Seven Bicyclists Who Deserted the Mud for the Sidewalks Placed Under Arrest.

E. R. Willard was elected temporary secretary of the Commercial club at the annual meeting of the board of directors yesterday afternoon. This action was taken after the acceptance of the resignation of E. L. Danforth, who for a long time has occupied that position with the club. Mr. Danforth has for some time been contemplating this action as his health has to a great extent been impaired by the confining duties. Mr. Willard is a young man of excellent attainments, and has signified his willingness to assume the Not Very Damaging to John R. duties for a short time. The other of-nified his willingness to assume the duties for a short time. The other officers elected were as follows: President, John F. Calderwood; first vice president, George A. Duvigneaud; treasurer, H. L. Jenkins, A house committee of three was selected as follows: W. L. Harris, Walter Gregory, H. L. Gregory. This committee replaces former committees, and its duties will be quite extensive, it having practical control of the rooms, and will estimate needed improvements and see that they are carefully executed.

There has been considerable discussion within the club as to the advisability of abolishing the gymnasium feature. The board of directory vesterday decided that this should not be done. On the other hand, a strong sentiment prevailed in favor of this department, and this work will be extended on broader plans than heretofore. It was also the sense of the meeting that first-class paraphernalia be secured, and that the gymnasium a perfect one, and a department that will in itself be a model.

to Philanthropy.

The Woman's Council progressed two sessions yesterday in the second day of its annual congress in the Unitarian church, and provided interesting programmes for the afternoon and evening. There was a large hearing for both, and the discussion of philanthropic work and methods in the afternoon session touched a responsive chord among those who have made philanthropy a study. The evening programme was furnished by the department of literature, and the study clubs furnished a series of brightly written papers. The breadth of the council through its various departments is exemplified in the successive programmes, and every direction of feminine effort is met in the several developed lines.

A visitor of the afternoon was Mrs. Sallies M. Moses, president of the Woman's Press Association of Illinois, who spoke on the philanthropic work of distributing perused literature to country readers, which the newspaper women of Chicago are conducting through their press association. Mrs. Moses short talk preceded the regular papers.

In her introduction, Mrs. S. B. Williams led the way to the proper presentation of the subject of philanthropy. Her talk was a general survey of the field offered under the head "Evolution of Philanthrophy and Comparative Methods—Its History and Development."

To Mrs. C. W. Keyes was intrusted the dis-To Mrs. C. W. Keyes was intrusted the discussion of American methods of charity dispensation. At the outset she said charity must have the gift of self-sacrifice and effort. The evolution of philanthropy has appeared in the growth of the idea that the higher Christian way is to check the inevitable tendency of charity to lower the standard of character, and to prevent the sapping of the foundations of true living, industry and frugality.

character, and to prevent the sapping of the foundations of true living, industry and frugality.

Mrs. T. J. Gray had for the subject of her paper "English Poor Law and Elberfeld System," to which was traced the early form of American poor law, and from which may be derived the broadest instruction in the right employment of philanthropy.

Mrs. S. B. Williams followed Mrs. Gray's exposition of the Elberfeld system with a word to philanthropic workers, urging the necessity of learning to do philanthropic works at the politicians handle the wards, and extracted a lesson from the result of the late election in New York, where the evidence of power lay with the party that most conscientiously worked every district and left no vote uncounted in the slums.

Mrs. O. P. Carter gave an exceptionally interesting and well arranged account of the systems of poor relief as practiced in France and Holland.

Mrs. J. M. Parker, whose labors with the Associated Charities have brought her in contact with the local form of organized charity, brought the discussion to a close. She named the four cardinal points in charity organization as investigation, registration, cooperation, friendly visiting.

In the evening the programme was under the direction of the wise master, Willard B. Pinco. Mrs. H. C. Tuttle, of the Nineteenth Century club, gave a review of "Kate Carnegle." She said Ian Maclaren, the writer of so many short stories of interest and delicate pathos, is at a disadvantage in writing a long story. Mrs. C. E. Wenzel, of the Travelers', read a sketch of "The Greatness of England." Miss Emily P. St. John, of the Coterie, spoke of "Browning's Obscurity." She first gave the opinions of the critics on Sardello at the time of its appearance. They were refreshing to any one who has ever found difficulty in understanding Browning. The last paper of the evening was a summary of the play of "Othello," written by Mrs. C. F. Clark, of the Shakespeare club, and read for her by Mrs. C. E. Dickenson. It was a clever analysis of the motif of the play and the means used to develop the plot through the characters. The musical numbers of the programme were a plano solo by Miss Florence Verge. Verge.

SAYS IT IS SPITE WORK. Esterley's Plea in the Case of the

Acid Throwing. "I think that somebody put acid on their clothes, and then that they put something on their neck to make it look like an acid burn, and that no acid was ever thrown."

Thus spoke Theodore Esterley, when on the stand in his own behalf, under the cross-examination of Assistant County Attorney Smith. He was loud in his claims that it was a case of blackmail, and that no acid had ever been thrown upon them.

"You mean to say that you believe that they did all this to Miss Henke, the mother and the little girl, just out of spite?" was asked.

"Yes. Just to get me into trouble."
This was about all that was brought out new in the case since the first trial, the second trial being then at about the same point where the first one was stopped becouse of a mistake. Esterley claimed that there had not been any trouble between the families that he knew of, except that once a brother, who is now dead, threatened to shoot him.

a brother, who is now dead, threatened to shoot him.

"Didn't you try to brain him with an ax?" asked the questioner. Esterley denied it. He said that before going into the drug business he had been a bar tender for several years.

Surveyor Dahl was placed on the stand by the defense te prove a diagram, and also to state that he had tried to see Esterley in the back room where the complaining witness claimed to have seen him through the window, and that it was impossible, although he went there the same time of day, and in bright sunlight. Cross-examined, however, Mr. Smith showed that Aug. 27 the sun would have been in a totally different place, and would in fact have shone right in the window upon the person who might have been in the room, especially if that person had stepped to the window to see if there was any one on the shed. At this point the trial closed for the day.

COMMON LAW WIFE

Gets Very Much in the Way of a Foreclosure.

In the action of the Connecticut Mutual Life Insurance company against Cornelius Kelley et al., there is a bit of interesting district court history. Several years ago Kelley, who owned a brick block on Cedar avenue, made an effort to get a woman out of his building by ejectment proceedings. Before he was through the court had decided that the woman in question was Mrs. Cornelius Kelley, by a common law marriage, and also provided Kelley with a family of children. Since then she has remained in the house, and since then also a mortgage has been foreclosed, and the year of redemption has expired. The plaintiff in the present action seeks to gain possession and hence the suit.

Of course Mrs. Kelley claims that she never signed the mortgage, that it is her home-In the action of the Connecticut Mutual

There was consternation among the ranks of a party of wheelmen who were on their way home at 6 o'clock last evening. Eighth street southeast is very muddy at present, and the road has been cust up by heavy teams. Of late it has been customary for wheelmen and wheelwomen, too, to take the sidewalk, and this is what caused the trouble. Officers Normand and Stanley were on hand at Fifth avenue southeast, and seven bicyclists fell into the trap. They gave their names at the central station as Jessie Brown, May Smith, Albert E. Simms, Joseph N. Hiscock, Charles H. Johnson, Andrew Peterson and Elmer Bosworth. All the prisoners furnished bail to appear in court today. A majority of the wheelmen are employes of the Minneapolis Bedding company, and were on their way home from work.

Christopher H. Mills, agent of the Syndicate block, arrested Nov. 5 by Inspector Luxton on the charge of violating the smoke ordinance, changed his plea to guilty in the municipal court, and was fined $10. Judge Kerr, in passing sentence, remarked that as it was the first offense he would let him off with a light sentence, but he would be very severe if the defendants was arrested again. The Syndicate block has a smoke consumer, but has been using sawdust as fuel. Mr. Mills promised to use a good grade of coal from now on and abate the smoke.

Dispatches from Detroit announcing the death of Fred G. McGraw, of that city, have arrived at Minneapolis during the week, but so far have falled to reach the person for whom they are intended. George T. McGraw, of this city, is the brother of the deceased, and, owing to his absence from town, and his present whereabouts being unknown, it is feared that the dispatches have failed to reach him. He was wired at Deer River and later at Grand Rapids. His deceased brother was one of Detroit's well known business men. The cause of his death was heart trouble, with which he had been ill for two months.

His extreme nervousness caused some comment and he remarked casually that he had just come from a long interview with his client, Mrs. Nack. He sat half the play through and on coming out said: "Mrs. Nack has confessed. That is all I can say. She has confessed and will go on the stand tomorrow against Thorn. I cannot talk about the matter any further. I have made a solemn promise of secrecy. There is no use of trying to see me later-there is no use trying to see any one else. Even Mr. Howe does not know. The few others who do know are pledged to secrecy as I am. I shall go home, disconnect my telephone and refuse to see any one or answer any questions. Mrs. Nack has made a full confession-that's all I

She had withstood the efforts made by the police to extort from her an admission that she had killed William Guldensuppe, or that she had planned his death and lured him to Woodside, L. I., where Martin Thorn actually did the shooting. The woman had been subjected to the thirty-third degree by the police—to every known method of torment. She had been confronted with the horrid masses of flesh; she had been coaxed, wheedled and threatened. The promise of life had en held out to her as a reward for a few words that would surely result in Thorn's execution. She had remain-ed firm during her imprisonment at police headquarters. The story that Mrs. Nack has told and that she will be called upon to repeat to the jury is full of dramatic interest. She has described at great length her life with Guldensuppe in her business as midwife. She sent him upstairs alone, and, when she heard shots, she knew that Thorn had carsnots, she knew that Thorn had carried out his promise. The greatest difficulty was to obliterate the traces of murder. The only plan that appeared safe and sure was to cut the remains into fragments small enough to be carted away without suspicion. William F. Howe, senior counsel for Martin Thorn, said at the Park Avenue hotel tonight: "This is atrocious. I had the most perfect defense ever presented in a court. I am utterly at a loss to understand how any lawyer with the entire absence of evidence against Mrs. Nack would have sanctioned her making a so-called confession, for, assuming that her story be true, which I deny, in so far as it may implicate Thorn, if it does in any way, there was no evidence in the possession of the district attorney to show Mrs. Nack was anything more than an accessory after the fact if Gulden-

TRIAL OF THORN.

Testimony of Twenty Witnesses Heard on the First Day.

NEW YORK, Nov. 9 .- The trial of Martin Thorn for the alleged murder of William Guldensuppe began in earn-est this morning. Yesterday the jury was secured and at 10 o'clock this morning District Attorney William J. Youngs began his address. Thorn, was secured and at 10 o'clock this morning District Attorney William J. Youngs began his address. Thorn, clean-shaved and well groomed, sat with unmoved countenance as the prosecuting attorney outlined his case. When he had concluded the taking of testimony began. Twenty witnesses were summoned for examination today and the district attorney took them one by one, just as the finding of the different portions of the body opened up to the public and the fact that a terrible crime had been committed. The first witnesses were the boys who, while swimming in the East river, had found the upper portion of the severed by a savory smell from the cook's fire, besunshine and every soldier in came felt lazy an inquisitive black bear came down the while swimming in the East river, had found the upper portion of the severed trunk, and then followed the policemen who were called to the scene of the finding and they in turn were followed by witnesses who testified to the bringing of that part of the body to the morgue. The discovery of the lower part of the trunk, from which the legs were severed, half way between the thighs and knees, was then taken up, and every person who handled it until it was deposited with the morgue keeper, was examined and each one in turn identified the part was wrapped. The rest of the afternoon was taken up by the testimony of those who found and inspected the bundle found floating at the Brooklyn navy yard, and as in the other two instances, the carrying of these limbs was followed from the dock to the New York morgue at Bellvue hospital. Then the morgue keeper was put on the stand.

At 4 o'clock all the witnesses who had been brought to court for examination had given their testimony and as there were no more available the prosecution asked for an adjournment until tomorrow morning. The court granted this request and the trial will be resumed at half past 9 o'clock tomorrow forenoon. It is expected that the greater part of the testimony tomorrow will be that of anatomical experts who will be produced by the people to prove that the parts belonged to the same body, and also, if possible, to prove the cause of death. to prove the cause of death.

Attorney Phalen, who was associated with Judge Vincent during the famous trial and who today announced the latter's withdrawal, will conduct the defense at the second hearing which, however, will not be called within six weeks. Luetgert, who is confined in the Luetgert, who is confined in the county jail awaiting his second trial, admitted that Judge Vincent had withdrawn from the ease. He exhibited a letter from Mr. Vincent, only a portion of which he would make public. The paragraph which he read said that owing to the accumulation of private affairs during the lengthy trial Judge Vincent felt compelled to withdraw from the case. His personal interests demanded attention and he did not feel justified in longer neglecting them. He advised Luetgert to secure the services of some bright young attorney to sist Mr. Phalen in the defense. If a desirable man could not be secured, however, Judge Vincent expressed his entire willingness to again carry on the defense rather than see the interests of his big client suffer.

GAVE A FARM TO A CHURCH.

Unknown Female's Present to a

Preacher in New York. All she possessed, the result of thrift All she possessed, the result of thrift and economy for twelve long years, was what an unknown woman presented to the pastor of the Church of the Strangers, New York city, recently, for the purpose of alding that organization to build a new house of worship. The gift is the deed to twenty acres of farm land, with a house and barn on it, in Pennsylvania, near the New Jersey line. The Church of the Strangers is trying to raise a building fund of $100,000 for a new edifice, and the woman expressed the ifice, and the woman expressed the wish that her offering be added to the $35,000 already procured. Only one con-dition she attached to her gift. This was that her identity might be kept secret. Her reason for this was two-fold—in the first place, she desired to escape publicity. Her second reason escape publicity. Her second reason was that, being an active member of another church in the city, she feared some unpleasantness might be created were it known that she had made a donation to a church other than the one with which she was connected. The presentation is the outcome of an eloquent plea for donations delivered by the pastor of the church Rev. D. Asa Blackburn. The generous stranger was present. Mr. Blackburn took as his text "What shall I render unto the Lord for all His benefits to me?" The effects of this plea was well. me?" She has described at great length her life with Guldensuppe in the little flat on Ninth avenue, near Thirty-fourth street. She quarreled with him frequently after Thorn appeared upon the scene. Guldensuppe was violent, and to rid themselves of him she and Thorn determined to kill him. She induced him to go to Woodside to inspect a cottage which she had hired, as she told him, to conduct her business as midwife. She sent him upper the strange woman asking him to call on her. He went to see her the next day. She told him his text of the previous Sunday had followed her from church and rung in her brain all day, and at night it had come to her that she ought to make a gift to the Lord. She was unmarried, she explained, with only herself to provide for, and this she had been able to do comfortably from a business she conducted. Her savings for twenty years—all she had ever put aside—she had invested in a plece of property, and her thought had been that it would from the strange woman asking him and her thought had been that it would be a home for her in old age. recently been exhibited in London before a number of shipping experts. An iron model of a cargo ship was placed in water, after having been loaded with bricks. Then a hole, immense in size compared with the miniature vessel, was opened at the side. When the water had risen to a level with the deck a number of gutta percha bags fixed under the deck were inflated with carbonic acid gas, and the vessel almost immediately began to rise.

A VICTIM.

He had first been assessed for a wheel for his wife,
Then in turn for Maria and Betsey and
Rose Rose,
And subsequently progeny came into life.
He consecutively furnished cycles for those,
E'en his mother-in-law did not vainly ap-

That he lavished so much on the family wheel
There was naught for himself left remaining but woe.
