*Democrat.

†Republican.

Among the political "has-beens" as a result of the late election in this state is former Governor Charles S. Thomas. Mr. Thomas has a well-earned reputation of going back on his real political friends and lining up with his political enemies. It is too bad that a man of Charles Thomas's great mental endowments should be so afflicted. He always does the wrong thing at the right time.

Goodwin's Weekly says: "Over the eastern results the Democrats are exultant, but they should be careful. There is no telling what their majority in congress will do in the next two years. They are in the habit of proposing just exactly such legislation as insures their defeat the first time the people can get a chance at them afterward. We commend them to be on their good behavior."

L. J. Tagert (Rep.), for county treasurer, had no opposition, but in order to see that Link got through all right sundry persons cast 561 votes for him. J. D. Moog (Dem.), for county surveyor, likewise had no opposition, but in the eleventh hour some one sprung Martin Paulson of Buford in opposition. Dan's friends, however, were equal to the occasion, and they rallied round him and carried him to victory by a plurality of 523 votes.

Western Colorado newspapermen will be sorry to hear of the death of William McCabe, editor of the Eagle county Times (Red Cliff). Mr. McCabe died at St. Luke's hospital, Leadville, last Friday evening, of pneumonia. When himself, Mr. McCabe was one of the ablest country editors in Colorado. Our sympathy goes out to his bereaved family.

The Chicago Inter-Ocean charges it up to Roosevelt's enormous egotism. Just as good a place as any to put it.

The remainder of the attractions of the Meeker Lyceum course are as follows: Friday, January 20th, the Gertrude Goodwin Miller Concert company. Saturday, February 11th, Lee Francis Lybarger, lecturer; subjects, "How Napoleon Won," and "How to Be Happy." Thursday, April 20th, Adrian M. Newsens, monologist. There will be no entertainment during March.

Dr. Taylor, dentist, Meeker.
