Many of the pupils brought their mothers along to share with them the events of the first day's outing and everywhere could be seen picnic parties assembled under the many shade trees in all parts of the park.

The big tent to the rear of the dance pavilion, where the ninety-foot dirigible airship is on exhibition, was the mecca for the early arrivals, and Edward Boland, the operator, was kept busy answering the hundred and one questions.

View Wrecked Monoplane.

Owing to the accident of yesterday when Julius Schubert nearly lost his life in an effort to make a 200-foot flight in his Curtis-Burham monoplane this machine was not in shape to be exhibited to the scholars. They managed to satisfy their curiosity, however, by viewing the shapeless mass of broken beams that tell the story of yesterday's near-tragedy. Schubert was not on hand to regale the kiddles with his stories of sensational flights, for the daring young aeronaut is con-fined to his bed on account of the pain-ful bruises. Boland will attempt several flights later in the day in the dirigible and during the latter part of the week will make an effort to reach
