CUPID'S EYES WIDE OPEN.

[Written for the Globe.]
Did you say that cupid is blind?
That man is behind
The advancement of mind.
He simply mistook
When he said, with a far-away look,
That our little god cupid his eves couldn't

The poets have told us' we oft thought it so,
That his mythical bow
Was bent as to throw
The love-jeweled dart
Through the feminine heart
Without figuring a bit whether a bargain or no.

But this generation has grown very wise.
That nymph is the prize
Whose gold forms the ties,
Though its magical wand
Wesves a very loose band.
Not to hold, as of yore, 'till either one dies.
We see ¡r ttly cupld; he sits on a stool;
He calculates cool;
"He's nobody's fool;"
The problem surveys;
Unrayers the maze.

And thrusts the dart home, where the money

O, yes, little creature, you're fallen from grace. And left stellar space

Twere better to cover your shame-smitten face. -Frank Magraw.

"Oh dear! how everything has changed since I was sweet sixteen," is a song that a great many people might sing in these latter days of the nineteenth century. In nothing is the change more wonderful than in the amount of wages people receive and the purchasing power of those wages. "Why, I taught school for a dollar a week, when I was a girl in Vermont, and lived and dressed as well as these teachers do now days," said a bright old lady the other day.

verest simplicity, or even wears her last year's dress; she is recognized at once by the discerning woman. Then the young man who has taken the care of her future on his shoulders, no other mortal has his beatified expression. Bless'em, they are perennial. Then the odd scrabs of conversation you hear, such as "A fellow by the name of Smith says ——" and you can go on wondering what it was he did say. Was it an opinion on the money market, or what congress would do, or the fate of the Sherman law—on, on to the end of the chapter.

Very few social functions have been conducted this week. The reception to Mgr. Satolli was the only one of importance. Some minor events have trans-spired, and several lawn festivals have been held; but no one could describe the week as a busy one socially. A great many of St. Paul's society people went out to Lake Minnetonka to witness the triumphs of our oarsmen and to bring the conquering heroes home with that state befitting their gallant One wedding is promised for the near future that will take a St. Paul girl away to adorn the social circles at Du-

SOCIAL AFFAIRS. The jolliest lot of picnickers that have invaded the shores of White Bear, were those who went out last Tuesday to celebrate the twentieth birthday of Miss Mabel Lovering; the thirty-fifth week, when I was a girl in Vermont, and lived and dressed as well as these teachers do now days," said a bright old lady the other day.

Just think of it—$1 for a whole week's the hour reminded them that their run

The illustration at the right shows a very pretty dress for a girl of twelve; it is silk, tucked. The figure at the left shows a very stylish fichu of black chiffon and lace, crossed in front and fastened with a pin. The upper design shows a handsome zouave of velvet; the revers and front are embroidered in jet; the sleeves are formed of full frills of black Chantilly lace.

work. That seems very little, but then | must cease, and all went home declarthink how long the things bought with that dollar lasted. And when you got a dress made it was done for all Women then did not have to spend weeks of hard work getting ready for each season, and there are now four separate and distinct seasons in a year. In those days that the old people are so fond of quoting, things were made to last, and once made were never re-made, or seldom ever, though some of the older people still have memories, not at all dim, of certain big-figured materi als that, having served their day of usefulness as dresses for state occasions for grandmother or aunt, were donated to the mothers of certain large families "to be made over for the girls."

Alas! the feelings that these dresses aroused in the minds of those girls. They were willing to allow that the material was fine and good, but oh, if they had only been bestowed on some one else! Then when the master of the house, or the mistress, either, for that matter, decided to go on a trip across one of those little old states that have exercised such an influence on the destiny of the country, sturdy New England, he had to travel by stage or in his own queer chaise. In an old number of the Youth's Companion, published over sixty years ago, a good and pious man relates the happenings of a long week's journey across the state of Massachusetts. Why, it would not be expected that a trip to Europe these days would furnish so right. material was fine and good, but oh, if would not be expected that a trip to Europe these days would furnish so rich a field of discovery and incidents as that week's trip did.

A map of those days shows only a vague lot of wavering lines and dots to represent the place that Minnesota and all these big Western states occupy to-day, and all of the country is lumped under the title of the "Louisiana Purchase." Can you realize it? Especially when you hear people telling of the wonders of the world's fair? It is as easy to realize the days of chivalry of the wonders of the world's fair? It is as easy to realize the days of chivalry as to imagine what life was like in those far-off times. As for the days of the "knights of old," a man died in England the other day who was the ren.

those far-off times. As for the days of the "knights of old," a man died in England the other day who was the representative of one of the old chivalrous offices. He was the "Queen's Champion," that sounds a little bit like the prize ring, doesn't it? but this champion was an entirely different person, and the office has been in his family for hundreds of years. The queen's champion may have been a busy man once, who had need to stand armed "cap-a-pie" to fight all and any of her enemies, but in these days of gunpowder and electricity he had little to do. One can fancy, he had little to do. One can fancy, however, that the office is not un-known on this side of the water. Every American woman is said to be a queen

"My sister doesn't love me! my sister doesn't love me! I want to get losted in the woods, and let the bears eat me!"

"But," said his mother, "you cried when you pinched your finger with the clothespin, and it would hurt you far more if the bears should eat you."

The boy was interested, and dried his tears. "I mean a kind, tame bear," he said, choking a sob.

"But a tame bear has sharp teeth."

The boy rubbed his eyes with hs muddy hand, and was lost in thought for a while. Then he raised his head. His countenance was cheerful, there was not a trace of sorrow in his tone, and he cried, "I mean—I mean a nice and he cried, "I mean—I mean a nice little curly dog wifout any teef."

to visit St. Paul, and at the Yerxa Store, Seventh and Cedar, give demonstrations, for a brief term, of preparing and serving Tea precisely as it is served in their native land, India, and as it is at present being served by their fellow Sheiks in the great East India Tea Building on the Fair Grounds, Chicago.

These Tea Demonstrations will begin at the store, Seventh and Cedar, on Wednesday next, August 2d. The Sheiks will officiate in the picturesque costume of their native India, brewing and serving Tea to all who may present themselves, and will be happy to impart information and converse with visitors-

The Teas that will be served are three distinct varieties, known as "Light of Asia," "Star of India" and "Lalla Rookh," each having been grown and cultivated on the vast estates of The Aldmere. India Tea Association. Either of these possesses an excellence of aroma, delicacy of flavor and merit of cup quality that may prove a revelation to consumers of the heretofore best.
