on the mucous surfaces of the system. Hall's Catarrh Cure was prescribed by one of the best physicians in this country 27 years. It is composed of some of the best tonics known, combined with some of the best blood purifiers. The perfect combination of the ingredients in Hall's Catarrh Cure is what produces such wonderful results in catarrhal condi-

Jump from Bed in Morning and Drink Hot Water

Tells why everyone should drink hot water each morning before breakfast.

Why is man and woman, half the time, feeling nervous, despondent, worried; some days headachy, dull and unstrung; some days really incapacitated by illness?

If we all would practice inside bathing, what a gratifying change would take place. Instead of thousands of half-sick, anemic-looking souls with pasty, muddy complexions we should see crowds of happy, healthy, rosy, cheeked people everywhere. The reason is that the human system does not rid itself each day of all the waste which it accumulates under our present mode of living. For every ounce of food and drink taken into the system nearly an ounce of waste material must be carried out, else it ferments and forms ptomaine-like poisons which are absorbed into the blood.

Just as necessary as it is to clean the ashes from the furnace each day, before the fire will burn bright and hot, so we must each morning clear the inside organs of the previous day's accumulation of indigestible waste and body toxins. Men and women, whether sick or well, are advised to drink each morning, before breakfast, a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of lime stone phosphate in it, as a harmless means of washing out of the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels the indigestible material, waste, sour bile and toxins; thus cleansing, sweeten-ing and purifying the entire alimentary canal before putting more food into the stomach.

Millions of people who had their turn at constipation, bilious attacks, acid stomach, nervous days and sleepless nights have become real cranks about the morning inside-bath. A quarter pound of lime stone phosphate will not cost much at the drug store, but is sufficient to demonstrate to anyone, its cleansing, sweetening and freshening effect upon the system.

FAIRFAX PEOPLE WED

A quite home wedding took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Herman Grosklags in Cairo, last Thursday evening, July 20th when their oldest daughter, Miss Ida, was united in marriage to Ed.
Rieke, son of Mr. and Mrs. Adam Rieke, Sr. of Mud Lake. The ceremony was performed in the presence of immediate relatives, Rev. J. A. Rinkel reading the vows that united the hands and hearts of these esteemed young people. A wedding supper was served and the newlyweds tendered a rousing and good natured charivari by neighbors and friends.
Both the bride and groom in this quiet July wedding are well and favorably known to our readers, having resided in the rural community hereabouts since childhood. The groom has a fine farm near Mud Lake and they will commence housekeeping at once in a modern home which the groom had erected thereon last year. —Fairfax Standard.

CANNOT EXPRESS HER HIGH ESTEEM

MRS. GORDON DECLARES SHE'S UNABLE TO PRAISE NEW MEDICINE TANLAC
SUFFICIENTLY.

"I FEEL LIKE A GIRL AGAIN"
WELL KNOWN MINNEAPOLIS
WOMAN FRANKLY
ASSERTS

Minneapolis, Minn. August 23, 1916.
"Tanlac has made me feel like a girl again", Mrs. H. A. Gordon, wife of a well known carpenter of 3301 Fortieth avenue, south, said recently. "I can't praise it too highly," she added.

"I suffered from stomach in the form of indigestion," Mrs. Gordon said on June 19. "My system was in a general run down condition. I was troubled with nervousness and had a poor appetite.
Gas formed on my stomach and I was frequently annoyed with bloating.

"I'm a new woman since taking four bottles of Tanlac. The stomach trouble and indigestion have been banished.
My appetite is hearty and I enjoy the food now. I am getting stronger and my nerves are much steadier. I recommend Tanlac."

Tanlac, the Master Medicine, is especially beneficial for stomach, liver and kidney trouble, catarrhal complaints, rheumatism, nervousness, sleeplessness, loss of appetite and the like.

Tanlac is now being specially introduced and explained in New Ulm at E.
A. Pfeifferle's drug store. Adv. 31.

NEW ULM ASTONISHED BY SIMPLE MIXTURE

New Ulm people are astonished at the INSTANT action of simple buckthorn bark glycerine, etc., as mixed in Adler-ika. ONE SPOONFUL removes such surprising foul matter it relieves almost ANY CASE of constipation, sour stomach or gas. Because Adler-ika acts on BOTH lower and upper bowel, a few doses often relieve or prevent appendicitis. A short treatment helps chronic stomach trouble.

A Eugenic Marriage Proposal

By F. A. MITCHEL

Henry Opdyke had graduated at the head of his class at Brown, and Margaret Shelton had occupied the same position at the commencement exercises at Smith. Both took prizes for scientific essays.

"I'm almost sorry," she said, "that I went to college."

"Why so?"
"Well, because entering I had some pride in myself as a human being. I regarded our species a little lower than the angels. Now I know that I am merely a fortification of atoms, built to resist an enemy of microbes."

"You mean various microbic enemies."

"Yes."

"But you don't wish to be conquered by any of these armies, I suppose."

"No, I don't."

"If we are to consider ourselves fortifications we may take a certain interest in ourselves as such. We are links in an endless chain of human beings. Our ancestors ages ago began to fight microbes that we might exist in our present shape; a shape superior to theirs. Should one not be interested, indeed should it not be our duty to take measures that our descendants shall be superior to us? Certainly not inferior?"

"You mean in a eugenic sense?"

"In part. A criminal should resist a predilection to crime."

"How can he, since he is nothing more than what his molecules have made him?"

"Granted. Is it not then his duty as a molecular fortification to strengthen the weak spots in his descendants?"

"I presume so. But how can he do this without reducing himself to the level of stock farm principles?"

"He may still be a climber to greater heights. Are not morals and intellect hereditary?"

She admitted this, and he went on:
"Marriage based upon love alone is not conducive to an advancing condition of a race. Take a hundred such cases and compare them with as many based on a monetary provision for a family, good health on both sides and normal intellect on the part of the father."

"And mother?"

"Comparing the descendants of the first with the second hundred marriages one gets very different results. Those of the first are much inferior to those of the second."

"But the romance, or, rather, the absence of it?"

"Romance is an unimportant, evanescent condition. Take our alma mater. Can one get a better education in Dartmouth or Wellesley than at Brown or Smith because the former have high sounding names?"

"Nevertheless I have wished that Miss Smith, who founded my alma mater, had been Miss Chomondeley."

"It would not have helped the matter.
The students would have called the college Chomkeley. And if Nicholas Brown had been Taliaferro the boys would have shouted for Tollifer."

"And yet would not your illustration have been as effective in the words, 'A rose by any other name would smell as sweet'?"

"True. And what I am about to say to you has been said more beautifully by many a lover than I shall say it.
But one should remember that the lover may have been scrupulous and the lady of his love had a weak heart."

"Couldn't you name a defect, leaving out the heart entirely?"

"I could, but you and I act our parts in an age when the world has awakened to the fact that science is a better presiding deity on engagements than cupid. Marriages have been made for various reasons beside love. I am thankful that I live in a period wherein science is preparing the way for a race of beings far superior to any the world has known."

"And I suppose a lover's proposal to a maiden will no longer be foreshadowed by gifts of lovely flowers?"

"Instead, he will ask for a list of diseases hereditary in her family, and upon receiving it will furnish a list of those in his own blood."

"Is there to be no expression of affection?"

"Not until the catalogue of diseases has been examined by the physicians of both families, and it has been decided that in this and all other respects a marriage would not be to deteriorate but to elevate the race. When all is settled transports will be in order."

"I see. If the transports came first, in case the physicians' report was adverse, the lovers would need to be un-transported."

"Exactly."

There was silence between them for a time, when he added:

"May I be honored by permission to call upon your family physician for an exchange of our pedigrees?"

"This is very sudden. May I not have time to consider?"

"Certainly, but there is nothing binding in these preliminaries."

"I see. Your request is granted."

A week later he called upon her.
She fell into his arms with a sob. He drew her to him with a sigh of relief.

"Thank heaven!" she whispered. "It was feared that a case of insanity had been discovered in my greatuncle. It turned out that he was only a kleptomaniac."

"I, too, have had a narrow escape.
It was supposed that one of my great-grandfathers was a pirate. It turned out that he commanded a privateer."

Court Versus Committee Law

By ALAN HINSDALE

One night John Arbuckle, while peacefully sleeping in his home, surrounded by his family—a wife and several little children—was awakened by a loud rap at his door. Going downstairs, he opened the door and by the light of a full moon saw a dozen men, each man covering him with a revolver.

"What's become of your clerk, Tom Bowles?" asked the spokesman.

"I don't know. He left me without a word as to where he was going or why."

"That story won't go down with us.
You were heard the day before he disappeared to accuse him of robbing you."

"I did not accuse him of any such thing. He was my bookkeeper, salesman and general utility man. He had so much to do that he got the books into a muddle. I was vexed and told him that he might as well have robbed me. As I said the two last words Cy Jenkins came into the store and heard them and saw me looking angrily at Tom. Afterward I apologized to Tom, and he seemed perfectly satisfied. The next day he disappeared."

"Very plausible," replied the spokesman. "How do you account for blood on a towel found in Bowles' room?"

"There's nothing in that. Bowles was cutting some meat for a customer and the knife struck his finger. He went to his room to stanch the blood."

"John Arbuckle, your explanations are mighty thin. You were heard accusing Tom Bowles of having robbed you.
The next day he disappeared without a word of information as to where he was going. If you was in the eastern country where such cases as yours drag along for months, you'd probably get a lawyer who would prove that you never saw Bowles. In this country we take things as they are; there ain't no lawyers to throw dust in our eyes. Come along."

By this time Mrs. Arbuckle and the children had come downstairs and despite their clinging to the husband and father he was hurried away.

"I'll make you men pay for this," he said. "Every one of you."

"You'll have to come back from kingdom come to do it," was the cold reply.

They took their prisoner to a tree and were about to hang him when a man rode by and asked what was the charge against him. When told he said that about the time indicated he had met Bowles early one morning walking on a road leading southward.
The informant couldn't remember the date, but he judged it was about a month before.

The committee had started in to hang a murderer and did not relish being turned from their purpose, but several of their members insisted on an investigation of Bowles having been seen going southward and after a long dispute it was determined to put him in jail till this could be done. He was therefore lodged in a cell and the committee went home to bed.

One would naturally suppose that these men who considered that justice rested on their shoulders would have taken the pains to send out in the direction Bowles had been seen going to make inquiries for him. But while they made it their business to dispense justice and gloried that there were no lawyers in the territory to delay them in doing so, no one of them seemed to consider it his business to hunt up the missing man. A week after they were bent on hanging Arbuckle they had so far cooled as to take very little interest in his case.

However, Mrs. Arbuckle placed her children in the care of a friend and, without announcing her intention, started out to hunt for the missing victim. She spent a good deal of time in her quest without immediate result. After being away from her little ones as long as she felt it practicable to leave them, she returned, bitterly disappointed.

Time passed. There was no trace of Bowles, but the thoughts of the vigilance committee had been turned into other channels and no movement was made to excite Arbuckle. Six months he remained in jail and would probably have remained till the crack of dawn had not a court been organized to take the dispensation of justice out of the hands of a self constituted committee. When this occurred the prisoner's case was looked into, and since there was not sufficient evidence against him to warrant his trial he was discharged.

A few days later Bowles, accompanied by a wife, turned up, happy in being a bridegroom. He had been turned down by the bride, but she had relented and given him hope. He had gone for her, but being a modest man and fearing further disappointment had kept the reason for his going to himself.

The day after Bowles' return Arbuckle availed himself of the newly established court to bring suit for damages for false imprisonment against every one of the committee. Most of them had some means, and Arbuckle turned everything he had into money to pay his lawyers. Arbuckle won his suit and received a round sum from each and all who were able to pay.
Those who were not able to pay he kept in jail two days for every one he had spent there himself.

Such was the ignominious end of the vigilance committee and the beginning of court law in a western city.
