WANT COLUMN A DOG'S QUEER FRIENDSHIP. The Animal Deserts His Master for One Whom He Hud Defended.

It is often said that a benefit conferred does more to promote friendship than a favor received. If you would cultivate a friendly feeling toward another, do him a kindness; if you would truth, at any rate, in this view of the case; and it applies even to dogs, as is shown strikingly by a story related in "Gold, Sport and Coffee-Planting in Mysore," by Mr. R. H. Elliot.

Mr. A. told me that he once wounded a tiger which afterward sprang on him, knocked him down and seized him by the hand and arm. With Mr. A. was a large dog, which at once attacked the tiger, and diverted him from Mr. A. After driving off the dog, the tiger returned to Mr. A., and commenced worrying him, but was again attacked by the dog.

The dog was driven off three or four times, but the tiger was all the while losing strength, and finally died. The dog was uninjured. Now comes the curious part of the story.

The dog, which was not affectionate, belonged to Mr. A.'s brother, and previously had taken no interest in anyone but his master. Now, however, he refused to go home with his master but stuck closely to the wounded man and when some carbolic acid, which caused pain, was applied by Mr. A.'s brother to the wound, the dog began to growl and show other signs of dis-

He would not allow anyone to come near Mr. A. except his own special servant, and lay under the bed with his nose sticking out, keeping close

When Mr. A. was carried to the doctor, some thirty-five miles away, the dog went, too, and on the doctor's applying earbolic acid and setting the bones, which caused the patient to cry out, the dog at once selzed the doctor by the leg. In about three months Mr. A. was quite cured. After that the dog lost all interest in him, and returned to his master; and if he met Mr. A. by chance merely acknowledged his recognition of him by the faintest wag

Ilving thus in an atmosphere of perpetual danger the grooms come to have a curious indifference to claws and fangs. Every one must admire a man who can bear pain and face danger. The client amount of the time and face danger. The lion tamer, William Philadelphia, Is such a man. Many times had I watched him in his "act" with Black Prince, and wondered whether the lion was really in carnest as he struck and roared with such apparent viciousness, or whether he had simply then looked as if his one desire was to kill the little man who tensed him tamer showed no sign of injury, but generally looked upon as a noble one brought his heavy whip down with a stinging cut over the lion's head, and went through the "act," holding a handkerchief to his face now and then, but smiling as before.

When he left the ring it was found that one of the lion's claws had laid his what he did. He showed that he fel cheek open almost from eye to lip; and yet the man was smiling.

"He meant to kill me," said Philadelphia, as his face was being bound up. "We will never show that Hon again," said the manager, much excited. wounded tamer. "I will make him work to-morrow as usual."

And he did, teasing and prodding him that day as never before, as if daring him to do his worst.

J. W. HOLLINGSWORTH,

BOYS AT HOME.

A Familiar Talk with Mothers About San

The question of Sunday evening, its allowances and restrictions of liberty to young people, is one for strictly in-dividual decision. But the customs of America, despite the ever-increasing leaven of foreign immigration, are in to do you a kindness. There is some union, of abstinence from the social observances of the week. In many families, known to the public for their avish entertainment of smart society. the Sunday habits of their forefathers are still observed with scruple, and the children are allowed to accept no invitations to pass the evening abroad.

Whether a boy should be encouraged to attend dancing school or class is a query custom among us has pretty generally decided to answer in the affirmative. These schools and classes are, however, most often held in the afternoon of Friday, and, for the older set among the juveniles, occur between eight and half-past ten or eleven on Saturday evenings. They are always chaperoned by the mothers of the girls present, and, properly conducted, are an excellent training for the lad in physical carriage and in ease of man-influence over her boy at home more clearly defined than in aiding his choice in reading. The boy born with a love of books is the possessor of a little kingdom of his own, secure and blessed. Nothing can dispossess him; he is never dissatisfied; no hunger nor thirst of spirit but can be appeased. To wander in this realm of his, handin-hand with her son, is a privilege his 25-inch blue mixed skirt flaumother should recognize and use to its utmost limit. If it be her ill-fortune to find in her child a lack of interest in reading for himself, a great deal may be done to inoculate the youngest with pursuit, by reading aloud to him. I have seen a heedless boy hushed, then captivated, by the heroic passages from Shakespeare and Scott (authors he had persistently avoided for him-self) thus administered, and afterward rather shame-facedly go back to pore over their pages at every opportunity of leisure.

To sum up in fewer words than should be given to a subject of this vital importance. I thoroughly believe that it is the mother who is answerable for her son's relation to his home. Her bias directs his; her relation to the household colors his; in after life he will inevitably order his own be longings in accordance with the simple teachings she has bestowed on him She is and should be the potent influ-ence that holds him in healthy and happy occupation under the paternal roof during the evenings of his youth to be remembered with reverent blessing in the evening of his age!-Mrs.
