JAPAN'S CABINET MUDDLE.

Island Nation Has Trouble Rauning Its Government.

YOKOHAMA, May 30.—(Via Victoria, B. C., June 15.)—The cabinet muddle is not only still unsettled, but it becomes every day more complicated and hopeless of solution. The source of trouble, while dignified as a strife between the principle of a party ministry and that of an independent cabinet responsible only to the sovereign, is almost lost sight of in the pettiness of the political squabbles will be message sent by him yesterday. The proposition of Buffalo for a meeting place in 1894 was referred to the committee, and the usual resolutions were passed thanking those who have been instrunched to solve the surface, making it impossible for any statesman, without complete loss of self respect, to undertake the task of forming a ministry.

In the meantime the impression has gone abroad that the difficulty has arises from the desperate state of the finances.

There was a somewhat smaller meeting of the Y. M. C. A. tonight in the Grand of the plasterers could not work on non-union jobs.

ng could be further from the truth. Nothing could be further from the truth, the financial status of the government being absolutely sound and flourishing. In other words, the trouble should be attributed solely to the country's inexperience in the workings of the parliamentary institution. It is the natural outcome of the period of transition through which the policies of the empire are passing. Meanwhile much sympathy is feit and expressed for the emperor, who, in his absorbing interest for the success of the experiment in constitutional government which he has freely granted to his people, now finds himself deprived of the means of practical operation, no help coming from any source, no matter in whom he puts confidence.

LONDON BEHIND THE TIMES.

NEW YORK, June 15.—The London correspondent of the Tribune says:

"If the houses of parliament had the energy and enthuslasm of the new bishop of London, the metropolis would soon be in a fair way to have rapid transit. As it is a slow-gring legislative body, it is holding commiltee investigations and wasting time when, as the bishop says, twenty tubes are needed to carry the working people in and out of London. The joint committee received testimony yesterday from the traffic manager of the Omnibus association that the tubes would not take off a single omnibus between Paddington and Victoria and along other important roads, and consequently would only injure one another and be of no advantage to the public.

"When the Joint committee is occupied in this way, capitalists and suburban residents despair of practical relief measures for the present block in traffic. There is little probability that any effective legislation will be enacted before the adjournment of parliament, and this will involve the postponement of scores of measures for another year, when public interest will be centered on the coronation.

In Labor's Field.

The Iron Molders' union, which is one of the most prosperous of the many in the city, had a large meeting last night, with President Harrington in the chair, when twelve were admitted by card and one application for membership was received. The union donated $50 to the family of Mr. Cronanberger, who was killed at the strike in Cleveland, Ohio, in whose aid June 8 was set aside as donation day for the different unions in the country. The national organization reported, through the secretary, that business had been comparatively slack throughout the country on account of the machinists' strike, many locals being reported as on strike in sympathy. Officers were nominated who will be balloted for at next meeting. President Harrington and others will succeed themselves. John Heckel was reported siek. Receipts, $5.50; disbursements, $3.77.

Machinists Initiate Officers. Since the inception of the Machinists' union in the city there has been a feeling prevalent that the union was formed for the purpose of joining in the trouble brewing for a nine-hour day, but since it was denied in the Globe and fully stated that the union had no part in that movement, nor would have any, there has been less antipathy to the union by the employers. Last night there was a large attendance of the members, when there were seventeen initiations. The meeting was presided over by William Reignard, and the new officers were installed by J. P. Gardner. The officers installed were: President, T. Murphy; vice president, A. Magnuson; recording secretary, D. Anderson; financial secretary, V. Lilygreen; treasurer, John Rasmussen; conductor, C. M. Johnson; inside guard, Charles Norbeck; trustees, William Maxwell, C. Villaume and A. Campbell. The charter will be kept open for thirty days from June 1. Following Dr. Buckley's address, the convention held a brief business session.

CONNECTICUT HILLS PRODUCE THE FINEST VARIETIES OF FRUIT

HOWARD HALE'S EXPERIMENT

Has Taken Wornout Homestead Farm and Made It More Productive Than Ever Before.

has been known as a hard worker. His father died when he was a mere lad, leaving his mother in meager circumstances. The small farm was not over-productive, and young Hale soon learned what it was to shoulder grave responsi-bilities. He had very limited opportunities to attend school. He was a keen lated a store of information as he came in contact with others. Blessed with a strong constitution and a will power that was not easily swayed, his own experstitute for university lectures. NEW YORK BOSS WILL NOT SEEK first encounters with adverse conditions developed a character well fitted to conduct the great enterprise that he now manages and controls. About thirty-three years ago, says the Cincinnati Enquirer, he conceived the idea of transforming some of the abandoned New England hill farms into berry beds and peach orchards. He began in a small way at first, testing varieties and studying the underlying principles of fruit growing. Having demonstrated that the neglected and forsaken Connecticut hills on the old home farm would produce as fine peaches as were grown anywhere in the world, in company with his broth-er he borrowed money and planted his first commercial orchard in 1880. Mr. Hale never for a moment thought there was any doubt about final success of his venture; but the good old deacons, them-selves engaged in tobacco culture, who were responsible for a $2,000 loan of the church funds, felt so uneasy about the money that they requested the prospective fruit grower to give better security than a first mortgage on the farm or to pay off his debts at once. Young Hale did not tell them that he then had his first good crop of peaches on his trees, but asked them to wait two months and he would give the desired security. In August and September $7,000 worth of peaches were sold from the farm that the neighbors thought was not good security for $2,000. The deacons were paid the full amount of their claims. A GREAT NEW ENGLAND PEACH

FARM. This was young Hale's first real encouragement from the money point of view. For three successive years the crops had been killed by late spring frosts. Here, again, the resolute qualities of the lad stuck out. His early experience with the push cart, borrowed from a neighbor and afterwards bought for $1, in which he delivered his fruits in the local market, was of inestim value in buoying up the spirits of a boy whom the neighbors called a wild dreamer. When the little cart was loaded, as it often was, it took lots of push to start it; hanging back would not budge it an inch, but an everlasting push kept it moving ahead. This, young Hale discovered, was the only way to get ahead, and that lesson of push, learned from experiences with the old hand cart, has stimulated and carried him over many discouraging and trying periods.

Since the first big crop was secured and the mortgage lifted and other debts Since the first big crop was secured and the mortgage lifted and other debts paid many larger crops have been gathered. Today the old Hale farm, in the family's hands for over 250 years, is in better condition, more productive and of greater value than ever before. The once-abandoned hill-tops, covered with rocks and overgrown with underbrush and birch, are now cleanly cultivated and studded with great peach orchards, which during the latter part of May present one grand bouquet. The deficate pink of the peach bloom on nearly 100,000 trees planted on terraces, in contrast with the green-wooded background of higher and rougher hills and the river and valley fields below, have made the Hale farm famous throughout New England, to say nothing of the carloads of luscious fruits produced later in the season. The little push cart has long since given way to more modern means of transportation. The Hartford street railway has run a sidetrack into this farm, and the fruit is packed in cars constructed for that purpose, and rushed the time the fruit is plucked from the tree until it is in cold storage. During the season a car is loaded every hour through the day. It is a rare sight to see an entire express train. The cars are iced five times after they leave the orchard before they reach the Northern markets.

Having thus made a fair start in Connecticut, Mr. Hale wanted to extend his orchards. After visiting every peachgrowing section in this country, he located a tract of about 2,160 acres in central Georgia, near Fort Valley. PACKING PEACHES FOR THE MARKET.

By 5 o'clock in the morning the wagons begin to bring the fruit into the packing shed, and there is a constant stream of fruit pouring in all day long. The baskets, set upon the platform, are immediately taken by the assorters, who divide the fruit into three grades in long canvas trays stretched upon a table before them. On the opposite side of these long tables hundreis of white girls and boys of the most refined classes, including school teachers, musicians, artists and others, pack the fruit in small four quart baskets. Six of these baskets constitute a carrier or crate. Every peach must be up to standard size, without blemish, and in a perfect state of ripeness before being placed in one of these baskets. A general foreman keeps close watch in the packing shed and before the lid is nafled on every crate is inspected by an expert, who makes sure that every piece of fruit is what the guaranty carries with it, in a perfect condition and the same all the way through. If a single peach is found containing a bruise or blemish of any kind the entire crate is returned to the packer, and as a penalty it must be repacked. The girls handling this fruit become very expert and from 80 to 100 crates a day is considered a good pack, although some experts pack from 175 to 200 crates. Each carrier contains from 100 to 210 peaches, depending on the grade. Each packer handles during the day from 20,000 to 30,000 pleces of fruit in addition to handling the baskets and even the cars are labeled with Mr. Hale's red label.

Last summer a Northern man who was visiting this orchard timed two of farm, and the fruit is packed in cars constructed for that purpose, and rushed by electricity to the steam railway, nine miles distant. This is the first fruit farm in the United States to adopt the trolley car for handling fruit direct from the orchard.
