An Enterprising Business Man.

Among the numerous business changes of the last year has been the retirement of E. Lytle. His successor, J. E. Ingham, has been for a long time identified with some of the leading manufacturing interests of the city. From his former business to watches and diamonds seems a long step, but after six months in the new business we are able to congratulate Mr. Ingham upon his success. He seems to have taken with him his old ideas of business, and whether he is selling a watch or making a door he wants a square thing. Mr. Ingham has many advantages not possessed by most others. He has the cash to discount his bills for new goods, which we are informed is a large saving in itself. He has a corps of helpers who have been in the same store for from four to six years, and he adds to a business already established a reputation that makes his word as good as the bond of most men. To his friends he needs no introduction, to strangers we can only say he will undoubtedly make them his friends if he has an opportunity.

Precious Jewels.

It was not the electric light that made Emil Geist's well-established jewelry store at 85 East Third street so brilliant yesterday afternoon. The radiance was caused by the new stock of real diamonds he was opening up, and in color, weight and style they were in every way desirable. He also took pride in showing a fine line of imported and American gold and silver watches, together with elegant clocks and solid silver and plated ware. Mr. Geist is a most excellent judge of watches and jewelry and his views can be depended upon, especially in regard to the value of precious gems. The settings that he has selected this season are of unusual merit and his display deserves the attention of every seeker after the unique and novel in holiday goods.

Winning With the "White."

Our prosperous Northwest has always a hearty welcome and a warm appreciation for deserving business enterprises, and in recognizing the rapid and substantial growth of the White Sewing Machine company's Northwestern trade, as evidenced by the operations of its St. Paul office, the most friendly recognition can be accorded to it without the slightest compunction. The White sewing machine is winning by reason of its great merit and the careful attention given by its managers to every detail of the business. We are pleased to learn from those who have had most intimate relations with the office here, that S. N. Rowley, the active manager at St. Paul, is making a decidedly favorable impression. The extensive offices and warehouses at the corner of Wabasha and Sixth streets have been redecorated recently and again present a very attractive appearance to the numerous patrons of the company. The store presents daily that lively appearance so indicative of a large and desirable trade. A heavy receipt of these valuable machines arrived here a short time since from the manufacturers just in season for the holiday trade, and many a housewife will become the happy possessor of an easy-running "White" during these days of mirth and enjoyment.
