

Give me your hand in mine, love,
Your hand, so warm a d true,
Look into my eyes, and see,
And how I love you.

Can you note one chord untuned, love,
To the music of your speech;
Can you sound to depths so deep, love,
Your dear voice will not reach?

Life has so many griefs, love,
So many over, black wrongs,
So little of sun and shine, love,
So much of sad and song;

So little to cheer and bless, love,
So much of the broken pain,
So much of gloom and clouds, love,
So many days of the rain.

That oh, were it not for you, love,
Your dear, your own sweet face,
I'd pray when I fell asleep, love,
I never again might wake.

Give me your hand in mine, love,
Look into my eyes, and see,
And how I love you.

Than the shining faith in your eyes, love,
And the trust in your tender kiss.

Emma Abbott and Her Husband.

Eugene Wetherell, Miss Abbott's husband, is in the true sense of the word, a business man.

His wife has both grown from poverty into riches. Their combined property is estimated at $125,000.

Wetherell insists that Abbott shall have her separate fortune. Every week she sends the bulk of her salary to her bankers in New York to be deposited in her name.

Wetherell has a warm heart under a covering of adamant. He is not of a social nature. He is hard to become acquainted with.

Once pierced the coat of adamant and his heart is as warm and responsive as a girl's. He is deeply in love with Abbott.

They were married in London several years ago. Abbott thinks Wetherell the handsomest man in the world.

She loves to talk about him; about his manly beauty and goodness to her.

Abbott is a very pious woman. One of her missions on earth, she says, is to see her husband in the bosom of the church.

Wetherell says she is on her knees down and saying her prayers every night before going to bed.

"No matter how severe the weather is and how much risk she runs of taking cold," she says, "she kneels down by her bed and spends five minutes at her devotions. She says she never yet took cold while saying her prayers."

Miss Abbott is not a very great eater. The afternoon that she left here she took supper with Mr. Wetherell, Brignoli, Castle and several other well-known opera singers.

The bill of fare was elegant, including fish chowder, broiled mackerel, duck, tenderloin, etc., with accompanying wines. Abbott drank half a glass of claret; she will not taste any other kind of liquor unless for medicinal purposes.

As Abbott came out from her supper she noticed a bar in the front of the place. "Oh, dear me," she said, "I'm afraid this isn't a nice place, but Brignoli told me it was." All his associates call Brignoli by the pet abbreviation of Brig.

Mr. Morrissey was asked why it was that Abbott was so especially popular in the south, and he gave as a reason that her fervid style was particularly pleasing to the warm, glowing, sentimental nature of the southerner.

A Lady's Wish.

"Oh, how I wish my skin was as clear and soft as yours," said a lady to her friend. "You can easily make it so," answered the friend. "I wish I could."

Avoid Rum and Bad Women.

Mr. Gray was hung for murder at Sherbrooke, Ind., Friday last. On the scaffold he advised all young men to avoid rum and bad women, saying that it was these that brought him to the gallows.

A man speaking from the gallows should be heard, as if one rose from the dead and his solemn warnings treasured up by all who hear them. In such an hour there is no necessity for deception; there is nothing that profane insincerity. Rum and bad women are the full of their works, and the experience of every day of every man's life goes to confirm the fact that the world contains no two free half as dangerous to the peace and happiness of men and women, so certainly destructive of their good names, or that so surely hurry them to dishonored graves; and yet the average young man will laugh at the warnings which are meant for his safety, and consider himself too shrewd ever to share the fate which has overtaken so many thousands within his own knowledge. True, one may never be hanged on account of these things, but there is none the less danger that disgrace and untimely graves may come to them from other directions on the same account.

PACIFIC PASSENGERS

Who Received Rough Handling on the West Bound Train Last Night.

A Broken Rail Encountered Twenty-Eight Miles West of St. Louis.

And Two Cars Ditched, Injuring Some Eight or Ten Passengers.

The west-bound passenger train (No. 3) that left St. Louis a few minutes before 9 o'clock last night, and was due at Sedalia at 3:30 this morning, did not arrive until 11:30 o'clock, owing to an accident that occurred at a point twenty-eight miles west of St. Louis, between Eureka and Glencoe, and just this side of the Merriam river, at 10 o'clock p. m.

The train consisted of six coaches, and mail, express and baggage cars. At the point above referred to

A BROKEN RAIL was encountered and an instant the coach immediately behind the smoking car was going down an embankment forty feet high, and the one following was pushing it down upon it. The first of these two turned completely over, but the other was more fortunate, merely sliding down the embankment.

In an instant all was the greatest confusion. Women and children, wild with terror, added to the excitement by their screams, making the occasion one never to be forgotten. All were frightened, of course; but it required but a few seconds for the inmates of the coaches that had not left the track to alight and commence the work of ascertaining who and

HOW MANY WERE INJURED. All went to work with a will, and it was not long until the passengers in the overturned coaches were liberated, and the discovery was made that no less than ten were injured, some of them seriously. They were immediately carried back into the sleeping coach, where they received every attention and medical treatment, the same having been summoned as soon as the accident occurred.

As soon as possible a wrecking train appeared on the scene, having been sent out from St. Louis, and the work of clearing the track was commenced and completed at five o'clock this morning, when the journey westward was continued.

The run to Washington was made as quickly as possible, where eight of those who had received injuries were left at the company's hospital for a PROPER TREATMENT OF THEIR INJURIES. As to the names of those left there it was impossible to obtain any information. The passengers who came on west, including those belonging to this city, did not know them, and the train officials declined to be interviewed. It is known, though, that those left at the company's hospital were three men, three women and two children, and it was the general impression that three of them could not recover, if they are not dead now.

Among the Sedalia on board were Miss Marie Brown, Will Hengrich, Harry Allen, W. W. Herold and probably some others whose names the reporter failed to obtain. Will was in the coach that turned completely over, and his looks on his arrival here betokened rough usage. His face showed an ugly bruise, and his hand crowned with a couple of holes that were made by his being TROWN ON HIS HEAD from the center of the car to the front end.

Conductor Charlie Fuller was in charge of the train, and the passengers were warm in their praise of the manner in which he did all in his power to assist the wounded.

It seems that the engine broke the rail when it struck it, and then ran probably a couple of hundred feet before the two cars left the track. The rail was broken into pieces from six inches to a foot in length, which were thrown provisionally about.

In the car with Will Hengrich was a babe that was tossed about as though a foot ball. After Will ascertained that he had received no serious injury, he seized hold of the little one, and passed it from the window to Harry Allen, and received the thanks of the babe's mother. Will was the only one of

THE SEDALIA PARTY who was hurt in the wreck. Samuel Templeman, a butcher of Pleasant Hill, was on the train when it reached Sedalia. He received internal injuries, and his shoulder was badly sprained, but he declined stopping at Washington, preferring to go home.

The spot where the accident occurred is almost identical with the same a similar smashup took place two years ago. It is described as one of the worst points on the road, and the only wonder is that a number were not killed and still more injured.

Will Survive the Shock.

The Queen of the Prairies is mourning in sackcloth and ashes. The great money king has spoken, and the machine shops are busy. Having already suffered the loss of the general office, this will be a severe blow to the thriving young city, and one that would forever prevent a place of less energy than this phenomenal outgrowth of western enterprise. "Eds" will survive the shock, but it is too full of vitality to succumb to this stroke. Though the fruits of ill-fortune may cut the stock of prosperity to the ground, the gem is still there and the energetic eye of her citizens will soon come to put forth new branches and will bud and bloom as of yore. And we hope this may be so, for Sedalia is a city we are all proud of, and hope to see her prosperous and thriving—Windsor Review.

Married.

Last night, at the residence of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. B. M. Williams, on East Third street, by Elder B. D. Fulton, Mr. G. M. Marshall and Miss Maggie Williams. Mr. Alex. Ewert and Miss Anna Belle Norman being the attendants.

A large proportion of children who die early are those whose brain development is unusually large in comparison with the body. Why is this? Simply because the functions of the body are too frail to supply the wants going on in the brain consequent upon active intelligence. Follows Compound Syrup of Hypophosphites is so prepared that it imparts the vital principle directly to the brain, while it assists in developing a vigorous and robust body.

A Happy Restoration.

I can truly say that I owe my present existence and happy restoration to the happy and joy of life, to the use of Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Cure, and I say to every one suffering in any manner of kidney, liver or urinary trouble, "Use this remedy and recover."

A FATHER'S DEFECTION.

A Former Sedalia Blacksmith Defects His Child in Kansas City.

The Bazo has just heard of a case of child defection that occurred in Kansas City, in which the parties directly interested were former residents of Sedalia.

A family, consisting of George Bazo and his wife, and an infant son, occupied a room at the corner of Fifteenth and Main streets about three months since Mr. Bazo and his wife, who were formerly of Sedalia, were proscribed with the quick consumption and died last Tuesday, the 7th inst. A few days previous Mr. William McCormick, a former resident of Sedalia, whose husband was a compositor in the Democrat office, had taken the baby—a six-month-old boy—into her home to care for it. After his wife's death Bazo borrowed money to defray the funeral expenses. Thursday, after the funeral, he went to Mr. McCormick's house and borrowed his overcoat, saying that he intended going out on the Westport road to engage board for the infant. Nothing further being heard of his movements, Mr. McCormick went to the house Saturday morning last and found that Bazo had sold all his effects, even to the baby's clothes and bed, leaving no sign. Mr. McCormick mourns the loss of his overcoat and Bazo's employer the money loaned him during the emergency.

Bazo is a blacksmith and formerly lived in this city, where he worked for McLaughlin Bros., on Oage street, south of the market house.

He is described as being a drunken and dissolute character. Mr. McCormick, after discovering the flight of the man whom he had befriended, reported the matter at the police station, together with the fact that he had a child for adoption. Monday two ladies, having heard of the little waif, called at the station within fifteen minutes of each other with a view of taking the child. They were each referred to Mr. McCormick's residence. When the last caller arrived the first lady was forming the acquaintance of the youngster, who is represented as a bright little fellow. Each wanted the infant. The symptoms of war were at last quieted, and the lady in whose favor the matter was decided carried off her new property in triumph. The baby is very fortunate, his new parents being well-to-do people who reside on Seventh street, in Kansas City.

Uncertainty may attend business ventures and enterprises but it never attends the prompt administration of Dr. Bell's Cough Syrup. Price 25 cents.

THE MISSOURI PACIFIC

And its Texas Extensions as at Present Contemplated.

General Manager Talmage, of the Missouri Pacific, has been interviewed since his return from Texas to St. Louis. He is naturally feeling very well since his advancement to the uncontrolled sway of 1,900 miles of railway, with the certainty that within a very few years this will be increased to over 4,000 miles. On his Texas trip Mr. Talmage was accompanied only by Judge Purdie, the general solicitor of the road. The visit extended as far as San Antonio. Its object was solely to make arrangements for the speedy extension of the M. & T. road at its southern end through Texas toward the Rio Grande and the City of New Mexico. These arrangements were made with Mr. Talmage's usual decision and rapidity of execution. As much was accomplished by him in a few days as many a superintendent of manager would have done in six months.

While at San Antonio Mr. Talmage started out three surveying parties, one south towards Fort Worth, another one towards Whiteboro, and one in the direction of Waco. The sixty miles of road to Whiteboro were let at once to contractors for building and laborers put to work. The road will go to Waco, 172 miles, thence to San Antonio and onward to Laredo, on the Rio Grande, making in all 470 miles from St. Louis, all to be constructed by the 1st of September, 1901.

From that point the work will be pushed to a city of Mexico, a distance of 800 miles, which is to be completed and placed in first-class running order by the first of January, 1903. When this 800 miles is finished it will form part of an unbroken line, under one management, that will be about 2,500 miles in length. The constituent roads of this immense line are the Missouri Pacific and its branches, the M. & T. and its branches, and the Texas and M. & T. divisions. To complete a work there is already $25,000,000 in readiness, and the management say whatever more is needed can be had at once.

Mr. Gould seems to have left his general manager entirely uncontrolled as to the actual operation and management of the road. This is an absolute power which is not possessed by any other manager in the country, excepting Mr. Clark of the Union Pacific.

A Bit of History.

In one of the main halls of the world-renowned Charity Hospital of New Orleans a beautiful tablet records the history of a noble deed, which should be a source of pride to every Pennsylvanian. It is this: "The Charity Hospital of Louisiana was founded in the year 1786 by Don Andrew Almonaster 'T' Bazo, to whose generous endowment, munificence of the Legislature of this State, and the liberality of the State of Pennsylvania, the community is indebted for the maintenance of this edifice" in the year MDCCCXXXII. This recalls the fact that since 1838 its existence has been continued by means of the endowment of the Louisiana State Lottery Company, giving it over $400,000 at that time. A letter addressed to M. A. Danphin, New Orleans, La., or some person at No. 319 Broadway, New York City, will furnish any one the particulars.

An excellent chain of certificates verify the exact issue of Dr. Bell's Cough Syrup. Price 25 cents.

AWAITING ADOPTION.

"Barnard's baby" comes forward again as a candidate for public favor. Mrs. Crawford, the lady who adopted the little fellow, reported of her babe a yesterday and returned him to Mr. McCormick. The last named lady repudiated the matter to Mayor Chesson. —Kansas City Journal.

This is the baby referred to in yesterday's Bazo, that had been deserted by a man named Bazo, formerly a blacksmith in the employ of McLaughlin Bros. in this city.

IDA'S TWO MARRIAGES.

The First Time, When Only Twelve Years Old, to a Vagabond.

And Again On the 3d Day of December to Jerome Green, in This City.

On the 3d day of December Mr. Jerome Green, a young man 21 years of age, employed as teamster at Zimmerman & Harter's mill, was united in marriage, by "Quire Fisher," to a comely young woman who gave the name of Ida Stoddard, who for the three months past had been employed as a domestic at the residence of Mr. Zimmern.

After the ceremony Green took his bride to the residence of his parents, on West Second street, where they were to make their home. The young woman was accompanied by Green's father and mother, and until yesterday

THEIR MARRIED LIFE was one of bliss. Sunday a dentist from Versailles, named Fry, arrived in Sedalia in quest of a woman named Mrs. Ida Bazo, who had formerly lived near Versailles, on a farm, and who had left her husband and four children, coming to this city, where he heard she had engaged as a domestic. Of the four children of whom Mr. Bazo was the mother Dr. Fry and wife had taken one to raise, and it was in regard to the little one that Mr. Fry desired to converse with Mrs. Bazo. He inquired around, and soon made the discovery that the woman was in the city, but that she had been married to Jerome Green, having passed herself off as a single woman. He immediately called at the residence of Mr. Green, and inquired for her.

THE DOUBLY MARRIED WOMAN, and was informed that she and her husband had gone to Lumberton and would not return until Monday morning.

Desiring that his business might not be understood, Mr. Fry informed the elder Mrs. Green that he had called to converse with her daughter-in-law in regard to her child, which he and his wife had taken to raise.

"My daughter-in-law's child!" exclaimed Mr. Green. "Why, it has no child!"

Mr. Fry insisted that she was mistaken, as Ida had not only one child, but was the mother of four.

THIS OPENED THE EYES of the mother-in-law, and she was all anxiety for the newly wedded couple to return.

Yesterday morning they arrived on the morning train and immediately started for home. As they were walking down Oage street, Mr. Fry, who had remained over, overtook them and starting on a brisk walk overtook them just before they had reached home.

He spoke to Mrs. Green, who recognized him in a minute and introduced him to her husband. They conversed for a few minutes, the husband being somewhat bewildered at

THE DEVELOPMENT.

As Mr. Fry was compelled to leave on the train, he could not remain but a brief period, and Jerome and Ida went into the house, where still further developments were to greet the husband.

The mother-in-law informed Ida of what had been told her, and requested her to tell the truth as to the story. Buried into tears the unhappy woman acknowledged and learned the above facts.

He stated that he was satisfied in his own mind that Ida had committed suicide, and he thought she was now lying at the bottom of Muddy creek. He had done all he could toward looking for her in that locality at present. He did not want the woman, but if she was dead, he would of course give her a decent burial; and, if she is living, he would do anything to get her out of the country.

With this he left the reporter, saying that he was going to Lumberton on the 2 o'clock freight train, where he proposed hunting up Mr. Cavendish and ascertaining from him what the woman had to say when she left his wagon at Muddy bridge.

The reporter had a brief conversation with Mrs. Green, who is positive that the wretched woman has suicided. She entertains the belief of her son, that Ida's body will be found either in Muddy creek or the adjacent woods.

She says Jerome has done all in his power for Ida, but of course he could not live with her under the circumstances.

Since the wretched woman's doings have reached the newspapers of Sedalia, a deep interest has been awakened, and more is known of the woman's past history than has been published. Should she yet be alive, it will be produced at the proper time.

Jerome said before departing that he would not return this evening unless he obtained some definite information regarding her. If he cannot get this by interviewing Mr. Cavendish, he will return and to-morrow will make a thorough search in the vicinity of Muddy creek. The woman took no clothes with her, and wore a sunbonnet instead of the new hat she had just purchased. She did not have any money, having refused to accept any from Jerome when he offered it to her.

If she had been going away with the intention of seeking a home, she would probably have acted differently. The present outlook points to suicide, although such may not be the case.

LATER.

Jerome Green returned from Lumberton at 4 o'clock this evening. He heard of Ida at that point at 8:30 last night.

She was then going west in a buggy, in company with a man. He has determined to hunt no further for her, but let the matter drop where it is.

CARD.

To all who are suffering from the errors and indiscretions of youth, nervous weakness, early decay, loss of manhood, etc., we would say that if you will cure you, run or come. This great remedy was discovered by a missionary in South America. Send a self-addressed envelope to the Rev. T. Inman, Station D, New York City.

John Cleary Discharged.

John Cleary, the young man arrested at Holden a week ago, charged with burglarizing D. H. Smith's store, in this city, was taken before "Quire Fisher" this afternoon for an examination. Prosecuting Attorney Jackson, after having sifted the evidence, became convinced that the state could not make a case, and the prisoner was discharged, and will return to Holden this evening.

Cause and Effect.

The main cause of nervousness is indigestion, and that is caused by weakness of the stomach. One can have good nerves and good health without using Hop Bitters to strengthen the stomach, purify the blood, and keep the liver and kidneys active, to carry off all the poisonous and waste matter of the system. JOINED IN WEDLOCK.

Marriage of Mr. Will J. Bagby and Miss Carrie A. Barley Last Night.

At the residence of the bride's father, on West Fifth street, at 8 o'clock last night, Mr. Will J. Bagby was united in marriage to Miss Carrie A. Barley, the ceremony being performed by Rev. J. R. Fulton, pastor of the First Baptist church.

Both the bride and groom are well known in Sedalia's social circle, and his safe to say that two more popular and beloved young people do not reside in the city.

Mr. Bagby is engaged in the grocery business on West Main street, where by his gentlemanly conduct, correct business habits and universal popularity, he has succeeded in building up a trade second to none in the city.

The bride is the oldest daughter of Mr. J. H. Barley, is a handsome blonde, and one of the most intelligent and entertaining young ladies of the many of which Sedalia can so justly boast.

Between fifty and sixty guests were present on this joyous occasion, and surely no young couple ever started out on life's journey with more good wishes extended than those that were present bestowed upon Mr. and Mrs. B. Last night after the ceremony had been performed.

At the conclusion of the round of congratulations, all were invited to the dining room to partake of the splendid feast that had been prepared for the occasion. It was just such an one as might have been expected, and all present did it ample justice.

The list of presents received was large, some of them being indeed elegant, the following being a portion thereof:

From the groom, a handsome gold watch and chain, large editions of Burns' Poetical Works, the Waverley Novels, and a large and beautiful parlor lamp.

Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Barley, parents of the bride, a handsome Bingley large and handsome clock, and a set of silver knives and forks.

Mrs. Sprecher and family, a pretty set of glassware.

Doris Barley, an ornamental parlor stand.

Frank R. Meyer, a fine silver fruit and cake basket.

George and Belle, a Bohemian glass toilet set.

E. L. Bichel, of Denver, Colorado, two horse shoes made of rich mineral specimens.

Mr. and Mrs. E. R. Blair, a silver coffee pot, silver pickle stand, and a porcelain ornamental cake receiver.

Mr. and Mrs. Scott, a silver cake and fruit basket.

I. Barley, a Japanese handkerchief box.

Miss Bettie Lobben, of Warrensburg, a basket and four silver, gold lined, salt cellar.

Mrs. M. E. Jones, a silver butter knife.

Mrs. and Capt. J. O. Edwards, a silver butter dish.

Rattie H. Thawer, a pearl card case.

Mollie Barley, a pair of fancy parlor chairs.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry C. Demuth, a half dozen silver fruit knives.

Miss Meek Selzer, a pair of large ornamental silver napkin rings.

George D. Ferrell and Bob Bradford, a silver silver, cream pitcher, sugar bowl, spoon cup and a Japanese silver card receiver.

Albert Dalby, a large, fine photograph album.

Mr. and Mrs. W. D. Fellows, a huge and handsome family Bible.

Mrs. Mat. Zuer and daughter, a pearl hair le gold pen and fancy paper weight.

Mr. and Mrs. E. T. Murphy, a silver fruit and cake basket.

W. A. McMillan, a full and handsome dinner set of fine and ornamental china.

LEAVENWORTH SCANDAL.

A Woman Who Once Shone in Society There Falls From Grace.

Leavenworth society will be somewhat agitated to learn of a scandal in which is implicated a woman who once shone in the best society in the city up the river. She was formerly the wife of a well-known dentist, and upon his death occurring married her present husband. The military man referred to is a bank cashier in Pittsburg. The Pittsburg Leader says:

There was a story of domestic infidelity published in the papers not long since in which a well-known military man figured as the cause of a broken circle. The husband had reached the point at which positive measures are taken, after a long period of harassing suspicion. He had separated from his wife, or she had separated from him, and the whole unhappy situation was on the ragged edge of public concern. A divorce was under preparation by the husband, but before the papers were filed in court conciliatory advances were made, the husband condoned past offenses under the promise of the wife that she would sin no more, and the sky seemed to clear.

Since that time nothing has been said about the matter. The military man was so nearly wrecked quietly took to his stocks, no to speak, and left the city. The husband could not bear the scene of his wretched experience, nor to come in contact with those who knew it, and especially of him who had caused it. He sought and found a place in Philadelphia, and there took his wife and re-established a home. His occupation was that of traveling salesman for a business house of the Quaker city, as it had formerly been for a Pittsburg house.

All went serene for a little time, but it was a very little time. The husband left home for an extended trip. In the course of his circuit he came to Pittsburg, and while here learned that the military gentleman, who had been the cause of so much trouble to himself, was out of town. He became filled at once with his old fears, and immediately purchased a ticket for Philadelphia. There, as he suspected, he found the military gentleman enjoying the company of his (the traveling man's) wife—"putting up with him and her," according to a letter written by him to a friend in this city. "I should have killed the dog and her too, but I just came away and concluded I could get even with him," he says.

To this end it seems the wronged husband has written all these facts to the editor of the military man's paper, and is bringing about the same result as has come to his own family. The husband is now en route to Colorado. He says he has left his wife forever. Inasmuch as he has once condoned his wife's offense he will hardly be able, according to the laws of this state, to again divorce her once covered. He is greatly affected by the shattering of his hopes, which had been resting upon his wife's promise, and declares he lives now to "get even" with the cause.

Forty Years His Junior.

The Crime of a Farmer who Married a Young Wife.

New York.

Mrs. Lizzie Van Tassel, whose home is in the Little Ulster county hamlet of New Salem, was thirty-eight years of age on Wednesday, and it was arranged that her birthday should be celebrated by a social gathering of her neighbors. But instead of the pleasant party anticipated the Van Tassel dwelling was filled by mourners.
