

Average On Tobacco For Day $19.15

Monday's Offerings 271,684 Pounds for Total of $52,045.24 in Money

A price average of $19.15 per hundred pounds was made on the Henderson tobacco market in the sale of 271,684 pounds Monday for the highest figure for any day this season, according to official figures made public today by J. R. McDuffie, sales supervisor of the market. Total money payments amounted to $52,045.24.

It was not a normal Monday sale in volume of offerings, but it was believed that farmers were holding their tobacco off the floors until the price situation becomes more clarified as the result of the visitation of a committee to Washington tomorrow for conferences with government AAA officials.

W. C. STAINBACK IS GIVEN PROMOTION

Made Assistant Postmaster To Fill Vacancy In Local Office

W. C. Stainback, who has been a clerk in the Henderson post office for a number of years, has been advanced to the office of assistant postmaster, according to announcement today by Postmaster J. R. Teague, who said he had just been advised by the Post Office Department in Washington of the approval of the advancement.

Mr. Stainback has been performing the duties of the office for several weeks, but the actual appointment and approval has just been received from the department. He succeeds W. F. Howland, who was assistant postmaster for 20 years or more, and who recently was given a clerkship, thereby shortening the period of time necessary to elapse before he can retire on pension from the service.

The post office here, as well as those over the remainder of the country, will go on a 40-hour week basis starting next Tuesday, October 1, under an act of Congress, and it is expected that a regular full-time new clerk will have to be added to take up that difference and also to absorb a great deal of overtime that has been made more or less regularly in recent months. Moreover, the business volume of the office is increasing.

Two inspectors were here today going into further detail as to the exact needs of the office from the standpoint of labor and service. Naming of an additional clerk in the office will likely hinge largely upon any recommendations they may make.

HUNTING LICENSES ARE NOW ON SALE

J. Harry Edwards, game warden for Vance county, stated today that hunting licenses are on sale at six different locations in Vance county, and hunters may obtain the certificates at any of these places. They are: O'Neil and Watkins hardware stores and Harry Anderson jeweler in Henderson; Graham Tarry's store in Townsville; J. A. Smith store in Kittrell, and O. W. Weldon's store at Amos' mill. County licenses are $1.10. Statewide licenses $2.10, and non-resident licenses $3.10. A combination hunting and fishing license, Statewide in coverage, may be had for $3.10.

the border counties next to the Tennessee line, but are going to help us if they can. But in the meantime we are going ahead with our own surveys in these counties with the assistance of the FERA, since we want to get them completed as soon as possible. For we cannot tell what the needs are in the State as a whole until we get these surveys finished in these remaining counties.

In making these surveys, the head of every family living along every road in the county which does not have electricity, will be asked if he will install electricity if it is made available, also the approximate number of appliances he will use, so the amount of current he will probably consume can be computed. If enough families agree to use enough electricity to warrant the construction of these lines, steps will be taken to get the lines built, Bagnely explained.

Bagnely also attended the annual picnic of the Farmers' Federation, near Swananoa, and talked with numerous farmers about electrification. He found a majority of the farmers very eager to have electricity on their farms, he said.

LIQUOR STORE HAS NEW HIGH VOLUME

$6,117.65 Last Week, First of Tobacco Market, Largest So Far

Those who have argued the pros and cons of the benefits of a county liquor store in Henderson as a tobacco market asset had new facts before them today to inject into the discussions.

The tobacco market opened Tuesday of last week, September 17, and on that date the liquor store had one of the two or three biggest day's volumes since it was opened Monday, July 15. Moreover, the volume of business for the week last week, taken as a whole, was the largest by far of any week in the history of the store.

For the entire week the liquor store did a total business of $6,117.65. On Tuesday, the opening day of the tobacco market, the volume of business was $1,329.65. Wednesday's sales amounted to $927.85, while on Thursday the figure was $915.75. On Friday the store sold $905.05 worth of liquor, and on Saturday it had another big day with a volume of $1,259.20. On Monday of last week, the day before the tobacco market opened, the volume was $781.15, that being easily the smallest day of the week.

At the rate of sales last week, the liquor store would gross close to $25,000 per month, or about $300,000 per year.

British Propaganda Flooding America?

ferreted it out by diligent efforts.

The British Tory government, at the same time, has spread on world records, as public as possible, the necessity for the British to preserve the peace of the world—through preventing, by force if necessary, the entry of Mussolini's forces into Ethiopia.

The picture of Ethiopia as a down-trodden nation, suddenly to become the vassal of a ruthless new Caesar, painted by the British (and probably entirely true) is highly emotional. It is calculated to sweep France and the United States behind Great Britain—and to cause the British dependencies to look upon Britain as a protector.

But the fact of the matter is—military men and international bankers will tell you—Ethiopia doesn't count. No European nation gives two snaps of its fingers for the inhabitants of Haile Selassie's country.

It is the British empire, the British "life line" that is at stake. And the Americans are being made to understand that if the British empire is endangered, the United States is endangered.

WORLD POLITICS

Americans remain gullible as to world politics. Nations do not fight to preserve the downtrodden. They fight for spoils. They fight to preserve what they have.

Italy threatens not only British domination in Africa, but it goes even further. It seems to be arousing the oriental races against Britain.

The British, in trying to preserve their world empire intact, really in the end may be put into the position of trying to save the democratic nations and calling for help. For the dictatorships—having become dictatorships because their countries were denied world spoils—may unite against the British, the nation with the largest acreage of "raw products" land.

Some observers are saying, the road to peace and the preservation of democracy is to throw open, on a cooperative basis, all "raw products" colonies to the nations that need raw products to exist.

E. E. HIGHT DIES AT HICKORY HOME

E. E. Hight, 76, Vance county man of many years ago, died last Saturday at his home in Hickory and was buried there Sunday afternoon. Fred B. Hight, a nephew, of Henderson, attended the funeral. The deceased was in the jewelry business in Hickory for many years until he lost his eyesight and had to give up his activities. He had been in retirement for a long while. He left Henderson 30-odd years ago. The deceased is survived by two sons, who are in the drug business in Detroit, a daughter and his widow, both of Hickory.
