The main body of the Northern Pa-thorough inspection of the territory of the road during the past month, arrived in this city yesterday after care-fully completing the trip.

General Passenger Agent Cleland is very well pleased with the results ob-tained on the trip and says that the road will undoubtedly profit handsome-ly on account of the amount of valu-able instruction that has been received by the passenger men.

the trip. "The magnificent growth, wealth and prosperity of the territory tapped by the lines were sources of constant wonder to a majority of the party. The tremendous stretch of country, the lordly mountains and fertile valleys as well as prosperous towns, cities and villages were unexhausted topics of comment from one end of the trip to the other.

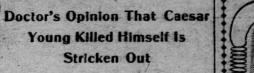

Villages were unexhausted topics of comment from one end of the trip to the other. "The boys all had a good time, too. They worked and studied and played a little and everybody is satisfied. All along the line we were entertained in the best sorts of ways, and I must comment favorably on the way the party entered into the spirit of the trip and conscientiously sought out those facts that would be for the real benefit of the road. "We all laughed a little at the arti-cles that appeared in The Globe concerning the lack of wet goods on the trip, but it must be remembered that this was a business matter first and foremost and not a junket."

NEW YORK, Nov. 23 .- In the trial of Nan Patterson, charged with the murder of Caesar Young, expert testimony of physicians was offered today to show that Young could not have killed himself. Two cabmen testified to having seen Young abuse Miss Patterson early in the morning of June 4 and an other witness, a newsboy, swore that he saw J. Morgan Smith, her brother-in-law, strike Miss Patterson in the face on the night of June 3 after Smith had said to her

"You will have to do it," and she answered, "I won't."

A pawnbroker's clerk identified th revolver with which Young was killed and said it was purchased in Stern's and said it was purchased in Stern's pawn shop on the afternoon of June 3 by a man who was accompanied by a woman. Hyman Stern, who sold the revolver, was too ill to appear in court. Police Captain Sweeney was recalled to testify that he had summoned J. Morgan Smith to appear before the grand jury and that Smith had failed to appear.

Thought It Suicide

The cross-examination of Coroner's Physician O'Hanlon was continued. The witness described in detail the autopsy which he had performed on Young's body and admitted that at the time he thought the case one of sui-ide. This admission however was time he thought the case one of sul-cide. This admission, however, was stricken from the record. He was not permitted to say whether the black marks on the bits of skin which he stripped from Young's finger were made by gunpowder, nor whether he found powder marks when he exam-lned Miss Patterson's hands soon after the shooting

When the trial was resumed Miss Patterson's attorney, Graham Levy, de-clared that although the prosecution has erected several strong barriers through which the defense will have to better its more to severa arounital he through which the defense will have to batter its way to secure acquittal, he had no fear that they would not suc-ceed. He asserted that he would bring forward a witness who would tell a convincing story of having actually seen the shooting, no matter how strong the evidence of the people to the effect that no one was within range of vision of the ceb when the fatal shot was of the cab when the fatal shot was fired.

This witness was a passenger on a street car passing across West Broad-way, a short distance from the scene of the tragedy, he said, and in his nar-rative he will swear that from where he stood, though his glance was but momentary, he saw Nan Patierson's companion in the cab grasping a re-volver in his hand and struggling with a young woman, who was endeavoring to wrest it from him.

The skeleton which was brought into the case yesterday for the use of Coroner's Physician O'Hanlon in describing the course of the bullet which caused Young's death, was again brought into the court room when the trial resumed today. Evidence Stricken Out

At the conclusion of Dr. O'Hanlon's examination that part of his testimony in which he said that he considered the case to be one of suicide, and not homi-cide, 'when he performed the autopsy, was stricken from the record on mo-tion of Mr. Rand. Counsel for the defense took an exception to the ruling of Justice Davis on this point. Dr. Ernest A. Lederle, a chemist, who examined the two pieces of skin taken from Young's finger, said that he had been unable to determine the course been unable to determine the cause of the black spots. "Without a chem-ical test I would not venture to say

"Finally I slipped out and wended my way sliently to my berth. All was well again and this time I slept the sleep of the just and satisfied. "When I awoke it was broad day-light, but I reasoned that if it was late our shoes would be on the floor of the car opposite our berths and therefore reached out my hand to find mine. "My hand groped in nothingness and with a full conviction that if it was time to get up my shoes would be there I turned over and snoozed again. Some time later the Pullman conductor came around to my berth and parted the cur-tains softly. He looked downcast and sheepish and said: "'Sh-h-h, don't say a word." "Wutynell's the matter,' I inquired. "Sh-h-h,' he said again, 'the car's switched off."

"Sh-h-h,' he said again, 'the car's switched off.' "Then he told me that the rear sleep-er containing four parti-colored porters and eighty-seven pairs of shoes had been switched off 100 miles southward during an argument that had arisen among the colored men. "He told me the loss had been dis-covered about five minutes after the deed had been accomplished and that a special train with the shoes would probably catch us within an hour. It was 7:30 then and some of the passen-gers were beginning to stir about and inquire for their shoes. "By marvelous exposition of di-plomacy the conductor quieted them, and only in two instances did he have to tell the truth. These happened when the passengers wanted to get off the train and had to be told the sad fate of their shoes.
