If Charlie of Austria-Hungary goes after the throne again he will find it hanging high—beyond his reach, in fact.

Springfield, Ill., is very much so with the Gov. Len Small scandal on its hands.

France and Great Britain must remember that Germany is craftily watching any dislocation of friendly relationship between them.

Vermont editors are wondering if that snow bank in the Mount Mansfield cave-of-the-wind has survived the mid-summer ordeal of heat.

The activity in Corinth for rebuilding the property lost by fire some weeks ago is an encouraging sign of vitality in that region of Vermont.

The bombers of the U. S. navy and army seem to have gained some degree of proficiency in marksmanship as the result of having several former German warships to shoot at. Unfortunately, however, the supply of German warships has run out, as far as the United States is concerned. But while they lasted the ex-enemy ships served a good purpose.

Francisco Villa, once Mexico's bold bad man, is now reported to be deeply interested in religious affairs, being very devout and having contributed several thousand dollars toward church construction. As far as the United States is concerned, it is a welcome change. The pity is that Villa couldn't have got that way before 1916.

Tip to editors: Instead of following the usual custom of throwing the government propaganda in the wastebasket, save it for a week and send the bulky bundle on to Gen. Dawes, with all the stuff in the envelope just as it comes in.—Boston Globe.

A fairly good idea. But, better still, preserve the great mass and use it next year to heat your house with. Compressed into cartons, the paper will furnish quite a good deal of heat and remain burning for some time. That's one way to beat the high cost of living.

The late Seneca Haselton of Burlington was one of the state's most distinguished gentlemen, an honored member of the supreme court bench of the state for more than a dozen years and formerly United States minister to Venezuela. Judge Haselton gave particularly strong service on the supreme court bench when his health permitted his usual close application to the duties of the position, and his judicial opinions were generally looked upon as characterized by a marked degree of clarity. Prior to his assuming the judge's position he had served in various official capacities in the state and had proven himself a capable man in those lines too.

THE CUT IN FINISHED BARRE GRANITE

Granite manufacturers in the Barre district have fallen in line with the general movement throughout the country for readjustment of prices as the aftermath of the war; and their announced reduction of fifteen per cent in the price of manufactured goods is likely to go far toward inducing orders to come this way, once the prosperity of the country gets going again in sure fashion. Taken in conjunction with the A No. 1 quality of the manufactured articles, the lower price should prove to be a big inducement to buyers who want the best in material and the finest in workmanship.

FLYING OVER THE CROWDS.

Despite repeated warnings as to the danger, airplane operators continue to fly over gatherings of people. We read that airplanes hovered over the 90,000 people gathered to see the Carpenter-Dempsey prize fight; airplanes do their stunts over crowds gathered at football and baseball games; they sail over great crowds called together to witness the performances of the huge machines. The operators scout the theory as to the danger to the people. Yet every now and then we have illustrations of the real danger from falling airplanes. The most recent illustration was at Mountsville, Vt., where a machine which was just started into the air became unmanageable and plunged down into a collection of automobiles carrying many persons, no less than seven people being killed outright and 50 being injured. Sixteen automobiles were crushed by the huge machine. Is there no danger to the crowd gathered at a prize fight, football or baseball game because of the planes hovering overhead? Let no one say there is no danger. There is danger. Still the airplane operators continue to "clip the noses" of spectators, so to speak, as they give their demonstrations like that given at St. Johnsbury on the Fourth of July. These demonstrations are too often considered harmless until the tragedy comes, as in the case at Mountsville. There ought to be warning enough in that tragedy alone to prevent further unnecessary waste of lives.
