Miss Taylor Weds
Gideon F. Alston

Littleton, Dec. 8.—A wedding characterized by its dignity and simplicity was solemnized at Saint Albans Episcopal church on Wednesday evening, December 4th, at 6:30 o'clock when Miss Allene Hargrave Taylor became the bride of Gideon F. Alston. The Rev. E. N. DeFoe Wagner, performed the service, using the impressive ring ceremony.

The church was decorated with evergreens, ivy and ferns. Large white chrysanthemums in white floor baskets were placed in the chancel. The altar vases were filled with madonna lilies and many cathedral tapers were used in high and low floor standards of white and in the seven-branched candelabra in the sanctuary, throwing a soft glow over the scene, which was one of unusual beauty and charm.

Before the ceremony a program of nuptial music was presented by Mrs. W. M. Coffin, organist of Henderson, who wore a gown of blue velvet with gold trimmings and a shoulder corsage of pink roses and valley lilies, tied with gold ribbon.

Mrs. W. Louis Taylor, soloist, of Townsville, wearing a blue lace evening gown with accessories to match and a shoulder corsage of Joana Hill roses, with silver tie, sang "O Perfect Love."

Mrs. Coffin used the Bridal Chorus from Lohengrin as processional, and Mendelssohn's Wedding March as recessional.

First to enter and take their places were the ushers, R. B. Taylor of Townsville and Julian P. Johnston of Attleton. Next the groomsmen, Willis Perkins Taylor, brother of the bride. Each wore as a boutonniere, a single spray of valley lilies.

Then came the ribbon girls, little Misses Allene E. Taylor of Townsville and Hattie Taylor Daniel of Littleton, cousins of the bride, wearing maid drop shoulder dresses of yellow affeta, made long, with poke bonnets of same material and yellow "trap" slippers to match. Their flower girls carried the bride's ribbon, in one hand they carried the white ribbon on which formed the aisle preceding the bride party and in the other hand they carried a lighted taper in a beaten brass candle holder.

Miss Lulu Ellen Morecock of Littleton, only bridesmaid, entered alone. She was gowning in a yellow tulle dress with straight lines and train, cut low in the back. Her hat was of the same material with gloves to match and silver slippers. She carried an arm bouquet of large yellow chrysanthemums, mixed with pink snapdragons, lavender peas and fern, tied with lavender shaded tulle.

Miss Edwina Osborn Taylor, maid of honor, and only sister of the bride, wore yellow net over yellow satin, cut on long lines, with floor length skirt with even hem line, a hat of same material and yellow satin slippers. Her flowers were an arm bouquet of large yellow chrysanthemums and lavender peas, tied with lavender tulle.

The groom has as his best man, his brother, W. G. Alston.

The bride entered with her father, Willis Perkins Taylor, by whom she was given in marriage. The wedding was the 56 anniversary of the bride's maternal grandmother and grandfather and the 21st anniversary of her parents.

The bride was lovely in her mother's wedding gown of ivory satin, trimmed in hand made lace, pearls and silver, made with square train over which fell the flowing veil of tulle caught with orange blossoms. This was particularly becoming and was fastened to a crown of tulle with rows of pearls and orange blossoms. She wore long white kid gloves and silver slippers, and carried an exquisite showered bouquet of brides roses and valley lilies.

The wedding ring, a gift from the bride's grandmother, for whom she was named, had been refashioned into an orange blossom design, and she wore an old gold antique bracelet, a family heirloom.

The brides mother wore a gown of rose crepe, made on simple lines. Mrs. W. R. Wiggins, aunt of the groom, wore black crepe with white trim. Their flowers were shoulder corsages of Joana Hill roses tied with gold ribbon.

The bride is the attractive daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Willis Perkins Taylor of near Littleton.

The groom is the son of the R. L. and Mrs. Willie Daniel Alston of Littleton and a popular young salesman of Alston Grocery Co. These young people are members of very old and prominent families on both sides and are widely connected throughout the state. Immediately after the ceremony the young couple left for a short trip after which they will be at home with the bride's parents.

The bride wore for traveling, a suit of tree bark material, in rust, trimmed in brown fur, and with brown accessories.

Some of the out-of-town guests were Mr. and Mrs. Jack Johnston of Richmond, Mr. and Mrs. C. S. Taylor, Miss Allene Taylor, R. B. Taylor, Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Taylor, Mr. and Mrs. E. D. Taylor, Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Thomas, Mrs. Henry Taylor, Mrs. W. B. Tarry, Mrs. B. E. Fox, Mrs. S. R. Adams and John Adams of Townsville, Miss Mary Hall of Oxford, Mr. and Mrs. Jasper Hicks, Mr. and Mrs. John Ellis of Henderson, Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Baskerville, Mrs. Edmund White, Miss Lucy Burwell, Mrs. Wagner, and daughters, Miss Lucy Baskerville, Mrs. Petaway Burwell and Miss Alma Graham of Warrenton, Mr. and Mrs. James Burton of Raleigh, Mrs. Fannie Kingsland Burton and daughters, Willie and Kingsland of Charlotte, Miss Frances Burton of New York City, Mr. and Mrs. N. S. Barnes, Mr. and Mrs. Roscoe Hamill, Mr. and Mrs. James Tilgham of Weldon, Mr. and Mrs. C. V. Pickett of Wavelly, Va., Mr. and Mrs. Harry Kenyon of Macon and Miss Mary Speers of Washington, D. C., and Mrs. A. J. Watkins.

80 Children Are
Willets' Guests

Some 80 children who are members of the Sunday school held each Sunday by the Salvation Army here were guests of Adjutant and Mrs. Joseph Willett at a social affair at the hall in South Henderson last night. Those attending had not missed a Sunday for the past six weeks.

Games were played for a while, after which refreshments were served. The drinks distributed were furnished through the courtesy of the Lane Bottling Company. The sociable meeting ended at an attendance contest between the Reds and Blues, and the latter won.

Chances Are Slim
For Unemployment
Insurance In N. C.

Carolina. It is not expected to even prepare an old age pensions bill, since it seems to be generally agreed that old age pensions will have to follow after whatever unemployment insurance legislation may be obtained.

Those who have been following the trend of thought in North Carolina with regard to unemployment insurance, especially during the past few months, are not inclined to be very optimistic about the chances for securing an unemployment insurance law from the forthcoming legislature.

However, this is especially true since President Roosevelt has indicated he is opposed to the levying of any Federal tax with which to assist the state to set up unemployment insurance funds. For if the President is opposed to levying a Federal tax with which to help set up unemployment insurance then the states are expected to take their cue from the national government and to oppose the levying of any state taxes to help set up these funds, according to most of the thought on this subject here.

This means, then, that if any unemployment insurance law is enacted that the insurance fund will either have to be provided by the employers, by the employees or by the employees jointly, probably the two together.

But the employers are going to object to contributing the entire insurance fund from their wages, or even a part of it, on the grounds that the employers should pay it, just as they pay all other insurance, such as the insurance on their buildings and machinery, and that it should be charged off to maintenance and depreciation.

Ion. This is the contention of organized labor and of most of those friendly towards organized labor. It is understood that at least two members of the commission meeting here today are already definitely opposed to any bill or law which requires the employers to contribute anything towards the insurance fund.

The employers, on the other hand, contend that since the employees are the ones that will benefit from any unemployment insurance, and not the employers, that they should be willing to set up the insurance fund by means of weekly deductions from their wages. They do not think that they, the employers, should contribute anything, or at most only a very small proportion of the total. They are also expected to contend that they are already loaded down with all the insurance they can carry—fire insurance, depreciation insurance, workmen's compensation insurance and all the various other kinds they have to carry. So there is no doubt that the employers will bitterly oppose any unemployment insurance bill that will place any material part of the expense of providing it on the employers.

From the hearings held so far and from various other indications, it seems likely that the commission meeting here today will propose a bill that will require both the employers and employees to contribute an equal amount to the insurance fund, probably two per cent of their weekly wages by the employees and two per cent of their weekly payrolls by the employers. But unless the State should appropriate between $1,000,000 and $2,000,000 at the outset to set up this fund to make it immediately operative, it would be about two years before the law could go into effect, since that much time would be required to get a fund enough to be workable. Most observers here agree there is very little chance for the State to contribute anything.

It is also expected that the proposed bill, when drawn, will limit the insurance period to not more than 26 weeks, possibly to only 16 weeks and the maximum payments to only five per cent of the wages previously received, but not to exceed $15 a week. For the purpose of unemployment insurance is merely to provide workers with an income for a few weeks between the time they are thrown out of work until they can get new jobs and not to take care of them indefinitely.

Waynick expects Mild Legislature

and energy. Already a different atmosphere is noticeable throughout the offices of the commission and all divisions are going about their work with greater interest and energy. Within a week, Waynick is expected to have the throttle wide open and to have the highway machinery running at top speed. Those who have been watching the start he has made here this week agree.

"I feel very small and very ineffective in this job, which I really as yet know almost nothing about," Chairman Waynick still maintains. "There are so many different divisions and activities that it is going to take me some time to become familiar with what my job really is. The only thing I can say is that I realize fully the size of the job and the responsibility resting upon me, and that I am going to try to do my very best."

Waynick also realizes that the highway department and the highway fund are going to be subjected to one of the most concerted attacks during this coming General Assembly they have ever faced and that he is facing a tremendous task as chief defender and spokesman for the highway commission during the legislative session.

"The fact that there will be 170 different men, with 170 different ideas and 170 meat axes in the legislature, out to chop off the highway fund or some other fund for this or that, is going to make our position anything but comfortable for a while," Waynick said. "Yet I have a great deal of faith in the sound judgment and ability of the members of the legislature so am not greatly worried after all."

Bowie For Sixty-

session of the General Assembly, Judge Bowie, when asked what he proposed to do is reported to have said:

"The first thing I am going to try to do is to see that the legislature adjourns at the end of 60 days. It can be done if it wants to and if it will follow the leadership of the older members."

It is generally conceded by observers here who followed the course of the 1933 General Assembly that Judge Bowie, more than any one man or group of men, was responsible for the 1933 session lasting almost five months. For it was Bowie and the "Bloc" he organized to oppose the sales tax, that held out for weeks after it was apparent to almost everyone else that it would be impossible to get enough money for the state to operate the schools and other state departments unless a sales tax should be adopted. The 1933 session could have ended at any time Bowie would have released those who had pledged themselves to stick with him in opposition to the sales tax.

PATTERN 9149

With bridge parties, teas and lunch on the coming fast and furiously upon us, now that the winter season is really here, what woman's wardrobe hasn't a weak spot which could be well filled by an afternoon frock similar to the one illustrated? Youth fully styled, and just as suitable for the young matron as for the business or college girl, this dress points with pride to such nice details as its portly molded bodice and paneled skirt—its raglan sleeves which end in importantly tabbed and buttoned cuffs—and its very chic scarf collar which slips through buttoned-down tabs to tie into a soft bow for a bit of flattery about the neck!

Pattern 9149 may be ordered only in sizes 14, 16, 18, 20, 22, 24, 26, 28, 30 and 32. Size 16 requires 3 1/2 yards 39 inch fabric and 3-8 yard contrast lining.

Send FIFTEEN CENTS for one or stamps (coins preferred) for EACH MARIAN MARTIN pattern. Be sure to write plainly your NAME, ADDRESS, the STYLE NUMBER and SIZE OF each pattern.

Send your order to Henderson Daily Dispatch, Pattern Department, 232 W. 18th St., New York, N. Y.

Floods in Neuse
Menacing Village
East of Kinston

Kinston, Dec. 8 (AP)—Flood waters from the swollen Neuse river, expected to leave its banks momentarily today menaced the low-lying village of Happersville, which lies across the stream from here.

The rampant river, gorged by heavy rains further up-State, has flooded hundreds of acres of lowlands in this section, and has gone over one of the main arteries of travel leading south from here. However, traffic has not been halted.

It was said that any additional rise in the river would completely isolate Happersville, which on a few occasions in the past has been as much as 12 feet of water in its main street. Old river men, however, predicted the stream would begin to recede before many hours.

CONTRACT

WHAT SOUTH SHOULD DO
YESTERDAY we saw what happened in a duplicate game among players of moderate skill, with South playing a 4-Spade contract. The following leads gave the declarer 4-odd: The K of hearts, the fourth-best diamond and the fourth-best club. Two players defeated the contract a trick, by leading the J of clubs, which is the best blind opening. Let's see what a better player sitting South should do.

♠ A Q 9 8
♥ 10 9 8
♦ K 6 3

♥ K 2
♦ 8 4 2
♣ J 10 9 4

♠ K J 10 6 5
♥ A J 6
♦ A J
♣ A 5 2

The J, Q, K and Ace of clubs are on the first trick. Take the K and Ace of trumps. Win with declarer's Ace and dummy's K of diamonds. West's Q will cover the J. Trump dummy's last diamond. Put West in with his 9 of clubs. If West leads his last diamond dummy will ruff and declarer will discard his last club. West either must take his good club or lead a heart.

If West leads a low heart dummy's 9 will win, and West will be given his club trick, after which he must lead a high heart or give the declarer 5-odd, as dummy will ruff either a club or a diamond lead while declarer will let go his last low heart. If West leads a high heart before taking his second good club, declarer's Ace will win, and West will be given his club and good heart. West may as well take his last good club when he is given the first trick for his side. After which he must lead a heart. Declarer will win 2 heart tricks and West will win a single heart trick. South should have gone game, even with the J of clubs opening, but that lead stood the best chance of all to defeat the contract.

The fourth best club lead should have given South 5-odd. He must win 2 club tricks. Having pulled trumps he must give West a single club trick. If West leads diamonds South will obtain 3 tricks in that suit and discard one of his hearts, finally having to give West his second defensive trick with a heart. If West leads a heart, when in with his club trick, South will win 3 heart tricks and West will win one, then giving South 5-odd. Again we see that South having a fourth best lead of clubs did not play his cards to best advantage. The fourth best club is the worst of all opening leads, as the J should be led.

Either an opening lead of the fourth best diamond or the K of hearts is superior to a fourth best club, but not as good as the J of clubs. An opening spade lead will not defeat perfect play by South.
