ROCHESTER, N. Y., Feb. 22.-McInerny, the express messenger who had such a thrilling experience yesterday, was brought to this city, his home, today, and surgical aid summoned. His worst wound is that through the right thigh. The bullet must have been one from the largest pistol the robber carried. The wound on his forehead is slight, and that in his hand was made by a fragment of a large bullet, as the piece was found in the wound. McInerny says that when he found himself in the power of the robber he rolled out some of the less valuable packages and covered valuable ones with them. The robber was impatient to get the currency and threatened to shoot if it was not surrendered. He said to the messenger: "You can't fool me; I've been in this business before." While the robber was waiting to get the money the train reached Lyons and the game

J. H. Prentiss, agent of the American Express company in this city, went to as last night and had an interview with the robber. Mr. Prentiss said this morning: "He is the same man who committed the Utica robbery, Oliver Curtiss Perry. He admitted the whole thing, and told where he had been since the Utica robbery. He said he had been in Canada, down South and in the West. He says he always went under his own name, and he was indignant at the state-ment that he took any other name. He told me he knew when they were after him in any place, and avoided arrest by changing his voice and putting on gold

Cool and Smart.

"Perry is one of the brightest and coolest fellows I ever saw. He has been a cowboy, and we know that he has been in the state prison in this and other states, although he did not tell us so. He told me that his health is tailing, and that he knew he would go to prison for this and never come out alive. He said that he weighed 150 pounds in September and weighs only 130 now. He had sixteen cart-ridges when he surrendered and three ruges when he surrendered and three revolvers, one large and two small. The larger one had a bore you could put your finger down. He said: 'McInerny was a good man, but indiscreet. He ought to have thrown up his hands. I did not want to kill him, but only to wine him.'

He did not get a cent. There was nothing in the car for him to steal. I asked him how he got on the train, and he replied that he was in the depot at Syracuse when they were loading it, but got on in the freight yard while the train was running fast. He got in the car by attaching his rope by the steel hook to one edge of the car roof and sliding down the other. I asked him if that was not dangerous, and he said, 'No;' I broke two panes of glass in the window, and put my head through one and my pistol through the other. I took McInerny's pistol when he dropped it. It was only half-cocked.'" Before Perry was captured he had a razor which he carried. Detective Hynes, of New York, a Pinkerton man, saw the prisoner this morning. He claims that Perry has traveled throughout the West and South and has charges of all sorts of crimes laid to his credit.

Forger Bidwell Has Had a Surfeit of Crime.

HARTFORD, Conn., Feb. 22 .- Austin Bidwell, the Bank of England forger, who arrived from England on the Etruria, reached his old home in East Hartford yesterday. "I was released," said Bidwell, "at 8 o'clock Friday evening, Feb. 12, and in charge of the chief warden of the prison I was hurried aboard the train and through London to Liverpool, where I was placed on board the Etruria. I was not permitted to stop anywhere or speak to anybody until I reached the steamer. Then the officer handed my ticket-of-leave to me, and I was for the first time in nineteen years at liberty. The official document accompanying my ticket-of-leave incompanying my ticket-cf-leave in-tormed me that I must never again set foot in Great Britain or any of her colonies. The government gave me no clothing on my release. My friends furnished the suit I am wearing. The only thing I received was £6 cash, and my friends paid my passage to America. This was my compensation for nineteen years' hard labor."

"What are your future intentions?" he was asked. "I shall live quietly for awhile until I can arrange to make an honest living. I was in the lumber supply business in Chicago before the great fire, and it is possible that I may locate there again and start in business. My friends are too anxious to assist me. Hereafter I shall keep to the straight path. I have had my lesson, although t was more severe than was warranted by the facts."

"How do you account for your release?" "James G. Blaine, Grover Cfeveland, James Russell Lowell and other eminent Americans, and John Bright, the Marquis of Hartington and other prominent English gentlemen advocated by release. But, despite their great influence, the English government hesitated, and I am satisfied that the final acquiescence of the home secretary was due as much as anything to the per sistent work of my brother George and my sister, Mrs. Mott,"

First Continental Congress of the Daughters of American Revolution.

Mrs. President Harrison Delivers the Annual Address of Welcome.

Recommendation Adopted for the Building of a National Hall.

Raymond, of Detroit, Talks to the Committee on Puts and Calls.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 22 .- The first con tinental congress of the National Society of the Daughters of the American Revolution began its three-day session this morning at the Church of Our Father. The congress is composed of all the active officers of the national society, one state regent from each state and the regents and delegates of each organized chapter in the United States. When Mrs. Benjamin Harrison, who is president general of the national society entered the church, the audience arose and stood until she was seated within the chancel. After the report and the adoption of the report of the committee on credentials, Mrs. Harrison delivered the address of welcome. She reviewed the organization of the society in October, 1890. since which time a membership of 1,200 has been gained. She congratulated the society upon this growth, and welcomed their first congress, hoping the consul-tation will strengthen and improve what has been so well begun. There have been difficulties in the organiza-tion, and new obstacles have met the board at many points. Their troubles at the time perhaps caused some friction and unpleasant feeling, but in view of the great success which has at-tended the laborers of the society, and of the more brilliant future which is before it these can be happily forgotten. "It may be in the future that other difficulties will arise,"

Said Mrs. Harrison. "It would be a rare society if everything should move smoothly, and I can only commend a little patience, and for a rule of action, Pryor's advice to a man in the conduct toward his wife:

"Be to her faults a little blind and to her virtues very kind."

Mrs. Harrison said the society is firmly Mrs. Harrison said the society is firmly established and in good condition for continued success. Her closing words were: "I welcome you regents and delegates of the society, to this city, and to the first congress of the Daughters of the American Revolution, with the hope and desire that your conference may be one of pleasure to yourselves, having the promise of strength and progress for the future."

Mrs. Clifton Breckenridge, wife of Representative Breckenridge, of Arkansas, responded to the address of welcome delivered by Mrs. Harrison. On behalf of the congress she thanked the president general for the welcome extended, and said the congress assembles in Washington not only for the purpose of business but also to recall historic memories that bind the members closely together and that members closely together and that should perpetuate the virtues of the president and best days of the republic.

Mrs. William D. Caball then read her report. It recommends the Building of a National Hall to bring in a revenue. There should be a library unsurpassed in quality by any in the country.

PUTS AND CALLS.

Mr. Raymond, of Detroit, Speaks in Opposition to the Bill. WASHINGTON, Feb. 22 .- The subcom mittee of the senate judiciary committee continued its hearing this morning on the subject of options. Mr. Raymond, of the Detroit board of trade, opposed the pending bills on the general ground that such legislation against one class of business would not command public sympathy and was entirely be-yond the jurisdiction of congress. It was a menace to every citizen of the country. The farmers, he said, in supporting the proposition held that option selling depressed prices. The whole proposition, Mr. Raymond thought, rested upon misapprehension, and the result was just the opposite. He thought a more thorough investigation into the matter. ough investigation into the matter could be made if a joint committee of congress went to some large city and gave hearings and witnessed the actual transactions of the boards of trade and exchanges than if the investigation were made in Washington.

Puts and calls, Mr. Raymond said,

Puts and calls, Mr. Raymond said, were held to be illegal by every court in the country, and were frowned upon by all boards of trade. The passage of the bilis which he opposed would not make those transactions any more illegal than they were today. Speculative dealing, he claimed, were legitimate, and he compared them with transactions in real estate and other property. A builder, he said, might transactions in real estate and other property. A builder, he said, might agree to build a house for a certain sum, after which he was offered more for his contract by another builder, who in turn might resell the contract to a third party. Three contracts, he said, were made, but three houses were not built. It was the same way with grain; 10,000 bushels sold three times represented 30,000 sold three times represented 30,000 bushels, but the amount sold for delivery was 10,000 bushels, and the transfer of contract was simply abstraction, and when it was time for delivery it was turned over to the ultimate buyer. Real estate and other property would he said, be dealt with in the same way but for the fact that it could not be graded. The development for the wheat crop of India and the opening of the Suez canal, he said, had tended sold three times represented 30,000 of the Suez canal, he said, had tended to depress the price of wheat because England dealt largely with India.

ON ROCK-BOUND COASTS. A Woeful Schedule of Marine Casualties. London, Feb. 22 .- As dispatches continue to be received the list of maritime casualties, due to the fierce gales which have just swept over the coasts of Great Britain and Ireland, grows in length. During the year 1891 the losses to the writers of marine insurance was so heavy that several members of the so-ciety of Lloyds withdrew entirely from the business of assuming marine risks, and already the underwriters have sus-tained heavy losses. Among the long list of wrecks is the Norwegian timber bark Dronnin Sophie, which went ashore at Galleyhead, a promontory of Ireland, in County Cork, between the bays of Ross and Clonakilty. She had a crew of eleven men, who would have undoubtedly been lost had it not been for the gallant efforts of the lifeboat men who in the very teeth of the bowlmen, who, in the very teeth of the howling gale, put out to the wreck and brought all hands safely ashore.

of over a penny per pound for any year. The county councils, as those popularly elected and are chosen, will have authority to acquire land. Purchasers from the local authorities would be required to pay one-fourth of the purchase money down and to be required to pay one-fourth of the purchase money down, and to leave one-fourth as secured by a perpetual rent charge, paying the remaining half by installments or terminable annunties. The whole amount could be paid off at any time. Only one dwelling house could be erected on a holding, and it could not be sublet or subdivided without the assent of the authorities. Finally, the government had decided against granting the authorities compulsory powers to acauthorities compulsory powers to acquire land.

NEW YORK, Feb. 12.-From negotiations which have been going on for a week between the New York produc exchange and the Chicago board of trade, is likely that the latter will soon resume sending out public quotations. This is said to be the result of negotiations between members of the produce exchange, the board of trade and Western Union officials. No details are known, but it is understood public quotations will be resumed in this city in March.
