

THE HEAVENLY QUEEN OF MAY.

On looking over a recent collection of sermons issued by an Anglican community called the Society of SS. Peter and Paul, we find the following beautiful tribute to the Virgin. It is from the pen of Rev. Hilary Knox, a member of the society and a fellow of Trinity college, Oxford. The passage is noteworthy in showing the progress of Catholic thought and sentiment throughout the Anglican fold.

"And after careful reflection can we grudge her any of the praise which has been accorded to her. When we have called her Virgin of Christ, Parent of God, Mother of Christ, do not all the other titles in the Litany of Loretto fall short of these and follow from them as night follows day? Mother of Divine Grace, for grace and truth came by Jesus Christ; Mother, most pure, most chaste, Mother inviolate, Mother undefiled—those are but a statement of the necessary conditions. Mother lovable—who could help loving her, unless his heart were hardened with sin? Mother admirable—who could help admiring her, unless his eyes were blinded by envy? Mother of Good Counsel, for it was she who counselled the servants at Cana of Galilee, 'Whatever he saith unto you, do it'; that first lesson of the Christian life, to do what you're told without asking questions. Mother of our Saviour, and of our Creator, too, for without Him was not anything made that was made. Virgin most prudent, for knowing these things she kept them and pondered them in her heart. Virgin whom we ought to love, whom we ought to preach—shame on the people that do not love her, on the ministers that do not preach her! Virgin powerful, for if her prayers are not heard by her Son, whose will be? Will yours and mine? Virgin pitiful—she who stood by Jesus on Calvary knows surely how to pity. Virgin faithful—for she believed in her Son when the world knew Him not. Mirror of Righteousness, for there is no Christian grace which is not reflected in her. Abode of Wisdom, for the coming of Jesus is the key to the riddle of life, as well as to its prison. Cause of our joy, for she is the only human link in the glad chain of our redemption.

"Vessel of the Spirit—we are all that in a sense; Vessels of Honor—we may all be that; but she in a fuller and truer sense is both. Vessel of Devotion beyond all other, for there is no devotional literature that can surpass the Magnificat. Mystic Rose, for 'Herself a Rose, and felt its thorn.' Tower of David, for the hopes of David's line find their last refuge in her. Tower of Ivory, for she resisted all assaults of the devil, a Fortress impregnable; House of Gold, for she, like the Monstrance, derived her glory from that which she bore, and reflected it all back on Him. Ark of the Covenant, because in her was enshrined the New Covenant of grace, as the Old Covenant of the law was enshrined in the Ark which Moses made. Gate of Paradise, because the Gate of Paradise was barred upon us by Adam's transgression, and Mary was the Lock in which the Key of David fitted, who alone could swing it back.

"She is called the Star of the Morning, because in her shone the first beam of heavenly light that heralded the rising of the Sun of Righteousness. Star of the Weak, Refuge of Sinners, Comfort of Mourners, Help of Christians, are but the tribute paid by nineteen centuries of Christian experience to the power of her intercession. She is Queen of the Angels, for Gabriel called her blessed; of the Patriarchs and Prophets, because she carried on her bosom what they desired to see, and died before the sight; of the Apostles, because even John was impatient, and even Thomas doubted, and even Peter was afraid; of the Martyrs, because all the torments of the executioner were contained in the sword that pierced her loving heart at her Son's Passion; of the Confessors, because she followed the Man of Sorrows through His earthly pilgrimage among the people that would not receive Him; of the Virgins, because, like them, she renounced the joys of wedlock, and unlike them knew its sorrows; of all the Saints, because all the Saints in every age have testified to her glory. She is Queen, too, of the Holy Rosary, the Summary of the History of our Redemption, the drama in three acts, the melody in three staves, by which every affection of the human heart is stirred, and every passion stilled. She is the Queen conceived without a sin, because no less could be demanded of her, who was to be the Tabernacle of the Most High. There is no exaggeration in those titles, they are rather understatements, faltering efforts of human language to describe what human thought finds incomprehensible.

"Blessed is she that hath believed, for these shall be a performance of those things which were told her by the Lord; and blessed are we, now that they have been performed, if we, sinful children of the twentieth century, dare to join our forces with all generations in calling her blessed. So may she intercede for us, so may Jesus pity us, so may the Father Himself pardon us, and grant us perseverance in His grace; that we, at the last, may be taken up, whither Mary has been taken up before us, through Death's gates into a Haven of Eternal Peace."
