

flowers similarly honored, and he was fairly bombarded with bouquets of them were caught by eager spectators and carried to the carriage. By the time he got to Madison square Admiral Schley was up to his arms in roses.

The marines and sailors of the North Atlantic squadron—eight battalions of them—were attracted much attention. They marched with their brass helmets, marched with a proud step, neither sea-sickness nor land-sickness troubled them, but a combination. The men of the Brooklyn were, perhaps, the most applauded.

The provisional brigade of the army lacked the confident ease for which army veterans are noted. This perhaps is accounted for by the fact that most of the United States army veterans are serving their country on the other side of the world, and those now here are only "rookies." They were preceded by a battalion of the West Point cadets, in their showy uniforms of gray, with white duck trousers, moving like one man, 800 legs moving in blackwork, every cap and bayonet in perfect line.

Gov. Roosevelt, riding a spirited black horse at the head of the national guard of the state of New York, followed by brilliantly uniformed officers, received a hearty and continuous ovation from one end of the line to the other. He was in civilian attire, and wore a silk hat, that is, when he had it on, as he was waving it right and left for more than half the time. He was escorted by Troop A, whose plumes, rising and falling with the moving of the horses, formed a block. The artillery seemed more real than the infantry or cavalry, and the commander of the Seventh light artillery, riding a white horse, and carrying his battery at a gallop, and charging down, the horses plunging and cannon wheels rumbling like rolling thunder. The crowd gave a whirlwind of applause. The national guard of the state was made a brilliant showing, and were evidently proud of their appearance, and of the reception they received.

GREAT ARCH OF VICTORY.

Before Madison square was reached, Admiral Dewey and the reviewing party, in carriages, passed the front of the procession and alighted at the reviewing stand opposite Twenty-sixth street, and took their places in the boxes hung with bunting, which had been reserved for them. There for the first time the Admiral saw the great arch of victory erected in his honor. It is modeled after "The Arch" in the Roman Forum. From the top in a quadriga drawn through rolling billows by plunging sea horses, victory, with outstretched wings and a laurel wreath in her hand, typified of the victor, reared her beautiful outline against the blue sky. On the attic are heroic figures of John Paul Jones, Hull, Perry, Dewey and other naval heroes, while on the faces are magnificent groups symbolic of combat, the call to arms, return of the volunteers, and on the spandrels are groups representing the North and East rivers and Atlantic and Pacific oceans. The arch faces the sea. The approaches are guarded by tall colonnades, transforming the street at the reviewing booth into a court of honor.

All about Madison square the decorations charmed the eye. Flags on wires ran from the tall tower of the Madison square garden and all the facades as far as the eye could see up and down Fifth avenue were brilliantly arrayed with bunting and flags. The national streamers flew from the cornices and a thousand box kites floated high in the blue sky. Here the Admiral reviewed the entire parade. Only one distressing incident occurred within his view. A wire had been stretched across the space between two of the stands in the park.

The awful press of people broke it, and they surged out onto the avenues, those in front powerless to resist the pressure of the thousands in the rear. The police officials on foot were helpless. Try as they would they could not stem the tide, which promised to impede the entire parade. Suddenly a half hundred mounted policemen galloped up, and, having formed a line, charged and shoved the people back. Many women and children were caught in the crush. Some shrieked, others fainted and several after the panic were carried away in ambulances.

REVIEW BEGINS.

It took twenty minutes to get the Admiral and the other distinguished guests and the committee from the sixty-two carriages in which they rode. Another ten minutes was devoted to luncheon and informal talk, and then the sailors from the Olympia, headed by Sousa and his band, playing "The Stars and Stripes Forever," marched past, followed by the jockies, dragging a quick-riding one-pounder. The West Point cadets in their gray and white uniforms came next. Their marching was superb. As the colors passed the Admiral uncovered. The regulars came next. As they marched by the Admiral stood up with the generals and Mayor Van Wyck, and remained standing until they had passed. There was a battalion of mounted artillery, with several huge siege guns. The heavy artillery men marched as infantry, and showed to a slight disadvantage as such. The light artillery brought up the rear of the regulars. Then away down the line a round of cheers announced the approach of Gov. Roosevelt. The governor was attended by his staff. He was not in uniform. Following came squadron A, led by the squadron's band, mounted. Then came the Twenty-third regiment, of Brooklyn, and the Fourteenth regiment, of New York. While the Second regiment was passing Admiral Schley, accompanied by Capt. Goghlan, Levi P. Morton and Dr. Depew, left the reviewing stand, and proceeded along the line to the Fifth Avenue hotel. Admiral Schley was watched with eager interest by the crowd, and until he passed out of sight he was loudly cheered. He seemed a great favorite. There was an elaborate display of kites flying during the review. Suspended immediately over the reviewing stand, and at a great height, was an immense Ameri-

"Dandy Fifth," commanded by Col. Frank Marion. A splendid band at their head awakened loud applause with "Maryland, My Maryland," and "Dixie." This state had also the Fourth regiment, Col. W. Howard, commanding. It closely followed the Fifth.

OHIO VETERANS.

Ohio had Gov. Bushnell at the head. This state had the Fourth and Fifth regiments and some unattached troops in the Spanish campaign and recently did riot work in Cleveland.

On account of the controversy between the members of the committee and the head of the St. A. P. over the place to be given to that organization in the column and the commander-in-chief's final orders to his men not to march, there was much speculation whether the unarmed inspection of the parade would be like Gen. O. O. Howard, grizzled old veteran that he is, was given a mighty cheer as he rode past the Admiral at the head of the column. He was followed by about 500 veterans of the Civil war, and about 200 of these were Grand Army men. Some wore the Grand Army uniform and caps, but the majority were in plain civilian clothes. The rest of the veterans were Loyal Legion men, with a sprinkling of men who fought in the Civil war, but do not now belong to any organization. The veterans went wild when they saw Admiral Dewey. Instead of the salute given by every other command, the old fellows called for three cheers for the Admiral, and in other ways manifested their delight. Admiral Dewey was almost as cordial, and his hat was off his head all the time the old comrades-in-arms were passing by. One old soldier, too much used up by disease to walk, was carried by his comrades in a little wagon. He was lying at full length as he passed by the reviewing stand, but he raised himself feebly on one arm, and nodded to the Admiral. It was pathetic. There were several thousands of veterans of the Spanish war. Most of them were in their service clothes, and throughout they presented a decidedly business-like appearance. The unarmed section passed quickly in review and the parade was over. It had taken just three hours and twenty-can flag, held up by five kites. Another series of kites held the Admiral's prominent, while other kites held emblems of various descriptions. The light was sufficient to bring out a most beautiful effect. Admiral Dewey noticed the flags, and expressed himself as well pleased with the display.

While the Sixth-fifth regiment, of Buffalo, was passing, Admiral Dewey complained of feeling chilly, and his coat was handed him. The Sixth-fifth regiment made a fine appearance, and several times the Admiral removed his chapeau as they passed.

Everybody was speculating as to the reception of the Seventh regiment at the reviewing stand. It was more cordial than expected. There was some hissing as the regiment passed the stand, and some derisive calls, but the cheering at every point was easily the loudest. At Fifty-ninth street and Fifth avenue the Seventh was hissed. The members of the regiment looked neither to the right nor to the left, but marched stolidly on.

The Seventy-first regiment was cordially welcomed. The Admiral took off his hat to the command as it passed.

The naval militia of the state troops made a magnificent display. The old guard, respectful in white coat, blue trousers and bearskin shakos, closed the New York state display.

The Pennsylvania state troops received a royal welcome when they reached the stand and reviewing stands. Somebody in the stand proposed three cheers for Pennsylvania, just after the governor had passed. They were given with a will.

QUAKERS CHEERED.

The Pennsylvanians lived to their traditional reputation as soldiers, for their appearance was concerned. Two companies of colored troops among the Quaker soldiers received much applause as they passed.

The greatest applause given to any of the military organizations was accorded to the crack Tenth Pennsylvania regiment, which got back from the Philippines a short time ago. This regiment marched in the regulation khaki uniform which they wore during their service before Manila. The colors, torn to tatters, set the crowd wild with enthusiasm. Admiral Dewey uncovered to the colors and nodded his head sympathetically. The men marched as veterans should, and while every man in the regiment wanted to see Dewey it was not discipline, and the regiment marched as one man, straight ahead, "eyes front."

The New Jersey troops followed those from Pennsylvania and were a magnificent body of men, as fine as any in the column. The governor did not march at the head of the New Jersey troops. With his staff he stood in front of the state stand, opposite Admiral Dewey, while his men went by. New Jersey had two naval reserve battalions and one troop of cavalry in line.

Next to the reception to the Tenth Pennsylvania was that to the Georgia troops, who marched by with state and national colors flying to the tune of "Dixie." They were loudly cheered.

The Connecticut troops were a picturesque lot. Several companies wore the brilliant uniform of colonial days. There were also two companies awhet.

Just as the Georgia troops began passing the reviewing stand Admiral Dewey sat down for the first time and remained seated a moment or two. Connecticut had one of the largest bodies of troops in line. Maryland was well represented with its eight minutes to pass. The first body of the Admiral's sailors passed him at 2:12 p. m. The last man in line went by at 5:30 p. m.

Hardly had the ambulance, which brought up the rear, pulled under the arch, when Squadron A galloped into place for the Admiral, ready to escort him to his hotel.

ADMIRAL WEARY.

The Admiral and Mayor Van Wyck were completely tired out after the review. The Admiral's arm was so weary after the almost constant salute that, in bidding good-bye to his friends he sometimes begged leave to shake hands with his left hand. His carriage was quickly brought and entering it in a perfect hurricane of cheers he was driven away. A gigantic sailor, who stood on the box with the coachman, carried bouquets of orchids which had been presented to the Admiral during the afternoon.

The police arrangements during the day were almost perfect, and at no time did the police do better work than in keeping the crowds off the reviewing stand.

Through the crowded streets there hurried a surging, heaving, hungry crowd, fighting its way for any kind of car or conveyance that would take it home. The soldiers were hurrying away. Yet the crowd did not seem to diminish. Thousands took their places around the arch, and the work of the police only made it possible for one crowd to get out and another to get in. Of course the newcomers were not allowed on the stands, but they got just as close to them as the police would permit.

Admiral Dewey was very tired at the end of the parade. He was driven at once to the residence of Manager Hoff, of the Waldorf-Astoria, escorted by Squadron A, and accompanied by Mayor Van Wyck. He dined with his lieutenants, Brumby and Caldwell. Admiral Dewey did not return to the smoker. He was feeling too fatigued to leave his apartments, and retired at 10:30 o'clock. At 9 o'clock tomorrow the Admiral will receive the Chicago delegation and will then see the members

An Echo of a Fire Sale.

Many people will remember with pleasure and with profit, too, our June sale of purchased at the Fire Auction Sale last May. We bought an enormous quantity—more than we could sell in one sale. The fact is we didn't try to sell them all last June. We were only too willing to save a part for our another sale, for such values are not to be obtained every day, or even every year.

So we reserved about 800 dozen, a part of which will go on sale tomorrow, as follows:

Exactly 423 dozen Ladies' Irish Linen Hemstitched Handkerchiefs from the John S. Brown & Sons' Fire Auction Sale, worth from $2.40 to $3.00 a dozen, for a dozen. To be sold only in dozen lots.

And exactly 99 dozen of MEN'S HANDKERCHIEFS to be sold in dozen or half-dozen lots only.

70 dozen Irish Linen Handkerchiefs, worth $5.00 a dozen, for $3.50.

21 dozen Irish Linen Handkerchiefs, worth $7.50 a dozen, for $5.00.

8 dozen Irish Linen Handkerchiefs, worth $10.00 a dozen, for $7.00.

Note the small quantities of the finer grades.

The Dress Goods Show Continues.

It continues, too, to attract the greatest attention of dressmakers, as well as those who select their own materials. It's pretty well known now that the fullest assortments, the greatest number of real Novelties and THE LOWEST PRICES are to be found here. Of qualities we needn't say a word—no body questions the quality of anything sold here.

For a booming sale for the first day of October we have selected a lot of All-wool Suits, 75 pieces of All-wool Cheviot Diagonals. Both lots are in full lines of new colors, and all are 46 inches wide. They will go in double-quick time at our lowest price of ## Silks Need Not Be Expensive.

More correctly speaking, GOOD SILKS are not expensive here. Of course the extreme Novelties cost a good deal of money, but there are oceans of good, reliable and STRICTLY NEW SILKS here which are marked at surprisingly low prices.

Here's an illustration: 56 pieces of this season's Novelty Silks, made to retail at 75c, $1.00 and $1.25, in the following different kinds:

14 pieces of Plaid Taffetas, with satin bars.
22 pieces of Newest Striped Corded Taffetas.
6 pieces of Newest Checked Corded Taffetas.
8 pieces of Black Taffetas with embroidered dots.
6 pieces of Striped Oil-boiled Taffetas.

Crepe de Chine in evening tints, $1.25 and $1.75.

A Windfall In Lace Curtains.

Just in the beginning of our semi-annual sale of Curtains, when our stocks were largest, we struck a jobber who was forced to unload. He had an overstock of Nottingham Lace Curtains, and bills can't be paid with Lace Curtains. We didn't want them on top of our own big stock, but when he offered them at nearly half-price we jumped at the chance.

And so they will go to you tomorrow and following days until sold out. Not a pair will go into our regular stock, and not a pair should be left after a few days' selling.

$1.00 Curtains for 50 cents a pair.
$1.50 Curtains for 70 cents a pair.
$2.50 Curtains for $1.50 a pair.
