The Knights Templats.

St. Louis, Sept. 24.-The Knights Templars grand encampment was slow in meeting this horning. At the beginning of the session, the most eminent grand master made the following appointments: Sir Knight the Rev. John Webster, of Ne York, very eminent grand prelate; Sir Knight John R. Parsons, of Missouri, very eminent grand standard-bearer; Sir Knight Nicholas Van Slick, of Rhode Island, very eminent grand sword-bearer; Sir Knight Nicholas P. Ruckle, of Indiana, very eminent grand warden: Sir Knight Edwin F. Warren, of Ne-braska, very eminent grand captain of the

The installation of officers and report of the committee on time and place of holding the next grand encampment were post-poned. The report of the committee on grievances and appeals was discussed, but definite action was deferred.

THE REPORT ON RITUAL was taken up, and was still under discusment taken to afternoon. The afternoon session of the grand encampment brought the business of the body to a close. On reassembling after dinner, the discussion of the Virginia "Ed Stokes" for this reason. biennial conclave came up. Washington, Louisville and Cincinnati were the leading applicants for the honor of entertaining the knights, and, after considerable delibera-

WASHINGTON WAS FIXED UPON as the place, and the second week in October, 1889, as the time. This was the last business before the encampment, and at its on final adjournment was taken. To-night the hotels and boarding houses were rapidly emptied of Knights and their friends, and the streets, except along the routes to the depot and the steamboat landings, were deserted, as compared with the last few days. Every train departing was packed to its utmost capacity, and special trains were run in every direction, so events of the evening were the parade of the Flambeau battalion and a few minor receptions by local commanderies

A KNIGHT KILLED. A. Strong, of Napierville, Ill., a Knight Templar, in attendance upon the conclave in this city, was killed this morning by being run over by a passenger train at Chel-tenham, near this city. He had been visit-ing friends at the latter place and intended to return home this evening. He attempted them to the deceased's home

THE ODD FELLOWS. The Grand Lodge Will Hold its

Next Meeting at Columbus. Boston, Mass., Sept. 24.—The sovereign grand lodge of Odd Fellows continued its session at 9 o'clock this morning, with Grand Sire Garey in the chair. Jurisdictions were called for new business. The committee on state of order reported that it would be inexpedient to establish a home for the orphans of Odd Fellows under the care of the sovereign grand lodge. The reports were adopted. The judiciary committee approved of the decision of the grand sire, that lodges under immediate jurisdiction must meet once every week. and this rule holds good in all cases where a different rule has not been pre-The petition of T. B. Robinson, of Templar Lodge, No. 17, of California, being a question of benefits, and which has been before the Sovereign Grand lodge for six years past, was referred to the Grand lodge of California. The special order for voting the headquarters of the Sovereign Grand lodge was taken up. Past Grand Sire Nicholson moved that nominatious be made and that an informal ballot be taken to determine the feeling of the Grand lodge on the subject, which was adopted. The nominations were Columbus, O., and Washington, D. C. On the sixth ballot this afternoon it was decided to hold the next su-preme lodge at Columbus, O. STILLWATER NEWS.

A Man Falls Forty Feet and is Still Alive.

Charles Maynard, an engineer residing at St. Paul, who stopped at the Sawyer house on Thursday night, fell from a fourth story aindow and was seriously injured. Maynard says he went to his room, No. 56, about 12 o'clock, and fell out of the window while re moving his stockings. He fell from a window opening in the court and sustained a fracture of the left leg near the thigh, and was bruised in different parts of the body. In falling he struck against the side of the building several times, attracting several young men who were in the saloon, who carried him inside, suppressed a physicial several control of the saloon. ried him inside, summoned a physician and cared for him during the night. Mrs. Stewart's Jewels.

Saratoga Letter. Mrs. A. T. Stewart was present and attracted considerable attention. She wore black cobweb lace, heavily bearded with little tufts of black beads, and under this long gown was a princess of corn-colored satin. Her slippers were of similar combination, her gloves were black, and her fan, parasol and bonnet were poems of rich white lace. The jewels she wore were strikingly handsome. The eardrops danced a coil of rainbow.

bar silver throat was with half a dozen big brilliants, and the cross at her corsage was a design one rarely sees. It measured three and one-half inches in length and consisted of perhaps sixteen diamonds, each as broad as would have been a fortune. She had several bracelets of rare jewels, the most unique being a string of diamonds, from which were pendant solitaires of ruby, cat's eye, opal, topaz, turquois and pearl, each forming a medalion in a bed of small dia-

WEALTHY EX-CONFEDERATES. How Some Prominent Southerners Have Prospered Since the War.

Philadelphia Times. Gen. Marcus J. Wright, chief of the Confederate records office, is preparing a biographical work in which the fortunes of the ex-Confederate generals will be traced up to date. According to the information collected by him, a good many of them, Southern leaders who found themselves enniless after the war, have carved out new fortunes for themselves, some of them even ranking among the millionaires. Gen. Mahone, of Virginia, is the richest of them. After the surrender at Appomattox he owned a horse, some war trappings and his box of surveying instruments which he had before the war used as a civil engineer. In less than a week after the last gun had been fired he was employed by the Orange & Alexandria railroad at civil engineering. He bought stock with the savings of his salary, sold it opportunely, invested in other Virginia railroads, and in a few years retired from the civil enginearing to the position of vice-president of the Danville road. From that position he gradusion at 1:30, when a recess was taken until 3 o'clock. The triennial committee of the Order of the Eastern Star has held three sessions, at which formal reports of the officers were made and committees appointed. The celebrated "Michigan question" was decided, he had several hundred acres of land which the action of the state commandery being almost unanimously sustained. After the a musty law office in New Orleans which ritual was disposed of the appointive officers, whose selection was announced today in these dispatches, were installed, and the time and place for holding the next blennial conclave came up. Washington, profession. Now, after the lapse of twenty years, he ranks among the wealthiest planters in Louisiana, is at the head of the bar in New Orleans and is worth considerably over a half million of dollars. This will be increased eventually to a million or more, as his wife will come into a large fortune at the death of her mother, Mrs. Montgomery.

Nearly as wealthy as the foregoing is Gen. Brown, of Tennessee, twice governor of that state since the war and now the receiver of the Texas Pacific railroad. Gen. Brown, like so many of his associates, took to civil engineering and railroading when he laid down his arms. After constructing several small roads in Tennessee he entered the service of the Texas Pacific at a salary that by the time they had gone, fully nine-tenths of the visiting Knights were en route to their homes. The only public ventures he is worth hearly $1,000,000 and is increasing his fortune yearly. After the surrender he was as penniless as Gen. Mahone, but, unlike Mahone, he did not lie back and complain. His first surveying job brought him $15 a week, but in a year thereafter he was receiving $5,000 a year as president of the Nashville railroad. Gen. Rosser, of the Northern Virginia cavalry, now living in retirement at Charlottesville, has an estate valued at $700,000. He made it all since the war and at railroadto board the train as it was moving out of the depot, but missed his footing, fell under the wheels and was instantly killed. The triennial committee took charge of the remains and will furnish an escort to convey the state is almost adjoining the old home-treat the decagned have seed to be decagned by the state is almost adjoining the old home-treat of Theoree 166 group at Monticello stead of Thomas Jefferson, at Monticello, and is generally conceded to be the finest in

Gen. Polignac, who served in the Western Tennessee army, is worth not far from a million. He is the French soldier who. at the outbreak of the war, came to this country and offered his sword to the Confederate cause. Though he gained no especial distinction in the field, he fought bravely till 1865. Gen. Gordon, of Georgia, made a fortune since the war, but lost it recently through injudicious speculation. Five years ago he was a millionaire; to-day he is literally not worth a dollar. Gen. Johnston, United States railroad commissioner, has a snug fortune, and a few other ex-Confederate generals are worth a hundred thousand or more—all made after laying down their arms.

ACCUSTOMED TO ABUSE. A Base Ball Umpire Not Afraid of Being Bulldozed.

"Can't you get out of my way, you awkward ignoramus?" said an excited individual to a quiet-looking man on the depot platform. "Perhaps so," said the quiet man, without budging an inch. "You're an impudent fellow, anyhow. Ain't you going to move, you rascal?"

"No, sir; not just yet."

"I'll knock you down, you miserable whelp, you good-for-nothing scamp, you— "Go right on, sir. Don't mind me." said the quiet man. "I'm used to it. I've been bathing in the sunlight of just such expressions all summer." "Who are you, sir, anyhow?"

"Me? I'm a base ball umpire."

Is Short Hair Injurious? London Truth.

A new terror of the toilet has been sprung upon us-this time, strange to state, not by the Lancet. The alarm is raised on the question of the length at which the human hair should be worn. Some uncomfortable theorist has, it seems, suggested that, as the hair is a conductor of electricity to the brain, it is absolutely necessary-if a general softening of that organ on the part of the rising male generation is to be avoided—for the practice of indulging in a "close crop" to be discontinuep. Forthwith the "anxious father" unbosoms himself in the daily press, rendered sympathetic by the advent of the dull season, and demands to know whether the capillary alarmist is a true prophet. Without venturing an opinion on so vital a point, one cannot but reflect that there are many brains into which the infusion of some amount of motive force, electrical or otherwise, would be anything but a misfortnne. It is a pity, though, that the new theory was not braached some five or six years ago, during the height of the "esthetic craze," for it would certainly have made many converts to the style of hairdressing cultivated by Oscar Wilde before that apostle of culture sacrificed his own locks in deference to

ONE LIFE.

Her white little band is resting On the arm that held it of old. And he thinks it is only the night breeze That makes it so soft and cold.

Her eyes into his are gazing—
Ever, ever so faithful to him—
And he thinks it the silvery moonlight
That makes them so strange and dim. Her pretty face turns toward him;

Ah, when did her face turn away? And he thinks it the silvery moonlig That makes it so faint and gray. Oh, spirit that lingers and falters,

Take courage and whisper "Good-by,"
A life?—why a life is nothing
When millions each minute die. With millions each minute dying, What matters one life or death? One fragile and tender existence? One tremulous passing breath?

A life? Why a life is nothing! What matters the one burn dim? Alas for the folly of reason— One life is the world to him!

FIRST LOVE REGAINED.

Fact stranger than fiction was never better exemplified than in a romance of real life just brought to light in St. Louis, says the Globe Democrat. In the old town of Alexandria, Va., resided one George Venetian gold, magnificently carved in hair lines, and to any ordinary wage-worker would have been a fortune. She had a bar of 19. In the same city lived Miss Lavina Mason, a beautiful young lady of not contain the same city lived Miss Lavina would have been a fortune. Mason, a beautiful young lady of not quite 16. The parents of the young people were well to do. Young Snyder and Miss Mason were in each other's company a great deal, at all the country festivities, and appeared to be devoted friends. The friendship soon ripened into love, and the town was soon filled with rumors of the proba-ble nuptials of the happy young pair. The young lady's parents finally heard of the rumor and immediately entered a strong objection to the proceedings. The young lady, as all young ladies do who are crossed by cruel parents in their love affairs, vowed eternal affection for and undying faith in her lover, and would marry George Snyder or no one. Young Snyder was forbidden the house, and the usual stolen meetings followed, first once, then twice and three times a week, until finally the young lady's parents learned of the clandestine meetings, interfered and put a summary stop to them.

The young people, thus ruthlessly torn from each other's company, pined, fretted and prayed for a sight of the object of their affections, and, as is the usual termination of love balked by the interference of the parents, determined to run away and get married, and early one morning embarked upon a steamer for Georgetown, D. C., from which place they proceeded to Washington, where they were united in marriage. After the ceremony had been performed they returned to Alexandria and to the home of the bride's parents, and quietly in-formed the old people that they were one. The usual storm was followed by the also usual forgiveness. Next the parents of the young Lochinvar were seen, they created a greater disturbance than did the parents of the young lady. Peace was finally consented to leave his fair bride and that section of the country for the period of one year. In leaving he deceived his wife into the belief that he would be absent only three weeks, and when he finally bade her farewell the faithful little woman broke down completely, and for many days was inconsolable. Time sped on; days crept into weeks and weeks into months, and the faithless husband came not, until finally her faith was shaken and she believed that she had been deserted. About a year after the departure of young Snyder, on one cold winter's night, the Mason door-bell rang and the young wife. who first heard it, but was too ill to respond, requested her father to do so, and when the door was opened there stood the recreant husband. George Snyder. The meeting between the two need not be related here Woman-like, she forgave the man she loved for all the sorrow he had caused her. After a stay of several months Snyder again de-parted, went to Chicago, and there opened a tin store upon money furnished by his parents. Business prospered with him, and he sent for his young wife. After a time she expressed a desire to visit her old home, the husband acquiesced, and she went to Alexandria.

The death of her husband's parents oc curred while she was there, and she wrote him of it, receiving no reply, and, upon re turning to Chicago, found that he had dis posed of his business and had disappeared, it being claimed that there was another woman in the case. The heart-broken wife soon after returned to the home of her parents, who had removed to Balti-In that city she met a former acquaintance of her girlhood, named Alexander McDonald, then a well-to-do ship-owner of 35 years of age, who proposed marriage to her, which she declined to listen to, remaining faithful to her truant husband. Eleven years ago she received a letter from St. Louis stating that her husband had died in this city. After investigation, by which she was convinced of the death of Snyder, she consented to the marriage with McDonald, which was duly consummated. From Baltimore Mr. and Mrs. McDonald removed to Salina, Kan. Business not prospering, Mr. McDonald went to Kansas City, where he took the position of foreman of the round house of the Fort Scott road. They resided in Kansas City for five years, and in December, 1885, Mrs. McDonald went to Baltimore to visit her parents, and during her absence McDonald came to St. Louis, and, while having a good time generally, met at the corner of Broadway and Wash street a man who called himself George Snyder. The men discussed their past freely, and it was finally developed that they were both married to the same woman. McDonald applied for and secured a divorce upon his return home, without his wife's knowledge, but later informed her of what he had done and of the meeting with Snyder. She immediately left for St. Louis, arrived here a few days ago, and applied to the Chief of Police for assistance in finding her husband, whom she had not seen for so

Detective Archambault was put on the case, and he succeeded in locating Snyder in a small blacksmith shop on the south side of Wash, between Fourth and Broadway. The wife was notified of the fact, and in company with the detective proceeded to the above place. As she passed the shop she said: "Yes, that's my husthe shop she said: band," and walked up to the door and spoke

He simply looked up, remarking, "Well, what in the world are you doing here?" A lengthy conversation ensued, Snyder in the meantime pounding away at a piece of iron, and paying but little attention to what was said. This was Friday last. A second visit was paid yesterday, and a reconciliation followed, each promising much to the other for the future. The lady will return to Kansas City to morrow, where she has a suit against McDonald for alimony, after which she will aid her hus band, Snyder, in reaching New York. where he has relatives in good circumstances. She is still a good-looking woman, of medium height, with black hair and dark eyes. She is now 29 years old. When seen last night, at the Hotel Mo she was attired in a neat black silk dress and when asked about the story of her life admitted it all to be true.

George Snyder, the husband, is now about 42 years of age, and presents a careworn, haggard look. The meeting between husband and wife was cool and commo place, but the lady still professes devotion to Snyder, and regrets his worn appearance.
