

FOR THE FAIR SEX

WOMEN ARE FRIENDS

MAN WHO SAID THEY WERE NOT, MISTAKEN

Life is a game, and those who play it well are geniuses who understand—The Bunglers are Those Who Deny What They Do Not Know

The man who said the best of friendship was not possible between women did not know what he was talking about. It is a popular fallacy among men that women are not true to each other and only pretend to be true. Absolute nonsense, every word. The best kind of friendship can exist among women, and often does; friendships which last always and sweeten life to the end. It is the idea of some misguided masculine folk that they are the sole interest of women, and that when they appear to be friendly with other women there is some deep-seated reason for it pertaining to their august selves. All of which is not so. There must be, of course, some insincerities in the social relations of women, just as there is among all people, but to deny strong and true friendships because of this would be to deny there was sincerity anywhere.

There are, of course, degrees in friendship as there are in love. A shallow, silly woman may not be able to feel any great friendship for another woman, any more than she is able to experience a great and lasting love for a man. But there are women who have true, abiding friendships among their own sex which are as real and as elevating as any great emotion and which cannot be understood by the shallow of either sex.

A great many people do not make allowance for experiences and emotions which they themselves have not felt. Life is like a game; some persons play it extraordinarily well; they are the geniuses and rare ones of the earth, and it will very often be found that they are the most tolerant. They are the discerning. They understand. There is a class who catch glimpses and play fairly well. They can see beyond their noses at all events and do not condemn everyone who does things

The accompanying illustration shows a very pretty design for a bathing suit. The best materials of which to make it are mohair or taffeta. The suit shown in this illustration is made in three pieces, waist, skirt and bloomers, differently or holds different views from themselves. Then there are players of various degrees of excellence, until we come down to those who are bunglers, who don't know one way from another, but really believe they can play an excellent game. There is a vast number of them and they are very happy. Happy in their ignorance and conceit. They are narrow-minded, short-sighted, uncharitable, and never believe what they have not seen. They do not feel any sincere friendship, or any great love for anybody, so they deny its existence. What they do not know has never been. The tragedies of life are caused by the conjunction of the great and the little. They live in different worlds and each speaks a language the other cannot comprehend. As some man said, "To be alone is nothing; true loneliness is being with one who does not understand."

There are men and women who are geniuses in love, friendship and loyalty. Sometimes they do things that others cannot do. They are mostly given to the crowd makes them apart and to the crowd makes them queer. A great soul is always strange to a little one. But the great soul can see further than the other, and small things do not disturb him, as his intelligence is concerned with larger issues.

So it is with women. There are women many and many a kind of great; others are petty and little. When a man finds that a woman is able and fine, he immediately says she has a "masculine mind." That is the highest compliment he can pay her—in his opinion. But there are just as many strong women as there are great men and they can afford to be strange and odd to be misunderstood. There is nothing better than a woman with a great soul, because by reason of their limitations and the circumstances of their lives, women are mostly given over to small things. A large-souled woman is capable of the best friendship and the highest love. But, alas, there are more women who are petty and little than with large ones, and men seem to make no distinctions when judging women. But the distinctions are numerous and should be made.

GOSSIP FROM GOTHAM

Now that August Gray has become engaged to Miss Alice Burnham, of Boston, another of Miss Cynthia Roche's long string of suitors has retired. More "gossips" have sued for the hand of this tall and handsome young woman than for that of any other girl in the fashionable set, and although her engagement has been reported time and time again, Mrs. Burke-Roche, her mother, has dismissed the rumors with a laugh. Last summer August Gray was most persistent. He is the son of Judge John Clinton Gray, and at the Roche villa, he was to be found almost all day. In fact, one of his facetious friends sent a letter to him addressed to Elm Court, Malcolm Whitman has his closest rival in Arthur S. Burden was also worshipping at Miss Roche's shrine. Miss Cynthia divided her smiles evenly, and now her constant attendant is Oden Mills Jr., who is a most eligible young man, both socially and financially.

No one would dream of opposing the progress of Mrs. Edward R. Thomas now that she is playing hostess to the William Jays. Mrs. Thomas has them at the Newport villa for five days, and they possess sufficient power to launch the Kentucky girl and her millionaire husband in the smartest set. The Jays have sat in the Thomas box at the races and ridden about in the Thomas autos, but when they went to visit them their intimacy was proclaimed from the housetops. Arthur Beilin and Miss Eleanor Jay were also at the Thomases and Mrs. Thomas gave a dinner in their honor, at which at least six fashionable persons were present. Miss Jay is only a fleeting figure in Newport, and within another week will return to the seclusion of Katonah, N. Y., with her parents.

There is no love lost between Mrs. William Jay and her brother's wife, Mrs. Hermann Oelrichs. In the Casino the other day the two women of fashion changed the chilliest little bows, yet it has been months since they have seen one another. Mrs. Jay and Mrs. Oelrichs represent different sets. Mrs. Oelrichs is the coolest, the most dignified, and Col. Jay is the attorney for Mrs. Oelrichs. The Oelrichses, of course, permit a continent to separate them. Mrs. Oelrichs retaining the son, Hermann Jr., Barrister Mrs. Pembroke Jones, Mrs. Oelrichs is the most energetic hostess. Newport, and at her bi-weekly dinners she does not entertain the Jays. Moreover, Mrs. Charles M. Oelrichs and Mrs. Hermann, who are sisters-in-law, are not on terms of intimacy at all.

It is considered almost unfashionable for relatives to see too much of one another, and in most of the prominent families there are distinct and bitter feuds. The Vanderbilts hold well together, excepting the young Cornelius branch. The two Mrs. Burdens do not speak. Mrs. Oelrichs and her sister-in-law, Mrs. M. Orme Wilson, smile amiably at one another, but seldom do they dine together. On the other hand, the Harriman sisters are most intimate and seldom does Mrs. Stephen Olin, Mrs. William K. Vanderbilt or Mrs. William R. Travers give even a luncheon that all are not invited. Mrs. Burke-Roche and her sister, Mrs. Peter Cooper Hewitt, are also inseparable.

One of the bright "stars" of Southampton's uninteresting season is Mrs. Stephen H. Pell, who is fascinated by the sport of automobiling. Mrs. Pell has given several large dinners and her automobile parties to Greenpoint and Montauk Point are the jolliest of affairs, so Southampton thinks. Mrs. Pell has a fearful and wonderful collection of automobile clothes and has imported from Paris an auto bag, which she wears on long tours. This is of some prepared cloth and covers the body from head to toe. Mrs. Pell wears the most unsightly goggles and looks like some hideous nightmare in her make-up. For driving about Southampton she has a charming red silk coat made with capes and a red patent leather sailor hat. Mrs. Pell has done much to rehabilitate the dull wedding fortune. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Means Thompson, who made a fortune in oil.

Although the Pell marriages usually have been unhappy, this is one of the exceptions, and a more devoted pair does not exist than the S. H. P. Pells. Her husband is not so handsome as the irresistible "Archie" Pell, but he is fine looking and is devoted to autos and yachting. The Pells have a gleam yacht in Shinnecock Bay, which they use when wearied of their machines. In Port Washington, L. I., they have a fine estate and their town house in East Sixty-ninth street, just off the avenue, is one of the new and handsome homes. This house projects six inches beyond the other houses in this block, and although the neighbors have appealed to the law, the Pells have been permitted to retain this advantage. The Thompsons live with their daughter.

HOKE SMITH STARTS DEMOCRATS' BATTLE

Former Secretary of Interior
Delivers Forceful Speech in New York

NEW YORK, Aug. 11.—Former Secretary of the Interior, Hoke Smith, of Georgia, was the principal speaker tonight at the annual outing of the Democrats of Queens borough, held this afternoon and tonight at the Long Island. Over 3,000 Democrats were present. Mr. Smith said:

This is a great day for a Democratic rally. Our candidate has spoken in response to the formal notification of his nomination. His plain, clear declaration in favor of obedience to the law, his devotion to constitutional government, his equal and just recognition of the rights of person and property, give joy and hope to all who love their country.

Nominated by the People
His nomination was due to no effort of his own. It was due to the effort of his personal friends. No ten men in New York and no fifty men in any state secured the delegates for Judge Parker. The people of the United States nominated him.

Hanging over him like a dark cloud was the possibility of the election of a man whose restless egotism placed the entire country in a state of uncertainty and about whom the inquiry, with no feeling of hope, was constantly made, "What will he do next?" Mr. Roosevelt as president had overridden the rights of congress. He had violated the constitution. The feeling of doubt and uncertainty produced by the administration of Mr. Roosevelt had checked the prosperity made possible by the administration of Mr. Cleveland and realized under the administration of Mr. McKinley.

Conservative Democrats everywhere sought a candidate who would represent respectably the constitution and laws of our country; who would recognize the office of president to be one of no unlimited power, who would not be carried into reckless activity by intense adulation of himself; who would prefer to exercise the legislative powers of the president by sending warships to Morocco or Mexico as an assertion of his powers to force our Southern neighbors to pay their debts.

Man of Even Temperament
They selected a man of even, conservative temperament, devoted to the law and its enforcement; brave, able and modest; ready to discharge legitimate duties, but not tempted to oversteering ambition to assume the responsibilities of all others. Well may the Republicans shrink from a comparison of the candidates. Adroitly did the secretary of the treasury endeavor to present an issue which is really not involved in the present campaign.

Speaking in this borough a few weeks ago he sought to give especial prominence to the financial question, and more particularly to the gold standard. He reviewed some of the history of legislation and some of the party platforms claiming that the Republican party had been nearly always right and the Democratic party wrong. He claimed that the success of the Democratic party would endanger the gold standard, but he omitted much that was pertinent upon this subject. Reviewing the legislation on gold and silver from the formation of the government, Mr. Smith said that the first legislation under which the silver dollar, now a part of the coin of the realm, went into circulation was the joint work of Democrats and Republicans.

Republican Platform
The Republican platform of 1888, he continued, was presented to the convention by William McKinley. Among other things it contained the following language: "The Republican party is in favor of both gold and silver as money and condemns the policy of the Democratic administration in its effort to demonetize silver."

This became a part of the Republican vocated silver coinage, but against the Republican party stands the charge of the most dangerous silver legislation.

The world accepted the gold standard. Our political leaders, Democrats and Republicans, have gradually learned that bimetalism is impossible, that a single standard is necessary.

The nomination of Judge Parker would have been impossible had not the deletemetalism be impossible; that a single standard is necessary.

The wisdom, under present conditions, of the gold standard, having once been recognized, may be said to be a settled form no issue in the present campaign.

The telegram of our candidate to the national convention only confirmed the wisdom of the overwhelming majority of the delegates and of the voters they represented, that the gold standard had been irrevocably established.

We should not allow the Republicans to boast of what happened under the conservative and gentle spirit of President McKinley and make claims thereon for the election of the present occupant of the White House.

Man on Horseback
Has not the man in rough rider costume changed our treatment of foreign countries? Has he not disregarded our representative government?

The problem of more markets requires our urgent and immediate attention. We cannot repose in fancied security that we can forever sell everything and buy little or nothing.

The period of exclusiveness has passed. Have not Roosevelt and his followers adopted the motto, as to the tariff, stand pat?

The senator from Massachusetts, in deference, probably, to the petition being signed by Republicans as well as Democrats, all over his state, has claimed the Republicans desire reciprocity with Canada, but if so, why has the Republican party done nothing to accomplish it?

The truth may be that the declaration in the Democratic platform, "we favor liberal trade arrangements with Canada and with the people of other countries where they can be entered into with benefit to American agriculture, manufactures, mining or commerce," is arousing the hopes of the people and disturbing the Republican "standpatters."

President Roosevelt has returned to the days of 1868. He and his extreme followers would remove the tariff. The hopes and the ties of the people of all the states know no state borders or sectional lines.

BAD MAN DIES IN GOVERNOR'S HOUSE

and armed guards patrolled entire divisions of tracks.

The next report that lent terror to the residents of the region came Sept. 27, when Chief of Police Thomas Travis, of Helena, received a letter stating that unless two suspects whom he held were liberated the jail would be dynamited. This however, was found later to have been a ruse employed by the real blackguards, and the suspects, the men who were held, but it served to further increase the excitement.

The time specified in the letters of the blackguards for the payment of the $50,000 which they demanded of the railroad company was Oct. 4. This plan as outlined in the letters was, if the railroad company decided to accede to the demands, that all trains should carry a white flag. Every arrangement had been made by the plotters in minutes detail for the payment of the money. But meanwhile the railroad company redoubled its efforts to foil the dynamiters. Practically every available detective in the company's employ was rushed to the scene and the expense of the man hunt became enormous.

As Oct. 4 passed without incident a feeling of relief was experienced by the railroad men, but the search for the plotters was continued without relaxation.

Finally, on Oct. 17, the railroad detectives were notified that a man had been seen digging a hole under the tracks about fifteen miles west of Helena. Bloodhounds were hastily dispatched to the spot and for twenty miles a rough mountainous trail was followed until it ended at a rude cabin where was found and arrested Isaac Gravelle.

Gravelle was later identified and confessed to having implicated the plot and with him was implicated Harvey Winton, who at the time was serving a term for murder.

The plot, as it was later exposed, was worked out in prison by Gravelle and Winton, while the two were fellow convicts.

With the arrest and conviction of Gravelle and the imprisonment of Winton the gang was broken up and what went on record as the most famous plot in American railroad history was ended.

Guards at Victor Protect Residents of Warnings

CRIPPLE CREEK, Col., Aug. 11.—Sheriff Bell, who returned today from Wyoming, attended a meeting of the county commissioners at which the mayors of Victor and Cripple Creek, County Attorney Ashton and Deputy District Attorney Charles B. Butler were present. The recent acts of whitecappers were discussed and it was decided to vigorously prosecute the guilty persons and to afford every protection to citizens threatened by the masked band.

Acting upon this decision, they issued a proclamation ordering all citizens of Victor county to refrain from carrying concealed weapons, from congregating on the streets and in public places and from in any manner using language that may tend to cause violation of the law.

Guards are tonight stationed at the homes and business places of several residents of Cripple Creek and Victor warned by whitecappers to leave the district.

Women who work, whether in the house, store, office or factory, very rarely have the ability to stand the strain. The case of Miss Frankie Orser, of Boston, Mass., is interesting to all women, and adds further proof that woman's great friend in need is Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I suffered misery for several years. My back ached and I had bearing down pains, and frequent headaches. I would often wake from a restless sleep in such pain and misery that it would be hours before I could close my eyes again. I dreaded the long nights and weary days. I could do no work. I consulted different physicians hoping to get relief, but, finding that their medicines did not cure me, I tried Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, as it was highly recommended to me. I am glad that I did so, for I soon found that it was the medicine for my case. Very soon I was rid of every ache and pain and restored to perfect health. I feel splendid, have a fine appetite, and have gained in weight a lot."—Miss FRANKIE ORSER, 14 Warrenton St., Boston, Mass.

Surely you cannot wish to remain weak, sick and discouraged, and exhausted with each day's work. Some derangement of the feminine organs is responsible for this exhaustion, following any kind of work or effort. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will help you just as it has thousands of other women.

The case of Mrs. Lennox, which follows, proves this.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—Last winter I broke down suddenly and had to seek the advice of a doctor. I felt sore all over, with a pounding in my head, and a dizziness which I had never experienced before. I had a miserable appetite, nothing tasted good, and gradually my health broke down completely. The doctor said I had female weakness, but, although I took his medicine faithfully, I found no relief.

"After two months I decided to try what a change would do for me, and as Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound was strongly recommended to me I decided to try it. Within three days I felt better, my appetite returned, and I could sleep. In another week I was able to sit up part of the day, and in ten days more I was well. My strength had returned, I gained fourteen pounds, and felt better and stronger than I had for years. I gratefully acknowledge its merits. Very sincerely yours, MRS. BERT E. LENNOX, 120 East 4th St., Dixon, Ill."
