cation, at least as much as does his brother of the city. It is only the trained mind that can detect the scientific side of farming and by scientific experiment contribute to its advance ment. The educated farmer will not only wrest richer fruit from the soil but he will know how to market to better profit the produce of his fields. The higher education will enable the farmer to create a healthy public opinion in favor of his noble occupation and to take a hand in legislature and congress in framing laws which would benefit state and nation. Mental culture would make the farmer's long winter nights more agreeable, it would sweeten the cup of toil and counteract the debasing tendencies of material occupation. Were the graces of higher education more profusely scattered upon the farming population, there would be less tiring of the farmer, less rushing to the empty glare and the deep pitfalls of the city life. and more of our great men would be recruited from the country. Material prosperity and the higher education, while powerful factors in attaching the farmer to the soil and making his vocation attractive, are not sufficient. To these must be added religion, if the farmer would attain the full measure of earthly happiness his country. "Piety is useful for all things," says St. Paul, "having the promise of the life that now is, as well as of that which is to come." There can be no genuine personal happiness and no peace or order in society without morality, and there can be no morality without religion. "We should indulge with caution," said Washington, in his farewell address, "the supposition that morality can prevail in exclusion of religious principle."

Education and Religion. Now, if religion is needed for life, the regret of Mr. Taft. Catholics at to remedy this defect by establishing schools of their own. Protestants, realizing the insufficiency of religious instruction in the home and the Sunday school, are quite generally trying to put it back into the public school -from which they now see it was unwisely banished. The fact that, according to recent religious census, about two-thirds of the American people are not affiliated with any denomination is admitted by all to be due in some measure, if not in great part, to the absence of religion from the public schools. Until some plan can be agreed upon by which all the children of the republic can receive the religious instruction of their choice in the schools of the state, the churches must do their best, says Mr. Taft again, "to stimulate religion and its practices. Every university," he continues, "should encourage its students to the worship of God. As long as the United States remains a religious nation, there is no danger of the corrosion of bolshevism, communism or any destructive and cruel cuit. Christian civifization rests ultimately on the inspiration of the religious spirit. It is that which will render innocuous, and neutralize the evil effect of selfishness, which is necessary to give energy and thrift and industry to material progress. It is that spirit which sweetens life with the love of family, of country and of God. It is the pres-

If we read the first chapters of the book of Genesis there we will find a statement of the fact of creation. The Bible tells of the fact of creation, but it does not tell us the primitive forms and in no way excludes development. We must believe that God created the world, but the Bible tells no more than that about the early types of creatures. In certain cases species can be crossed with others and thus produce a new form. There is considerable confusion as to the exact meaning of the word, species. The old idea was that a species remains ever fixed and unchangeable; others hold that only a few species were created and that these produced later varieties. Both beliefs are found among Catholic writers. In no case, however, can we exclude the creation of the first species; nor can we include the human soul in this development process. It is these two in the land should strive to put his sentiments into practice. And yet, on the other hand, what a pity it would be, if with our earnest adherence to the teachings of our own creed, we should combine hatred of those professing another creed! This would be a flagrant violation of the law of universal love which Christ made the very touchstone of Christianity: "By this shall all men know you are my disciples, if you have love for one another." Should this hatred flare up into action in politics, it would violate the sixth article of the constitution of the United States: "No religious test shall ever be required as a qualifica tion to any office or public trust under the United States." Should this hatred of the constitution: "Congress shall make no law respecting an establish ment of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof." And since religious liberty is more precious than civil liberty and more conducive even to temporal happiness, hatred of the religion of our fellows at the polls or in legislative halls would be an attack on the very Declaration of Indepen dence which lays down "Liberty and the pursuit of happiness" as among the "inalienable rights" of every man President Harding recently addressing a Bible class in Washington, said: "In the experience of a year in the presi dency there has come to me no other

CATHOLIC CHOSEN AS MOST GALLANT SOLDIER IN NEW YORK.

Sergeant Richard W. O'Neill, of New York, was chosen as the most conspicuous world war hero of New York state at the convention of Disabled American Veterans held in Syracuse, N. Y.

Immediately after, the unanimou vote honoring him, a telegram was sent to Governor Miller asking that he appoint Sergeant O'Neill to represent the state at the dedication of the Hall of Fame of California at San Francisco on June 20. California is erecting a monument for the name and record of the greatest hero in each state. O'Neill has received several war crosses for bravery, including the Medal Militaire, the French Croix de Guerre, the Congressiona Medal of Honor, the Belgian Croix de Guerre, the Italian War Cross, the Montenegrin War Cross and the Con-

STUDENTS STAND HIGH

400 K. OF C. SCHOLARSHIPS WON BY FORMER SERVICE MEN.

That military discipline makes exservice men better students than those who did not see service in the war, is demonstrated in the reports received by the Knights of Columbus national education bureau from forty colleges and universities throughout the country, including such institutions as Yale, Fordham, Notre Dame, Massachusetts Tech. and Georgetown where K. of C. free scholarships for ex-service men are maintained.

More than 400 of the K. of C scholarships were won by veterans of all denominations. The reports state that the veterans have maintained an unusually high rating for proficiency in studies, a higher average, all around, than that of men who did not see service with the army or navy during the war. This fact is generally ascribed to the benefits of military and naval discipline in regulating habits conducive to serious study.

DISTRACTED COUNTRY OBLIGED TO SUFFER FROM TIRADES OF BIGOTS - THEY HAVE THEIR TOM WATSONS IN RHINELAND.

Serious discord has been created among the different religious groups in the area formerly occupied by American troops as a consequence of an anti-Catholic speech delivered by Rev. Dr. Hermann Kremers at a meeting of the united evangelical unions of Neuwied.

The secular newspapers as well as the Catholic press have deprecated Dr. Kremers' violent utterances, and meetings of protest have been held. Catholic speakers have appeared at public assemblies to refute the charges leveled at the Catholics by Dr. Kremers. All the Protestant organizations of Neuwied have given their approval to the minister's statements.

Dr. Kremers declared that Catholics regard the defeat of Germany as a delivery from the Prussian despotism. Pope Benedict, the speaker asserted. was Germany's worst enemy. To this he added the charge that "German Catholics were profiteers during the war and winners in the revolution,"

Rome rejoiced at the downfall of Germany, and received it as a "retributton for the Reformation," Dr. Kremers said. "Pius XI is a Welsh Pope," Dr. Kremers told his hearers, and followed this with a statement that the "Roman Nuncio in Berlin is the symbol of lurking Catholicism." The Nuncio's appearance in Germany was the beginning of the Pope's dominion in Germany, he said. The German Catholics will fall into Papal slavery, and Popery threatens even the Protestants, he continued.

"All Germany will be filled with monasteries," declared Dr. Kremers, in a particularly passionate outburst

RULES ON ALTAR WINE

GENERAL HOLDS ATTORNEY CLERGY MUST CARE FOR DIS-TRIBUTION-CHANGES IN LAW TO BE ANNOUNCED.

New regulations governing the distribution of wine for sacramental purposes, placing the control and responsibility for the distribution on official representatives of the churches, will shortly be promulgated by the treasury department as a result of an opinion just rendered to Secretary of the Treasury Mellon by Attorney General Daugherty.

Mr. Daugherty's ruling not only sustains the view of his predecessor, for mer Attorney General Palmer, that liquor dealers may not as such engage in the distribution of sacramental wines, but further holds that dealers in altar and other ecclesiastical supplies may not deal in sacramental wines.

The attorney general does hold, however, that a rabbi, minister or priest appointed by the official head of a diocese or other ecclesiastical jurisdiction, has the right, under the prohibition enforcement act, to "care for the distribution of sacramental wine within the particular territory of the diocese, conference or other ecclesiastical jurisdiction, subject to the regulations and supervision of the commissioner of internal revenue," and that the commissioner may issue to such designated individual a permit for the distribution of sacramental wine within a specified territory.
