

Says the Missouri Post, of Concordia: We have just received from the irrepressible and energetic BAZOO man, J. West Goodwin, of Sedalia, the proceedings of the seventeenth annual session of the Missouri Press Association, held at Carthage, May 8th and 9th, 1883. As an illustration of the perfection to which the "art preservative" has attained, it merits the highest praise, and reflects the most unbounded credit on Mr. Goodwin and the BAZOO. We are glad to note this evidence of his ability. His name is a household word all over the state; his success has been achieved by earnest, well directed effort and he deserves the high position he holds among new paper men.

The Clinton Advocate remarks: "We are in receipt of a copy of the proceedings of the seventeenth annual session of the Missouri Press association, held at Carthage last May. With its addresses and essays it forms quite an interesting literary work, one every way worthy of preservation. Typographically it is really handsome and does great credit to the office from which it originated, and demonstrates fully the ability of J. West Goodwin to do work in a truly artistic manner."

The Joplin Daily Herald says: "The proceedings of the seventeenth annual meeting of the Missouri Press association, held at Carthage last May have been published in pamphlet form. The work is from the office of the Sedalia BAZOO, and is something of which the members of the fraternity may well feel proud. The title page is a beauty, and shows that the BAZOO establishment is possessed of skilled artisans of artistic taste."

RICKMAN'S RUDE.

The Heavy Weight Alderman of the Third Ward Quietly Marries Wednesday Night.

For sometime the intimate friends of Alderman J. B. Rickman were aware of the fact that he intended to lead a fair partner to the hymeneal altar, but the exact time had been kept a secret. On last Wednesday evening the portly statesman slipped down to the recorder's office and procured his license, which by a collusion with the officials was kept from the public.

About 9 o'clock of the same evening he was united in marriage with Miss M. E. Cunningham, of East Sedalia, at the residence of Mrs. E. T. Brown, corner of Brown and Fifth streets, the Rev. J. M. Plannett officiating.

Immediately after the ceremony the couple went to the cosy residence of the groom, on Fifth between Brown and Summit streets.

The groom is too well known to need any particular mention. He is an East Sedalia merchant, and is now serving his second term as alderman of the Third ward. The bride is a young lady of about twenty summers, petite, charming and very accomplished.

The couple will hold an affair for the benefit of their friends, the date of which has not yet been set.

Alderman Rickman and his bride have the best and heartiest wishes of the BAZOO for a bright and happy future, a merry Christmas and a glad and happy New Year.

The Third ward alderman at last has yielded to his fate. And many friends will be glad to him—The champion heavy weight.

Heaven bless him and his bonny bride. He's won a charming mate. And she has won a man to trust—The council's heavy weight.

With new-born pride the alderman will walk his daily rounds. Right jauntily will he step off. With his three hundred pounds.

Way blessings thick on Rickman fall. His happiness is great. May wedlock add to, not decrease, His famous fighting weight.

A Marriage in High Life—Narrow Escape of a Minister's Wife.

Correspondence of the BAZOO.

BOONVILLE, Mo., Dec. 17.

A marriage in which there was something of a romance was consummated this morning at the City hotel, in Boonville. The contracting parties were Mr. J. Ross Apple, senior member of the furnishing goods house of Apple & Hodge, St. Louis, and Mrs. Salie Ferrel, widow of the late N. L. Ferrel, of Boonville. At 10 o'clock this morning the marriage ceremony took place in the parlor of the City hotel, Rev. R. S. Hunter, of the M. E. church south, of this city, officiating. The parlor was darkened and handsomely decorated with flowers, and the bridal couple was preceded by Master Henry Ferrel, son of the bride, bearing floral emblems. The marriage was a very quiet affair, only the following intimate friends of the bride being present: Mesdames R. S. Hunter, James M. Nelson, nee Spahr, Marcus Williams, Lou V. Stephens, H. M. Clark, Mary McPherson and C. H. Green; Misses Mamie Spahr, Lina Howard, Fannie Thompson, Birdie Brent, Laura Able, Amanda Kelly and Miss Waddell of Keokuk; W. M. Williams, Will Spahr, Lou V. Stephens, Charles Glasgow, Price Boone, Harry Wilson and George W. Ferrel. Mr. and Mrs. Apple left immediately after the ceremony for Hannibal, where they will spend several days, and from whence they will go to St. Louis, where a reception will be tendered them by Mr. John F. Apple, brother of the groom. They will make their home in St. Louis. Mrs. Salie Ferrel is an esteemed and highly respected lady of Boonville, the citizens of which congratulate her on her happy union, yet regret to lose her from the Vine Clad. Mr. Apple is well and favorably known to many of our citizens. He was a "chum" and companion of Mr. N. L. Ferrel in his earlier days, the two having worked together at the saddler's bench in the same shop. The BAZOO extends good wishes and congratulations, hearty and sincere.

A NARROW ESCAPE.

Mrs. Machett, wife of Rev. Alexander Machett, pastor of the Baptist church of this city, came near meeting with a fatal or serious accident last night, as she left the church after the evening services, her foot slipped on a piece of ice and she was thrown to the pavement down the steps that lead to the church. Fortunately the injuries she received by the fall were not dangerous though painful. She was moved by kind and loving hands to the church and medical aid summoned. The principal wound received was a cut over the left eye. The many friends of this good woman will be glad to hear that she is rapidly recovering.

BARRICK'S BLAST.

The Georgetown Postmaster Files an Answer to Constable Gray's Statement

GEORGETOWN, Mo., Dec. 15.

EDITOR BAZOO:—I have no desire for newspaper notoriety, but my name having been in print several times during the last two months, and there being such a lengthy item in the BAZOO concerning me and my actions that "patience has ceased to be a virtue."

Mr. Gray's statement that a large number of Georgetown citizens have signed a petition requesting a change in postmasters is a sweeping assertion to say the least of it, when such signers are composed of a few of the white citizens of Georgetown, together with a much larger number of her colored population, and in addition to these several who are not in any way in the matter, as they do not now nor have they at any previous time since I have been here gotten their mail at Georgetown. Constable Gray should have told the reporter of the efforts that were made to obtain the signatures of certain Sedalia citizens who were recently Georgetownites.

The respectable and intelligent men of near Georgetown express themselves satisfied with their present postmaster and opposed to any change in postmasters or to the removal of the postoffice to a private house, as the petitioners request. They complain not of the lack of courtesy extended to them, or of any delay in their mails, whether they purchase goods of me or elsewhere.

Mr. Gray buys no goods of me. I would have been glad had he stated in what manner or when the intimation to officials doctored occurred. Am surprised that he did not say I kicked a lady out of the postoffice.

This female, for she is not worthy the name of woman, Mat Morton, colored, has served her term in jail for stealing, has kept a bawdy house; in fact, is a prostitute of the most degraded type. When ordered out of my store she did not go, and so was knocked out with one blow of my fist, for having sworn a lie against me in court. Does any man censure me for getting rid of a jail bird or a prostitute?

According to Mr. Gray's statement, the crowd who rocked Noah Bastley, a late merchant of Georgetown, was made up and urged on by myself. On the 5th day of October, during the rocking season, different parties brought this same report to me, and that night, while the rocks were being thrown, I confronted Mr. Gray and repeated what I had heard. He denied saying it; said he thought so. I then informed him that I had had nothing whatever to do with the attacking party, for I had been attending to my own business and not meddling with my neighbors' affairs, as Mr. Gray is in the habit of doing.

When Mr. Gray made the above statements to the reporter he knew that he grossly misrepresented matters.

DRAFFEN DECLINES

To be a Candidate for the Democratic Nomination for Governor.

Special Correspondence of the BAZOO.

BOONVILLE, Dec. 20th.

The Advertiser and Topic, to-morrow, will contain the following letter from Mr. J. W. Draffen, of this city, in which he declares he will not be a candidate for governor under any circumstances, and therefore, the mention of his name in that connection is without his consent or approval, and entirely against his wishes. The letter explains itself:

BOONVILLE, Mo., Dec. 18, '83.

TO THE EDITOR ADVERTISER—Dear Sir: I am daily approached by friends and this question is propounded to me: "Are you a candidate for the office of Governor?" To this question I have always returned the same answer.

I wish now to say publicly that I am not, nor will I under any circumstances consent to become a candidate for that office. My friends must allow me to decide this question.

And now permit me to say to you and others members of the press who have spoken in flattering terms of myself, that I am not unmindful of the compliment, that I thank them for it. I am obliged to you one and all.

In making the announcement that I am not a candidate I do not wish it to be understood that I am indifferent on the subject of politics, for I think it the duty of every voter, especially in a government like this, to manifest an interest in the selection of its officers, for in theory we have a government where the people rule. That is, the people are the masters and the officers are but their servants. Whilst I only claim to be a private in the democratic ranks, in fact as to nothing higher, I shall always be found contending for the success of democrats, and when I use the word democrat, I do not mean those who make the most noise and fuss. But I mean those who think democracy is right and "practice what they preach," those are my kind of democrats.

Truly yours, J. W. DRAFFEN.

From B. F. Liepsner, A. M., Red Bank, N. J.: I have been troubled with Catarrh so badly for several years that it seriously affected my voice. I tried Dr. —'s remedy without the slightest relief. One bottle of Ely's Cream Balm did the work. My voice is fully restored and my head feels better than for years.

THE EMMA BOND CASE.

The Testimony Elicited by the Defense is Not Very Startling.

Hillsboro, Ill., Dec. 20.—Sheriff Haines, of Taylorville, was the first witness this morning. He testified he and Attorney Dreuner had fitted the toe nail paring to Montgomery's toe at the jail. Montgomery was perfectly willing to have it done. The paring was thicker than Montgomery's toe nail. It fitted at one corner, but the other side did not fit at all.

The witness put Clements and Pettus in jail. He examined Montgomery's clothing carefully. It appeared to have been worn three or four days. He saw no blood or other stains.

He examined Clements' clothing the night of his arrest. The shirt was red and blue striped. The red stripes had run somewhat. He was not satisfied and examined them again the next day but found no stains on the shirt or underclothes.

He also examined Pettus' clothes, neither undergarment had the appearance of being wet across the hips. There were no stains on any of the garments. All the clothes had evidently been worn several days. There was no communication between the prisoners that day.

Cross-examined the witness said the prisoners were not put in a cell until noon. In the afternoon Clements and Pettus were in the cell while Montgomery was out looking for a bond. The witness was not at the jail all the time but knew the prisoners could not have been put together.

He examined the clothing for his own satisfaction. This testimony offsets that of the convict Meyer, who said the defendants had a consultation the morning they were jailed.

Thomas Hart testified he tried to put Mr. Dickerson up through the scuttle hole of the school house the morning of the outrage. The witness was six feet and two inches high and weighed one hundred and thirty-five pounds.

Mr. Harman who was also in the loft, tied a shawl around Dickerson and lifted him above my head and stood on a chair and held him up high as he could, but Dickerson didn't come within two feet of the ceiling. Harman pulled him up and I helped all I could by boosting.

Charley Masters, nine years old, who was in the school with Emma Bond, and left just before she was assaulted, testified, "I was the only scholar in that afternoon. Miss Bond took dinner at Ed Montgomery's where she boarded, and I ate my dinner in the school house yard, then went to the coal house and played there till Miss Bond came back. I was not in the school house during the noon recess, I said my lessons after dinner, then I had a recess during which Miss Bond went to Pettus house. I stayed around the coal house and did not go away from there, I saw old John and young John Montgomery during recess going along the road past the school house. John asked me why I wasn't playing with the school children."

I said there wasn't any; he said "Well wait and I will come back and I will wrestle with you."

When Miss Bond came back we went in the school house. I told her there was a noise in the loft. I said I thought they was tramps.

She said "No, it's rats."

The scuttle hole was open all day. I saw mud that morning on the wall under the scuttle and said to the teacher to look at that. She said nothing.

Cross-examined the witness said: I laid on the roof of the coal house kicking up my heels. I could not see the school house door.

This witness was on the stand an hour and a half and made many statements which differed from those made on the preliminary trial.

Great is the Mystery of Godliness.

Philadelpia, Dec. 20.—A christian convention to form an anti-secret society league, met to-day. A delegate prayed for the people to be delivered from a bondage greater than human slavery, and asked that the spirit of God might open the eyes and enlighten the minds of christians to the great danger of attending secret societies.

Officers were chosen and addresses made by Rev. J. P. Stoddard and President Blanchard, of Lincoln college, Illinois.

Resolutions were adopted denouncing all secret societies and declaring that the Masonic lodge fills our offices secular and divine, with its partizans and shapless political teachings, corrupting morality, subverting both christian religion and free institutions. The resolutions also declare the Grand army of the Republic dangerous unless free from secret organizations.

O'Donnell's Monument.

Dublin, Dec. 20.—The friends of O'Donnell, who was hanged Monday for killing Carey, the informer, propose to erect a memorial there. It is reported Kerrigan, an informer, was shot during a disturbance in Cong. County of Mayo, to day.

Kerrigan's testimony in the Huddy family murder case, in 1882, convicted three men, who were hanged; also in the informer Joyce murder trial, which resulted in the hanging of three men. For a long time he was protected by the government, owing to threats against his life. Among the expedients for his protection was the erection of an iron hat, impervious to rifle shots, in which he lived.

With Nary Cow.

One of the oldest stories of the Arkansas traveler is that which represents him as making a horseback trip from New Orleans to Little Rock. Stopping at an Arkansas farm house, the good woman of the house prepared a toddy for him, and told him that it was from a new barrel of whisky that had just arrived. A week later he called at the same house and asked for a toddy. We haven't a drop, said the good woman. But when I was here only last week you had a whole barrel of whisky, said he. Yes, said she mournfully, but mister, you can't expect one barrel of whisky to last forever in a family of seven children that hasn't got nary cow.
