PITCHED WELL WEAFERI

Visiting Fielders Pulled Off Some Good Performances, But They Were Weak on First Base-Game Gave Series to the Celestials.

Witt, the light-haired shortstop, stag-gered with two blow-outs, in the ninth inning, the smooth-running machine of the Italian A. C., which was progressing down the final stretch against the Chinese team, with Joe Weaferi doing admirable work at the steering gear. The blow-outs brought the local machine to a standstill and allowed the Chinese to pass, giving a two-run lead, which the local ball team could not overcome;

Weaferi had not been scored on for four innings previous to the last inning, and when the celestials stepped to the plate for their farewell raps there seemed to be little chance for their batting out a victory. At this time the I. A. C. commanded the outcome with a 6 to 5 option. Sing Hung, the first man uprolled one down to Witt, who booted. Weaferi then hit A. Akana. With men on first and second, L. Tin beefed a clean bang to right field. Madini returned the ball in quick time to home, but Sing Hung breezed in a second ahead. score was now tied and the visitors had men lodged on the second and last cushions. Witt then handed the orientals the game, both basemen tallying when he Sing Hung, Hang Check. Hit by pitched
