Vilas of Burlington walked out but didn't strike.

At the present outlook there will be plenty of political exhibits at the early sirs in Vermont this summer.

The hot weather is having something to do with the outbreaks of temper in the trouble zones. A good, cooling breeze would help things mightily.

Vermont editors, who are having a joint debate on Vermont's leading beauty spot, evidently have overlooked the girls' summer camps about the state.

The cemeteries are doing a rushing business as the result of the various labor troubles in the country at large. In fact, they are about the only thriving concern.

Swimmers are being made by the score in Barre as the result of the efforts of the Board of Trade to provide adequate facilities out of the meagre natural opportunities. The ability to swim is worth having.

Eugene N. Foss as a candidate for governor of Massachusetts in 1922 brings back far off memories. No doubt Foss has had his political day in Massachusetts and the voters will inform him none too gently.

Some people prefer to make John D. Rockefeller rich by small installments; others, like the motorizing couple arriving in Brattleboro on a 12,000-mile journey, prefer to do it at one fell swoop, so to speak.

The power of the mosquito was never fully realized until one reads that a Jersey skelter caused an automobile wreck the other day. However, he did not do it by boring a hole in the tire but by puncturing the driver's proboscis.

The escape from serious injury to Secretary Denby of the United States navy department when an airplane in which he was a passenger came down in a disabled condition during a flight in China is a matter of congratulation to the entire American people. That he was able to escape death must have been due to marked skill on the part of the operator of the machine inasmuch as the descent started from a height of 4,000 feet.

It was appended to a Moscow dispatch telling of the recuperation of Premier Lénine of the soviet government that "cheers greeted the announcement." Seems odd that it should have been deemed necessary to make such an appendage to a public and official statement. The imputation is that things are not going entirely right in the soviet regime and that Lénine is not pleasing to the Russian populace as a whole. Otherwise, why the necessity of telling the world that "cheers greeted the announcement?"

A good many people will regret to learn that because of the serious nervous condition of his wife as the result of the automobile accident at North Royalton in which Mrs. Page was nearly killed and two women companions were drowned, Russell S. Page of Hyde Park has found it necessary to withdraw his name as a candidate for senator from Lamoille county. Mr. Page had already given good service in the legislature and was in a position to increase his usefulness to the state at this time. It is hoped that the condition of Mrs. Page will be materially improved within a short time.

The action of the Vermont automobile department in equipping its inspectors with distinctive caps of green, bearing the inscription "Motor Inspector" and "Vermont" is a commendable course inasmuch as the wearing of the caps by the inspectors will enable the motoring public immediately to identify the inspectors and at the same time will protect the people from being the victims of imposition by highway men and others who have no right to interfere. Hereafter when you see the green cap with "Motor Inspector" on it you may believe you are in the hands of some duly authorized agent of the state automobile department and not the victim of a hold-up man.

THE FIRST DISTRICT SITUATION CLARIFIED.

The first district congressional situation is clarified suddenly, although not changed as to result, through the decision of Martin S. Vilas of Burlington to retire from the contest for the Republican nomination for the seat in the House now held by Frank L. Greene of St. Albans who, by the way, is a candidate for Senator Page's seat. It was almost a foregone conclusion that in a contest for the nomination Vilas would have come out second best to Frederick G. Fleetwood of Morrisville, a later entry into the list of candidates but recognized as a far more able man in most respects than the Burlington candidate. As long as the office went a-begging, so to speak, with men of mediocre calibre considered as possible candidates, Vilas was in the way of getting the nomination because he was considered an earnest, conscientious man and as such had the confidence of the voters of the district to the extent that the voters felt he would not run away with the state. But once a candidate of more rounded capacity for the position came into the race, and a man withal of considerable popularity, there really was little chance for Vilas to continue as a likely contender for the nomination. Fleetwood by no means has a corner on all the requisites of satisfactory office-holding, but he is a man who seems more nearly to measure up to the requirements of the congressional position. That the voters of the district realized just as soon as it became known that he had decided to become a candidate for the position. Therefore, in withdrawing from the contest because, as he says, he lacks the financial resources to get himself and his ideas before the people of the 113 towns in his district, Vilas without a doubt saved himself from defeat in the primaries. Not because he was looked upon as an entire impossibility as a congressman but because the voters had a more available man.

AGAIN ENDORSE AMERICAN PLAN

chanic to learn to operate our machines, so that the efficiency thus given will assist us in paying good wages.

"We have no fight with our men; I have the highest regard and respect for our employees but we know that our industry cannot be successful with such unreasonable conditions that are forced upon us by the union, therefore, we are fighting for our employees.

"The American plan, under which we are working, guarantees to every workman not only the right to work but also the right to work efficiently and have that efficiency put into his envelope.

"The journeymen are slow in returning to work but we are making new ones and in years to come they will develop into efficient workmen.

"Yes, some of our members have signed up with the union, but we were not surprised nor does it in any way deter us in our efforts to free the industry from unreasonable dictation by the labor agitator. I think that a big majority of our employees are not in sympathy with the strangling methods employed by union leaders, to force the restrictions on machinery and other unreasonable conditions. We want to pay our men according to their worth, which in our opinion is true Americanism. Any industry, in my judgment, that wastes through inefficiency will fail in the end.

"The American plan under which we are working at least gives us the opportunity to promote efficiency and save our industry. When it has been in effect two or three years the employees will acknowledge that our great effort has not been a selfish one but one that benefits both employer and employee."

Today

Yesterday is gone forever. To-morrow never comes. To-day is in my own hands.

If I squander To-day's earnings, I shall be adding to my wasted Yesterdays.

If I postpone saving To-day, I shall be increasing To-morrow's burden.

If I save a part of what I earn To-day, I shall be doing my best to atone for Yesterday's failures and to prepare for To-morrow's successes.

Therefore, I will endeavor to regulate my spending so that To-day shall leave me a little richer and abler than it found me.

A Young Man's Plan

A Young man came to the bank one day and told us he was going away from home to work. He wanted to know how to send his money back to us for his savings account.

We talked this matter over with him and he found it easy to do his banking by mail. When he gets his salary he promptly sends a good share of it to be deposited for him, and his account is GROWING rapidly.

When he comes home he will find more money to his credit than he sent us because his money has been earning interest for him.

No matter where you may go you will find it easy to do your banking with us by mail.

Come in and talk with us about this service before going away.
