There has been in our diplomacy one more outstanding aspiration. We have constantly sought to substitute juridical for military settlement of disputes between nations.

The genesis of this idea dates from the discussions over the Federal organization of our 13 original States, which were almost as jealous of their sovereignties as are the nations of Europe today. The first great step toward the League of Honor, which we hope will at last bring peace to the world, was taken when our 13 States agreed to disarm and submit all their disputes to the high tribunal of the new federation.

And this idea of an interstate court, which except at the time our Civil War has given this Nation internal peace, has profoundly influenced our foreign policy. Of our efforts to bring others to our way of thinking, an historical resume was presented by our delegates at the First Hague Conference. A project was submitted there for the formation of a world court. And a few years later Mr. Root, our Secretary of State, in instructing our delegates to the Second Conference at The Hague, laid especial emphasis on this same international ideal.

HOW THE WAR CAME TO AMERICA

initiative that the international naval conference was summoned to London in 1909, and it was under his guidance that the eminent international lawyers and diplomats and admirals who gathered there drew up the Declaration of London.

While there were in that Declaration sections that did not quite meet our approval and that we should have liked to amend, the document was from our point of view a tremendous step in advance. For although, like any effort to concisely formulate the broad principles of equity, it did not wholly succeed in its purpose, it was at least an honest attempt to arrive at an agreement on a complete international code of sea law, based upon mutual consent and not to be altered by any belligerent in the heat of the conflict.

But the Declaration of London was not ratified by the British Parliament, for the point of view prevailing then in England was that a power dependent almost wholly upon its navy for protection could not safely accept further limitations upon action at sea unless there were compensating limitations on land powers. And this latter concession Germany consistently refused to make. The conference therefore came to naught. And the London Declaration having been rejected by the strongest maritime power, its endorsement was postponed by all the other countries involved. Our motives however, remained unchanged; and our Government persisted in its purpose to secure a general ratification either of this declaration or of some similar maritime code.

There has been in our diplomacy one more outstanding aspiration. We have constantly sought to substitute juridical for military settlement of disputes between nations.

The genesis of this idea dates from the discussions over the Federal organization of our 13 original States, which were almost as jealous of their sovereignties as are the nations of Europe today. The New Skirts Are Just As Popular as Last Season

And, what is more, these new skirts have those little touches of exclusiveness that immediate stamp them as out-of-the-ordinary. The variety of materials and styles, as well as the unusual degree of trimming effectiveness, all point to the most careful selection. There are skirts suitable for street wear, for social gatherings and for dressy wear—at each price, a most extraordinary value. Prices begin at $3.50 and rise by gradual stages to $8.50 for a rich charmeuse silk skirt of exclusive design.

Fashion Decrees "Waist Must Match Suits."

In response to Fashion's decree that waists must match suits, we are showing—for instance—many models in Navy, Russ in Green, Battleship Gray, Khaki, Burgundy and Brown. To relieve the sombreness of these tones, most of the waists are relieved by a dash of a brighter, yet harmonizing color by way of trimming. White waists have a large vogue—displacing to a great extent pink and flesh shades. This is particularly true of white cotton voiles, which are very modish. Among the better waists, silks, taffeta, net, lace and chiffon, separately and in combination, lead. Convertible colary are in favor as well as frills.

An inspection of our complete waist assortment will surely be of interest and of value. Prices $1.25 TO $6.00

TAFFETA---NO LONGER A NOVELTY Will Be The Material of Many a Fall Dress.

There are many reasons for the popularity of taffetas. They are, first of all, less expensive than other dress silks, and yet possess many of the features that make other higher priced silks so desirable, such as, for instance, soft finish, and adaptability for draping.

We have them in practically all colors and shades and also a good variety of fancy's in plaids and stripes. In buying here you have choice of all the newest designs in figures and colors, and at prices that we are told can not be found elsewhere.

Priced from $1.25 to $2.25 a yard.
