While misfortune and circumstances beyond con- for each 404 persons; 325,613 college trol removed many of the these, by far the larger number quit school for lack of real earnestness and determination to obtain an education.

For this quitting of school there are many reasons, but we shall discuss but one here, viz: Failure to appreciate the real value of education to the individual, the community and the nation. When the large part of our people come to feel deeply the need of education and to realize keenly its importance, then will we have better schools, more money spent for education, a larger general interest in educational topics, more of our boys and girls staying in school to the finish and in consequence a more moral, religious, healthy and efficient citizen-

Does an education pay? Values are measured ultimately in terms of human happiness, that is, a thing is valuable to any individual in proportion as it adds to what he considers his comfort and happiness. Laying aside this ethical turn, let us consider in common terms the three-fold value of education and ask does an education pay in dollars and cents, in power and in joy or happiness. Taking these in the order of least importance, does an education add to our earning power, and increase our chances for business success? In answering this as well the second of the values mentioned we shall quote largely from Allen H. Godby, A. M., Ph. D., president of Morrisville college. Morrisville, Mo.: "Statistics show that the average common school trained person earns $300 per year; the high school trained, $600; the average college trained, $1,200. These incomes represent 6 per cent on $5,000, $10,000, and $20,000 respectively. That is, your common chool boy represents a capital of $5,000. Spend $200 a year (or less, for the boys and girls of Holt county, with its splendid high schools can attend high school at considerably less $200 per year more than these expenditures if they did not attend school,) to put him through a first-class high school and you turn him into $10,000 capital. Send him through college and this $10,000 capital becomes $20,000. Figuring the school year at 36 weeks for four years, you have 1,000 days in high school at $5 per day and 1,000 days in the university or college at $10 per day. Again, comparing the men of means in America, the census, and labor bureau statistics show that the college man has 300 times the chance of the common school product to win wealth." To the youth who are anxious to quit school and take a business course, thinking a little "business course" is all that is necessary, hear the following astonishing declaration from the commercial agencies: "95 per cent of all business ventures end in failure, because of insufficient IN-TELLECTUAL training." Finish the high school and better still, the college before entering into business. or into special professional or business training.

These figures by Dr. Morris are for the individual. They apply with equal force to the material prosperity, and progress of the nation. This financial exhibit of educational value cannot be disputed. What a travesty on education. The meaning of education and the effort in behalf of schools, if an education adds nothing . to, the earning capacity of the inividual, if history did not show that the commercial supremacy of nations is proportional to the general and technical training of their youth, if education was not the bulwark of republics, and if free institutions did not rest on the intelligence of the masses. "You all through life for the lack of it." But this financial value of education is the lowest possible. "Not how to Cumming's Porter, Wednesday. gain riches, but how to use money when gained is the ultimate goal of ing, is here on a visit with former education as related to wealth. futable endeavor. He finds as to the education of these 11,000 distinguished The first essential of a good school Americans, that 24 are self-taught, people over 30 years of age. Of these, 1,627 famous men and women or one (or university) trained produced 7,709 notables or one for each 42 persons. Thus the high school boy has 22 times the chance of the common school boy; the college trained 10 times the chance of the high school boy, or more than 200 times the chance of the common school boy. Heretofore less than one person in 200 has graduated from college. Yet this less than one-half per cent of our nation has furnished over 50 per cent of our congressmen, 60 per cent of our senators, two-thirds (or 87 per cent) of our governors of states, 75 per cent of our cabinet officers, 90 per cent of our judges of the Supreme Court of the United States, and over three-fourths of all lawyers, ministers, physicians and educators who have attained real eminence in their professions, while the thousands of failures yearly, the thousands who abandon their profession for something else come from the crowd who take law, medicine, theology, or normal courses without a college education for the broad foundation. The end of education is character. The school opens proper channels of activity to the child, furnishes a growing environment, gives training in self-control, social responsibility, and consideration for rights of others, cultivates the virtues, inhibits vices, offers opportunity for getting knowledge, brings the pupil into contact with beautiful sentiments, in literature and art, with pure truth in science and mathematics, with noble characters, heroic deeds, and patriotic tenets in history and civics; but the greatest privilege is to know God in his creation and previdence and to learn reverence for Him and His laws and to respect things sacred. Education which fails in this highest purpose is unfinished. It does not bring

Finally education brings joy, both n attainment and possession. Our school days are our best days. It is the privilege of the pupil to mingle day by day with youth who are seeking knowledge and light and truth; to sit under the instruction of great men and women who are devoting their whole lives and vast powers to seeking and imparting truth. It unlocks the wisdom of the ages and places us in possession of the master thoughts of the poets and scientists helpfulness of the influence of her seven large tents, including the cook and historians; it gives a larger and richer meaning to wonders in earth and sea and sky; it strengthens us against temptations, furnishes food for reflection, comfort in disappointment, courage in trial, and inspiration for achievement.

We have already exceeded our pace, and have only touched on the value of education. Volumes have been written on the sublect. Parents of pupils think over these things. We shall be glad to talk with you about any phase of this matter of education. May these suggestions help you to conclude that as for me and my house we are going to school, and are going to begin September 5, 1910.

Mr. and Mrs. Wood left their native state (Kentucky) in 1850, coming to Oregon, Holt countp, Mo., one year later, settling on a farm 34 miles northwest of Oregon. She lived here until about eight years ago, when she, with Miss Rebecca, moved to Forest City, Mo., where she lived at the time she was summond home to her reward.

She was converted in early childhood and united with Cumberland Presberterian church, of which she was a faithful member. On moving to Missouri, she found no church of her choice, so she united with the M.
