Held, that upon the facts in this case, there was a sufficient transfer of stock upon the corporate books and a sufficient mutual recognition by the corporation and the transferee of the relation of stockholder to change the equitable ownership of the stock into a legal ownership so as to make the transferee liable to the corporation for the payment of calls on the stock.

No express agreement is necessary to give a factor or commission merchant a lien upon the goods in hands for advances and expenditures made by him in the business of his agency or connected with the goods consigned to him. The lien arises from an agreement which the law implies. Hence, although the contract between him and his principal is in writing and contains no express agreement to that effect, he is nevertheless entitled to a lien, provided the written contract contains no special agreement inconsistent with the existence of such lien.

Alexander McNamara, respondent, vs. Great Northern Railway Company, appellant. Order reversed.

By paying money to a brakeman on a freight train a trespasser does not become a passenger, nor does he obtain any of a passenger's rights, for it is not within the scope or authority, apparent or real, of a brakeman to collect fare. The only duty owing to a trespasser upon railway train by the railway company is to refrain from wantonly inflicting an injury upon him. persoral injury, although advised of his presence.

John Paul Lumber Company (a corporation), respondent, vs. George A. Hormel, appellant. Order affirmed. COLLINS, J.

Between Sept. 23, 1892, and Jan. 31 following, plaintiff furnished to defendant building materials which were used in and about the erection and repainring of certain buildings in the premises described in the lien statement and the complaint. On the first and third days of March following, plaintiff also furnished building material for defendant which was actually used in another building on a distinct tract of ground. The trial court found as a fact that when plaintiff's agent sold and delivered the lastmentioned material he believed, and from all the facts and circumstances had a right to believe that the same were to be used for the purpose of constructing and repairing buildings on the same premises on which the materials theretofore sold and delivered had been used; that credit was given on the strength of such belief; that the material was all suitable for the purpose, and that the agent had poknowledge that it was to go elsewhere. The lien statement, which included the item last mentioned, was not filed until May 27, or 116 days after the sale of Jan. 31. Held, that the finding was supported by the evidence, and that it warranted a conclusion of law that the statement was seasonably filed.

2. Where a lien statement contains all of the requirements of G. S. 1894, sec. 6256, it is not necessarily fatally defective because it contains more.

3. It is not necessary to allege in a complaint in an action to foreclose a mechanic's lien that the notice of lis pendens repuired by G. S. 1894, sec. 6238, has been filed in the office of the register of deeds. Proof of the fact may be introduced on the trial without a formal pleading of it. pay the money at that time, and

The First National Bank of Wadena, appellant, vs. M. J. Hendrickson, defendant, and Farwell, Osmun, Kirk & C., intervenors, respondents. Order affirmed.

H. and J. were co-partners in farmoperations on the west ½ of section 36, township 139, range 34. H. resided on the farm while J. lived in the village of Park Rapids, a few miles distant. With an intention to mortgage a half interest in wheat to be raised on the farm to secure the payment of a firm debt, J., describing himself of the town of Park Rapids, executed and delivered a chattel mortgage to plaintiff wheredy, among other articles, he mortgaged "the following-described property now in my possession in the town * * aforesaid * * half interest in 160 acres of wheat to be grown on the northwest quarter of section 36, township 139, range 33, for the year 1893." It is held, in an action of claim and delivery to recover possession of wheat raised upon the land in range 34, brought against H., who was lawfully in possession, in which action a third party had intervened as a subsequent mortgage, that the description was not only insufficient, but also misleading. Rejecting the error in the number of the range, as a mistake, there was nothing left to suggest or govern an inquiry, and as to both defendant and intervenor the mortgage was invalid.

Anders Peterson, respondent, vs. T. O. Held, that the evidence did not justify a finding that certain securities, assigned by an insolvent bank to one of its depositors to secure an existing debt, were not given with a view to give him a preference over its other creditors. A transfer of property by an insolvent debtor to one of his creditors to secure an existing debt may constitute an unlawful preference, although the debtor was induced to make the transfer for the purpose of obtaining an extension of credit in the hope of being thereby enabled to continue his business.

Following are the other decisions:

Anders Peterson, respondent, vs. T. O. Hall, appellant. Order reversed. COLLINS, J.

1. Where a party employs a loan broker to obtain a loan of money for him or to sell a note and mortgage, the contract of employment being in writing and wholly silent as to the time within which the broker is to obtain the money, the latter is entitled to a reasonable time, all of the circumstances to be taken into considera-to a reasonable time, all of the cir-cumstances to be taken into considera-tion when determining this period of time.

2. If within such reasonable time the broker finds a party ready, willing and able to make the loan or to purchase the note and mortgage upon the terms proposed, he has earned his commission. the terms proposed, he has earned his commission.

3. When a broker is entrusted with the possession of a note and mortgage in respect to which he negotiates he is entitled to a lien upon the same or in the proceeds thereof if in his possession for his commissions.

4. When in an action of claim and delivery the actual value of the property in controversy, a note and mortgage, is stated in the complaint, statutory bond and affidavit, to be the principal of the note, it is error to charge the jury that in fixing the value they may take into consideration the interest on the note which had accrued prior to the bringing of the action.

J.
To render a professed agent liable in damages to the person dealing with him, on the ground of want of authority to bind the party for whom he assumed to act, such person must have dealt with him, in ignorance of the want of authority, upon the faith that the agent possessed the authority assumed. Hence when the agent, acting in good faith, fully discloses to the other party, at the time, all the facts and circumstances touching the authority under which he assumes to act so that such party is fully informed as to the existence and extent of his authority, the agent cannot be held liable.

defendants, and E. W. Durant, intervenor, respondents. Order affirmed. COLLINS, J.

1. A receiver of the insolvent estate of one member of a co-partnership cannot maintain an action to set aside as preferential a conveyance of real and personal property belonging to a co-partnership and of its assets given as preferential a conveyance of real and personal property belonging to a co-partnership and of its assets given to secure a firm debt.

2. Prior to the trial, the other members of the co-partnership had filed a complaint in intervention setting forth that he was the sole owner of all property formerly belonging to the firm by virtue of a purchase from his partner before plaintiff was appointed such receiver and demanding affirmative relief. To this complaint plaintiff had answered. When plaintiff rested his case it was dismissed as to defendant's bank for want of evidence. The court then, against the protest of plaintiff, proceeded to try and determine the issues made by the pleadings in intervention. Held, that this was not error.

Northern Trust Company, appellant, vs. Clinton Markell and Edward L. Bradley, respondent. Order affirmed. COLLINS, J.

1. As a general rule an action for the specific enforcement of a contract relating to chattels will not lie, because the law affords adequate and complete redress in an action for damages.

plete redress in an action for damages.

2. Application of the rule laid down in Smith vs. Dennitt, 15 Minn., 81, that where an appeal to this court from a judgment entered on default the objection is interposed for the first time that the judgment is erroneous because the complaint failed to state a cause of action, the objection should not be favored, and that if facts material to support the judgment are alleged or are fairly inferable by any reasonable intendment from what is alleged in the complaint, the judgment should be sustained.

3. Held, that the complaint in question wholly failed to contain allegations of fact material to the right of recovery or from which such right could fairly be inferred, and therefore was subject to reversal or appeal. Held further, in such case and on the showing made that the court below did not exceed its discretionary powers when it vacated the judgment and allowed the defendants to interpose an answer.
